CHARGES U. S. PLANS WAR WITH MEXICO FOR OIL MEN

Congressman Huddleston Says Desire Is Inspired by Corporations Seeking Great Profits.

Alabaman Declares Administration Is Deliberately Driving Toward Strife—Assails "Red Scars."

By the Associated Press.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Jan. 8.—Orders to organize a "stand by" battalion to proceed anywhere at a moment's notice were received today by Lieut. Col. William H. Pritchett, acting commander of the marine base here.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Jan. 8.—Capt. Murl Corbett, commanding the United States Marine Corps Contingent guarding mail trains and trucks in the Seattle district, tonight was instructed to dispatch one fourth of his men to San Diego immediately, there to await fuarther orders.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8. — The Coolidge administration has decided upon war with Mexico, and is entering upon a course of action intended to make war inevitable, it was charged on the floor of Congress this afternoon by Representative George Huddleston (Dem.) of Alabama. He said the desire for war was inspired by certain large American corporations, which expect to reap great profits from the conquest of Mexico.

While Huddleston's flaming accusations were causing a sensation in the House, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem.) of Montana, and Senator Thomas Heflin (Dem.) of Alabama, were uttering similar charges on the floor of the Senate, concerning the administration's conduct towards Mexico and Nicaragua.

"If we are going to use the Marines to protect the oil properties of E. L. Doheny and Harry Sinclair, we will have to set up protectorates all over the world," said Wheeler. "We will have to build a navy 10 times as large as we present one."

Accusations Go Unanswered.

Huddleston's speech was seriously received in the House. He is a congressman of outstanding ability and courage and a debater of uncommon vigor. When he had finished, nobody attempted to reply to his accusation against the administration; on the contrary, the members encouraged him as he went along.

"I am not going to sit on this floor," he began solemnly, "and see my country be jockeyed into a situation which must proceed to war. I take the responsibility of speaking for my constituents to protest against war, and to protest against the course which this administration is following to make war unavoidable.

"I believe that 99 per cent of the people in the United States are opposed to a war with Mexico. If there were left to a vote, 99 per cent would express their opposition. Can not 99 per cent be hippodromed into war.

"There are great American business interests that want us to go to war with Mexico for the protection of their interests there, and the profit they may be able to drive out of the conquest of that country. They look for that profit in oil, mining and land holdings, and they care nothing for our duty toward a weak neighbor, and nothing for the principles of international honor and rectitude. They are interested purely in dividends."

Controlled by Selfish Interests.

At this point Huddleston was interrupted by Representative Moore (Rep.) of Virginia, who asked: "Does the gentleman think that the policy with reference to Nicaragua, the Philippines and other places is also controlled by some selfish business interests?"

"Yes," replied Huddleston, "I am certain of it."

The administration is driving deliberately and consciously toward a war with Mexico. Things have happened which have not been accidental or casual. The landing of marines to Nicaragua was not accidental. The giving out of that contemptible statement that Mexico is a bolshevik govern-

Nervous Fear of "Communism" Accounts for Many of State Department's Strange Actions

Progress of Diplomatic Ague Traced From Case of Anna Lerner to Olds' Effort to Accuse Calles of Bolshevism, Anonymously.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—What is the matter with the American State Department?

That something is the matter must be evident to anybody who has watched the preposterous exclusion of foreigners suspected of "communism" or who, in more recent weeks, has observed the tortuous course of the department in dealing with the trouble in Nicaragua.

It seems to the writer, after a considerable experience in Washington, that two things, mainly, are the matter. The first is the nervous fear that shakes Mr. Kellogg and his aides at the very mention of the word "communism" or "bolshevism."

This is the same disease that caused A. Mitchell Palmer, when Attorney-General of the United States, to order the lawless "red raids" of a few years ago. Inoculated by propaganda, a good many Americans at one time were afflicted with the same malady. Happily for the nation's peace of mind, most of them have recovered, but the disease still persists, in a peculiarly virulent form, in the State Department, from Mr. Kellogg down. Mr. Hughes had it, and Mr. Kellogg has it just as badly, or worse.

The other thing that is the matter with the State Department is Mr. Kellogg himself. We shall come to that presently. Let us first examine, briefly, some of the results of the department's ague.

Tracing Course of Ague.

There was, first, the case of Anna Lerner. This happened under Hughes, but it could happen just as readily today. Similar cases may, indeed, be in the making behind the State Department's veil of secrecy. Anna Lerner's plight came to public notice through the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Anna, a 20-year-old American girl, and in all but the narrowest technical sense an American citizen, was refused a visa on her passport when she started back to her home in Philadelphia from a visit in Russia. It made no difference to the department that her husband had been an American soldier, nor that he was fully able to support her, nor that Anna was ill, nor that she had never been convicted of any crime. A small bureaucrat in the department named J. Preston Doughten, decreed that Anna was a person of dangerous communistic tendencies who, if readmitted to the United States, might plant the red flag on the White House.

Hughes was appealed to. He upheld Doughten. He declined to make public the charges against Anna. The most that anybody could get out of the department was that she was a dangerous person. When Senator Norris, in the course of a long fight to get Anna back to her husband, demanded some concrete facts to warrant the exclusion, the department resorted, meanly, to an effort to besmirch her reputation. Norris replied to this attack with testimonials from Anna's husband and her former employers. There was nothing against her, and even if there had been, as Norris pointed out, the State Department was guilty of the rankest form of tyranny in excluding her.

Anna Lerner's Belated Victory.

The case dragged on. Finally, some 18 months after the decree of banishment, Anna was restored to her family through an amendment to the immigration act giving privileged status to the wives of American citizens. If it had not been for the passage of that amendment she would probably still be in Russia, or dead of illness.

This "dangerous communist," banished by the State Department as a person likely to undermine the foundations of the United States Government, has been back in this country for nearly two years, and the republic still lives.

The cases of Count and Countess Karolyi are fresh in mind. Count Karolyi, who was the first President of the Hungarian republic, was allowed to come in under a "gag rule" which required that he say nothing about politics. He talked all he pleased in Canada and his remarks were reported extensively both in that country and the United States. They were singularly innocuous.

The Karolyis and Sakalatvala.

Countess Karolyi was in this country once, but was forbidden by Mr. Kellogg to come back for a second visit. Like her husband, she was accused of holding communistic beliefs. A member of the British Parliament, Saklatvala, was pre-

JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS SAYS MEXICAN LEADERS WANT A WAR WITH U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.

FORMER UNITED STATES SENATOR JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS returned to Chicago today declaring that Mexico wants war with the United States. As a member of counsel for American claims against Mexico, Lewis was in Mexico and El Paso, Tex., and he learned there, he said, that the leaders of the Mexican Government look on the present situation between the United States and Mexico as the one which they have been seeking.

Mexico, Lewis said, is merely awaiting some act of aggression on the part of the United States. The Mexicans feel that never before has the chance of breaking down the power of the Monroe Doctrine been so good as it is now.

"Their war leaders say that all the nations of the world are hostile to the United States and would supply Mexico with money and arms, particularly Japan and China," Lewis declared. "They say our own people would not support a war on Mexico. The Mexicans know that in the end they would be defeated, but they argue that the rest of the world would not let us push a war to the finish, and that in any peace adjustment the world Powers would insist on supervising the settlement. With such support, they feel they could wring from us many concessions.

"They believe that all Central and South America would join them in getting rid of the Monroe Doctrine, which now gives the United States supervision over them."

Lewis will report his views to President Coolidge and Secretary of State Kellogg. He left tonight for Washington.

CALLES WILL LET HAGUE PASS ON OIL LAW IF NECESSARY

Will Submit Issue if Withdrawal of Recognition by U. S. Is Alternative, He Tells American Visitors.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 8.—Mexico would be willing to submit its new petroleum and land law differences with the United States to The Hague tribunal, although that would endanger Mexican sovereignty, if such action were the only way of avoiding a still greater menace to Mexico. President Calles made this declaration today to a group of visitors from the United States, headed by Hubert C. Herring.

The Americans, who came here to get first-hand information on Mexican-American relations comprise writers, ministers of various religions, professional and business men and social workers.

Calles said that withdrawal by the United States of recognition of his Government would certainly cause an immediate revolution and would be interpreted by the enemies of the Calles Government as an encouragement of such revolution. Revolutionary movements were under way at present, he pointed out, but his Government was suppressing them.

Says Issue Is Fictitious.

He contended that the issue between the United States and Mexico regarding the oil and land laws was false and fictitious because the American oil interests were not deprived of any right, but, on the contrary, their subsoil rights acquired before 1917 could be extended for 50 years by reason of the new concessions, and the law provided that at the end of 50 years they might be extended for another 30 years. Thus, all the rights of which the oil men complained they were deprived were, in fact, preserved for 80 years.

"Is not the period of 80 years long enough to get out all the oil?" Calles asked. "Has anybody ever heard of an oil well lasting 80 years?"

Calles argued that there were no real differences between the people of Mexico and the people of the United States, the only differences being between the people of Mexico and a small group of American capitalists, who were

YOUTH ADMITS FIFTEEN HOLDUPS IN THREE WEEKS

Barber Companion of Boy Shot in Auto Theft Also Admits Stealing Six or Seven Machines.

HAS TWO REVOLVERS WHEN ARRESTED

Paul Lewanski Tells Detectives He Planned to Rob Grocer Monday Before Banking Hours.

The young man in a red sweater who has held up 15 neighborhood stores and filling stations with a companion in the last three weeks, was caught by detectives of Angelica Street Police District yesterday. He is Paul Lewandoski, 20 years old, of 5825 Theodore avenue, a barber by trade, owner of a secondhand store and a former inmate of Boonville Reformatory and the St. Louis Training School for Boys.

He was arrested on suspicion, after his pal, Cecil Hood, 17, of 5072 Davison avenue, was shot in both legs in fleeing from detectives who accused him of driving a stolen automobile early yesterday, and a confession was easily obtained in which Lewandoski involved Hood as his accomplice in most of the 15 robberes and six or seven automobile thefts he recalled. Hood, at the City Hospital, denied he was a robber.

Detectives Find Him Armed.

When detectives under Detective-Sergeant Finan called at Lewandoski's secondhand store at 2125 Cass avenue, they found him sitting in his coupe at the door, with two pistols at his side. He readily admitted, with an air of boasting, that he had planned to "stick up" a grocery at Garrison avenue and Hebert street early Monday morning before the owner had a chance to get to the bank.

He produced a red sweater coat which he said was the one he had used in robberies, and during the afternoon accompanied the detectives on a tour of places he had robbed, being identified by most of the victims. Following his directions, police recovered a typewriter he had stolen, with $90, in the grocery at 3300 North Thirteenth street, and sold for a few dollars, and a watch, taken from Dr. Fred L. Beck, of University City, which he had pawned.

Threw Phonograph in River.

At the butcher shop of Fred Werberg, Meramec street and Virginia avenue, he recalled taht he had torn the telephone from the wall, and at the music store of Mrs. Emily Hines, 5422 Lillian avenue, he took a portable phonograph which he said he later threw from the Free Bridge because it had a serial number. His loot, he estimated, ran up to about $1000, the largest haul being $361 in cash at the grocery of Mrs. Anna Lyons, 3101 North Market street.

Lewandoski boasted he could start any machine of a certain make by a trick of springing the gears. "Hood and I generally took a good stiff drink before going on a job," he declared. "Then we stole an automobile, pulled the job, ditched the machine and our guns, and went around the homebrew joints until the money was gone."

Hood was shot by Detectives Arthur J. Haverporth and Alex Wozniak, who reported seeing him alight at Ninth and North Market streets from an automobile which they recognized as stolen. They arrested him and had him drive the coupe toward North Market Street Station, but nearing the station he stopped the car quickly and jumped out. Wozniak fired four shots and Haverporth two as the boy fled across a lot.

Hood Boy Denied Charges.

Hood, who was too ill to be viewed by robbery victims, entered a complete denial of all charges, admitting only that he was acquainted with Lewandoski. He has been arrested six times since 1924 for questioning, and is known to police as an intimate associate of Lewandoski. The latter was sentenced to two years at Bellefontaine Farms in March, 1920, was paroled a year later, and subsequently sent to Boonville for an automobile theft. He escaped early in 1925 and was rearrested after a month, return to the institution and paroled three months ago.

Retrial of Goodyear Suits Denied.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 8.—Gov. Ben S. Paulen of Kansas will be inaugurated for a second term Monday at the bedside of his aged father, Jacob W. Paulen, who is near death at his home in Fredonia, Kan. It will be the first inaugural away from the capital in the history of the State. At Fredonia today the Governor said he had not decided who would administer the oath of office.

Plans for an inaugural ceremony in Topeka will go ahead at the request of Paulen, who takes the view that the function is in honor of all State officers.

CHARGES GUNMEN ARE HIRED TO INTIMIDATE STOCKHOLDERS

Complainants in Chicago Cab Co. Get Court Writ for Army Officer to Hold Election.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—As a result of charges that officers of the Checker Cab Co. have hired 50 gunmen at $15 a day each to intimidate stockholders, Brigadier-General John V. Clinning has been appointed referee to supervise the annual meeting and election of directors. Superior Judge Sullivan granted an injunction on the application of stockholders to assure an orderly election.

The election of the company, a $2,000,000 corporation, has been turbulent in the past. The complaining stockholders charge that for two years gunmen have been employed and paid from the funds of the company to intimidate in an effort to keep certain officers in office.

At the election Tuesday, Clinnin will be reinforced by 10 Deputy Sheriffs.

MANY KILLED AND INJURED IN TRAIN CRASH NEAR MOSCOW

Crowded Train and Northern Express Crash; Most of the Injured Workers.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Jan. 8.—Many persons were killed and scores injured in a railway collision 60 miles from Moscow last night.

A crowded Moscow train and a Northern express of five cars were smashed. The crews of both locomotives were killed outright and hospitals are crowded with those injured, most of them workers.

HOUSTON, Tex., Jan. 8.—Jack Carothers, Houston business man, hopes to revive archery. He announced a bear hunt with bow and arrow in East Texas, less than a day's ride in an automobile from Houston.

A day later he returned with a 400-pound black bear which he had killed. The first arrow from his bow, which has a 74-pound pull, wounded the ainmal, the second found a vital spot.

94,870 ARRESTS IN CAPITAL

Drinking and Traffic Violations Lead in District of Columbia.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Arrests in the District of Columbia during 1926 totaled 94,870, breaking all records, it was disclosed in Police Department reports published today.

The arrests exceeded by 16,853 those of 1925, the previous high year. Increased numbers of arrests were made for traffic violations and for drinking in public and intoxication, but the number arrested under the Volstead act decreased by 139.

Dancer Leaves America in Disgust.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Florence Walton, dancer, turned her back on America today, to shield her eyes from the sight and her ears from the sound of the Charleston and the black bottom. Sailing for Paris, she said she would never return. "The old graceful dances have gone," she said. "The ballroom has been turned into the back room. I am through with America."

Can't Find Peak For Mt. Coolidge.

By the Associated Press.

RUTLAND, Vt., Jan. 8. — The plan to give the name of President Coolidge to some lofty peak in Vermont has failed for lack of a mountain. J. L. Griswold, chairman of the nomenclature committee of the Green Mountain Club, reported at the annual meeting here today that there was no unnamed mountain in the State worthy of the President's name.

GOV. SMITH GETS MYSTERIOUS CALL OVER RADIOPHONE

Tells Unidentified London Interviewer That He Has Never Heard of Hearst or His Big Idea.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The Trans-Atlantic radio telephone developed a deep mystery today. Gov. Smith talked to somebody in London. Who was it? The Governor doesn't know.

How did the call originate?

The Governor is not sure. He is under the impression the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. decided it would be a good idea to induce him to talk to London; but F. A. Stevenson, director of the company's long lines department, said it was all news to him. Stevenson was inclined to think some newspaper had arranged the call as a stunt. If so, the Governor was left in the dark as to what it was all about.

Gov. Smith said the call had been put in for him yesterday, but late in the afternoon he was notified that it could not be reached until tomorrow. He is sure it was a newspaper call, for the person he spoke to was the "editor of a London paper." He talked at 11 a. m.

Never Heard of Hearst or Idea.

"What do you think of Hearst's idea of a union of English-speaking peoples?" asked the voice from London. "I never heard of Hearst or the idea," replied Gov. Smith solemnly.

Then the Governor and his unidentified interviewer talked about the weather—as have fully half of those who have paid $25 a minute for the privilege of saying something to London. Gov. Smith said it was clear and cold here. The Englishman said the day was not so nice in London.

"Please notify Mr. Cyril M. E. Franklin, No. 7, Tor Garden, London," asked Gov. Smith, getting in a personal message, "that his mother-in-law, Mrs. Henry Moskowitz, sailed on the Berengaria last night and will see him next week."

After it was all over Gov. Smith said the "line" was clear and that he had no trouble hearing or making himself heard. This was the report of others who used the service on its second day of commercial operation.

Calls were handled from 8:30 a. m. until 1 p. m., New York time, the first connection being established at 8:32 o'clock.

Rebates Made for Static.

J. D. Ellsworth, assistant to Walter S. Gifford, president of the A. T. & T. Co., said nine calls went through from here and seven were received from London. More could have been made, except that some Londoners scheduled to receive calls had departed for the weekend. It seems that Londoners are not inclined to wait for anything when home calls.

Because of bad static yesterday, the company is making large rebates. The New York World, for example, will be charged for only three minutes on a call which took 12 minutes to complete.

The opening of the service has fired the imaginations of investors, with the result that A. T. & T. Co. stock soared on the New York Stock Exchange today to a high of 155¾, a gain of 4 points, and the highest price reached since 1903, when a record of 169 was established. The stock normally is inactive.

Among those exchanging greetings between the world's two largest cities today were pastors of two historic Methodist churches, the Rev. Dr. Francis B. Upshaw, pastor of the Old John Street Church, established 160 years ago as the first Methodist church in this city, talked with the Rev. George H. MacNeal, pastor of City Road Chapel in London, the church where John Wesley preached and in whose graveyard is buried the father of Methodism.

TRANSATLANTIC radio telephone service settled down to normal routine today. Experiences were much the same as yesterday—good service until 5 o'clock and then, as sunset came down here, a period during which communication was very bad.

Postoffice officials were much interested when shown a cablegram stating that the voice of John L. Balderston, the New York World and Post-Dispatch correspondent in London, was heard in St. Louis over a leased wire from New York. It was stated that, so far as is known here, this constitutes a distance record for telephony, although within a few months all telephones of the two countries will be interconnectable.

NEW YORK JUDGE IMPOSES FINE FOR BOOTLEG COOKING

Apartment Hotel Owners Seek to Overrule Ban on Apartment Pantries.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Having heard in the last few weeks extensive testimony regarding the cooking habits of better class New Yorkers, Magistrate Dreyer ruled yesterday that the owners of the Hotel White, Lexington avenue and Thirty-seventh street, had violated the law in permitting tenants to prepare light meals in their apartments. He imposed a fine of $250.

Trial of the case last month brought out heated arguments regarding cooking. Attorneys for the Hotel White and for the Apartment Hotel Owners' Association announced as soon as they had read the Court's decision that the case would be taken to the Appellate division. They believe that eventually they will win and that bacon and eggs, chops and small steaks will not have to be bootlegged.

FUGITIVE REAL ESTATE DEALER IS REPORTED TO BE IN ST. LOUIS

Lawyer Representing His Relatives Has Conference With Professional Bondsman at Hotel.

AMOUNT OF SURETY EXPECTED TO BE HIGH

Man Who Says He Is Brother of Grant Leaves Family Meeting to Deny Missing Man Is in City.

The Post-Dispatch learned last night that the business partners who are also brothers-in-law of Edward W. Grant, fugitive secretary-treasurer of the collapsed Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty Co., are preparing to surrender him to the authorities and furnish bond for his release.

A lawyer representing Grant's relatives conferred with professional bondsmen at a West End hotel yesterday. Bond for Grant is expected to be high, and consequently more than one bondsman was called in. The bondsmen who attended the conference would not discuss what took place there.

W. H. Bell, vice president of the firm, and brother-in-law of Grant, last night refused to confirm or deny a report that Grant is in St. Louis. He also refused to tell of the bond negotiations.

William A. Baer, attorney for Grant's relatives, said he had no knowledge that Grant was here. He did not say whether the fugitive had been located.

Another lawyer in the case said Grant would surrender within a week and probably much sooner. He indicated Grant was not far from St. Louis.

Family Conference Held.

A family conference was held last evening at 6211 McPherson avenue, Parkview, where the 26-year-old realtor lived with his widowed mother until his disappearance on New Year's afternoon. A man who said he was Grant's brother left the house and, in response to an inquiry by a Post-Dispatch reporter, denied that Grant was in the city. He said he could not discuss the efforts to furnish bond for him.

A similar denial was made at the residence by John Grant, another brother. He said Edward was not in town, that he was still being sought by his family, and that the question of bond had not been considered.

It was noticeable that Grant's brothers were cheerful—in marked contrast with the depression that hovered over the home shortly after his disappearance.

Wagner Said to Be Ill.

Grant's mother and his other brother-in-law, Edward A. Wagner, president of the realty firm, could not be seen. Wagner was said to be indisposed.

It was Wagner who made public Thursday night a letter he had received from Edward Grant, Monday, thus giving Grant a long start on his pursuers. In this letter Grant confessed a long series of frauds and one act of forgery.

The Post-Dispatch has learned that Grant wrote a second letter to a relative. A man close to the family in admitting that not one, but two letters had been received last Monday, said the second letter was of a personal nature and its text could not be made public. In the second letter Grant expressed love for his folks and regretted the sorrow he had brought upon them, it was said. It was mailed from St. Louis.

Reward for His Arrest.

An offer of $1000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of Grant was made yesterday by the Real Estate Exchange upon the authority of W. W. Butts, its president. Grant was believed to have left St. Louis on New Year's afternoon after leaving his home with the announced intention of calling on friends. The calls were not made.

HOW THE CLAIMS OF SACASA AND DIAZ COMPARE

Former Was Vice President, Successor to Presidency, but Was Impeached by Rump Legislature.

DIAZ' ELECTION RESULT OF COUP

Engineered by General Whom U. S. Declined to Recognize — Diaz' Eligibility Questioned.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Who is the constitutional President of Nicaragua—Adolfo Diaz, who has been recognized by the American State Department and whose interests are being served by the presence of American marines in Nicaragua, or Dr. Juan B. Sacasa, who has been recognized by Mexico and also, in a formal statement issued by Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations.

The whole question, as it seems to the writer, boils down to the question of whether Sacasa's forced exile from his country, after his impeachment by a rump Parliament controlled by his political enemies, invalidates his title to the office. Senator Borah says that it does not—that Sacasa is clearly the constitutional President of the republic and that Diaz is being held in office "by sheer force of foreign arms," meaning American arms.

To this contention, Secretary of State Kellogg, after the Cabinet meeting of Friday, at which there was a sudden stiffening of administration policy, replied in effect that the United States could not be expected to hunt up Sacasa and take him back to Nicaragua and establish him as President.

Kellogg declared that Diaz had been legally chosen President by the Nicaraguan Legislature and that the recognition of him by the United States was eminently proper.

Recent Nicaraguan History.

The sequence of events in Nicaragua leading up to the present imbroglio was as follows:

In October, 1924, Carlos Solorzano and Sacasa were elected President and Vice President at a popular election by a vote of 48,000 to 28,000. A year later, Gen. Emiliano Chamorro, by a coup d'etat, took over the Government and forced Solorzano out of office. The United States declined to recognize Chamorro on the ground that he had come into power by force. A personal appeal by Chamorro at the State Department was in vain.

Solorzano is no longer in the picture. He resigned after the coup d'etat and left the country. It is Borah's contention that under the Constitution, the legally elected Vice President Sacasa, who has never relinquished his claim, thereupon became the President.

Sacasa's claim is grounded on article 106 of the constitution, which provides that "in case of the absolute or temporary default of the President, the executive power shall devolve upon the Vice President."

Rump Legislature.

The Chamorrist party followed up the ousting of Solorzano by calling a rump session of the Legislature, at which Sacasa was impeached for treason and sentenced to two years' exile. Even assuming that the proceedings were otherwise legal, the Sacasa supporters hold that the impeachment is null and void because obtained in an extra-constitutional manner.

The constitution provides that the first step in an impeachment must be a hearing in court and a finding of probable cause; that after this, the Legislature has the power to refer the case to the Supreme Court, which has the final decision (article 123). Sacasa was removed from office by direct action of the Legislature, and without any preliminary judicial hearing.

Sacasa left the country and came to Washington, where he tried to obtain recognition, but without any better success than Chamorro before him. He went from here to Mexico City, where he obtained the recognition of the Mexican Government.

Election of Diaz.

Chamorro, after his failure in Washington to get recognition for himself, went back to Nicaragua and retired in favor of Diaz, whose election he procured at the hands of the Legislature. Diaz shortly thereafter was recognized by the American State Department and promptly appealed to the Department for aid against Sacasa. Marines were sent to Nicaragua, ostensibly for the protection of American life and property, and there the matter stands today.

The elevation of Diaz to the presidency goes directly back to the coup d'etat by which Chamorro overthrew the legally elected Government. In itself, this election may have been technically correct. It must be considered, however, in the light of the extra-constitutional events which led up to it. Diaz could not have been elected by the Legislature if Sacasa had not been ousted. If this ousting was unconstitutional, then the election of Diaz is invalid.

The case of Smith of Illinois offers something of a parallel. Here the regularity of the general election is not being attacked, but it is held that the taint in the preceding primary extends into the election.

State Department's Haste.

On the face of the evidence, it looks to the writer as if Sacasa, on constitutional grounds, has clearly a better claim to the presidency than Diaz. Certainly, as Senator Reed of Missouri has said, the State Department acted with "indecent haste" in recognizing Diaz.

A new argument against Diaz was injected into the discussion today by Dr. T. S. Vaca, agent o fthe Sacasa liberal government in Washington, who pointed to an article of the Nicaraguan Constitution requiring, as quoted by Vaca, that the President of the Republic must be a native-born citizen. Vaca said that Diaz was not born in Nicaragua, but in Esparta, Costa Rica.

Asked why he had not brought forward this phase of the matter earlier, Vaca said that he had not been certain of Diaz's birthplace and had investigated before making the announcement.

"The recognition and support of Diaz by the United States naval forces," said Vaca, "tear to pieces the Constitution of Nicaragua and the Central American pacts, which were sponsored by the United States and signed by five Central American republics at Washington in 1923."

REWARD OF $1000 OFFERED FOR LALLY SLAYER'S ARREST

Police Chief Announces All Information in Matter Will Be Treated Confidentially.

A reward of $1000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Detective-Sergeant Edward J. Lally, who was killed by an assassin early New Year's day, was offered by the police department late yesterday.

Announcing the reward, Chief of Police Gerk said that "some progress" had been made in the investigation, but declined to go farther into that angle of the case. The reward bulletin states that all information "will be treated confidentially" and that the offer will remain in effect until April 15.

Sergt. Lally was walking to his home, 4155 Laclede avenue, from a New Year's eve assignment at the Columbian Club, when he was shot down in front of 4141 Laclede. Before he died he related that a young man whom he did not know, stepped from a parked automobile, fired two shots at him and then drove off in the machine.

VERDICT OF HOMICIDE FOR KILLING DURING HOLDUP

Coroner's Jury Finds Joseph Szwabo, 23, Shot Saloon Keeper Vallosio.

A verdict of homicide, holding Joseph Szwabo, 23 years old, of 1421 Sarsfield place, for the death of Bart Vallosio, whose saloon at 2001 Morgan street Szwabo held up Thursday evening, was returned by a Coroner's jury yesterday.

He was not at the inquest, as he is at city hospital with bullet wounds in the abdomen and left wrist, inflicted by Vallosio's brother, Vincent, after detectives caught Szwabo in the neighborhood. Vincent Valloslo testified that Szwabo shot his brother. The detectives said Szwabo threw away two revolvers when pursued and explained his flight to them by remarking: "I'm supposed to have poked up (held up) that joint."

84 MEXICAN OUTLAWS KILLED

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 8.—Eighty-four bandits or revolutionaries have been killed by the Federal troops in the past few days in combats in various parts of the country, according to newspaper and War Department reports.

The War Department has issued orders to military commanders to execute summarily all persons carrying arms against the Government.

Insurance Men to Meet Here.

More than 400 salesmen of the Bankers' Life Co. from Missouri and ten states in this section, will meet at Hotel Statler Jan. 13—14 for a two-day school of instruction, to be conducted by officers of the company from the home office at Des Moines.

Business Partners Prepare To Surrender E. W. Grant the firm, and of holding the loss to clients and creditors down to $750,000 or $800,000.

Receiver Holme's estimate of a loss not to exceed $800,000 is lower than that made by James M. Rohan, president of the St. Louis County Land Title Co., which has investigated many of Grant's deals. Rohan said yesterday that he still believed the loss to clients and creditors, including contractors, mechanics and building material dealers, would approximate $1,000,000. The creditors mentioned are protected to some extent by liens against buildings.

Hopes to Salvage $75,000.

Carl Dubinsky, attorney for two Wagner-Grant-Bell clients, who filed the receivership suit, yesterday completed a compilation of the 18 deeds held by the two men, Leon Marglous and Harry Rubin, with all prior deeds on the same properties. He now hopes to be able to salvage the greater part of the $115,000 investment made by Marglous and Rubin, perhaps as much as $75,000 of it. Plans for friendly suits, to establish the status of claims preceding those of Marglous and Rubin, are being considered by Dubinsky.

The list shows that, of the papers sold to Marglous and Rubin, and represented to them in most cases as second deeds of trust, one is a fifth deed of trust and four have the status of fourth deeds. Of the 18 investments, only four are deemed entirely good, the property in each of those cases being appraised as worth more than the total of deeds outstanding against it.

One of the items in the record is that of 6313 South Rosebury avenue, in De Mun Park. The appraised value is $40,000, and the successive deeds of trust are for a total of $97,676, the fifth deed, held by one of Dubinsky's two clients, being for $24,838. The fourth deed, for $24,838, may be held invalid, as Dubinsky holds that the person executing it did not have lawful title to the property.

Another Case of Five Deeds.

Another piece of property shown as carrying five deeds of trust is that at 6323 South Rosebury. The appraised value is $45,000, and there are three deeds of trust, for a total of $50,000, ahead of the fourth deed for $12,500, held by one of the Dubinsky clients. The fifth deed is also for $12,500, making a total of $75,000 against the property, or $30,000 more than its value.

On the property at 6249 Northwood avenue, one of the two Dubinsky clients holds a fourth deed of trust for $10,000, with three deeds ahead of it for a total of $42,000, the appraised value of the property being $37,500.

Another fourth deed held by one of the two for $12,500, is the property at 6333 Rosebury, valued at $45,000, and with the first three deeds for a total of $52,500.

On property at 736 Heman avenue, valued at $30,000, one of the two holds a $10,000 fourth deed, with $41,000 of deeds ahead of it.

Failed to Mention Two Deeds.

One of the properties named, that at 6249 Northwood, is the one which Grant sold on Sept. 29, 1925, to his brother, Dr. Grant. At the time of the sale, as shown by the record, there were four deeds of trust against the property, for a total of $52,000, but the deed of transfer mentioned only two of the deeds of trust, for $32,000. The appraised value is $37,500.

June 8, 1925, a first deed of trust for $17,500 against this property was filed, having been executed by Edward W. Grant to W. H. Bell as trustee for an office employe of Wagner-Grant-Bell. July 23, 1925, a deed of trust for $10,000, against the same property, was filed, which stated that it was subject to the first deed. Sept. 3, 1925, another deed of trust, this time for $14,500, which mentioned the first but not the second of the prior deeds, was filed. On the same day, still another deed of trust, for $10,000, was filed against the same property.

All these four deeds were against the property when, on Sept. 9, Edward Grant sold it to his brother. The deed of transfer stated that there was a deed of trust for $17,500 and another for $14,500 against the property. No mention is made of the two deeds for $10,000, one of which has precedence of the $14,500 deed.

Dr. Grant has declined to say more than that he is investigating the matter. The deed of transfer states the sale price as $100, but the affixed tax stamps, to the amount of 50 cents, indicate that a $1000 equity was acquired. The tax rate is 50 cents on $1000.

The Real Estate Exchange yesterday instituted free advisory service for the holders of deeds of trust, for the purpose of strengthening public confidence in real estate loans, which the Exchange estimates as amounting to $200,000,000 a year in the city and in St. Louis County.

Three members of the board of directors of the Exchange will be at the Exchange headquarters, on the first floor of the Wainwright Building, Seventh and Chestnut streets, from noon to 2 p. m. each weekday, until further notice, to check up deeds submitted to them. Deeds obtained from other companies, as well as from Wagner-Grant-Bell, will be examined if the owners submit them to the committee.

$1000 Reward Offered.

Circuit Attorney Sidener talked to the Exchange yesterday, and it was at his request that the reward of $1000 for Grant's arrest was announced by Butts. The Circuit Attorney yesterday talked with detectives who investigated the Grant disappearance, as the police had not considered it officially until last Thursday night.

A special meeting of the Associated Title Men of St. Louis and St. Louis County, to discuss remedial legislation to prevent recurrence of deed of trust frauds, will be held at the American Hotel tomorrow night.

Recorder Schmid of St. Louis County plans to ask the Legislature to require persons releasing mortgages, on affidavits that the papers were lost, to provide a surety bond in the sum of the mortgage to protect holders. While this would cause some delay and expense, Schmid thinks it might make people more careful with valuable documents.

President Rohan of the County Land Title Co. suggests the following three possible remedies through legislation: Requiring suit to quiet title in Circuit Court, when papers are lost; requiring the Recorder to note the fact of release on the mortgage itself, and requiring recording of transfers of mortgages. He will discuss the subject at a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Title Men, of which he is a member, at Kansas City, Feb. 7.

Grant's equity in bonds which he was purchasing on the installment plan from Lorenzo E. Anderson & Co. will be an item of his assets, which are included in the scope of the temporary receivership now in effect. The bonds had not been delivered to Grant. A. C. Hilmer of the brokerage firm would not state the amount of the equity, but said it was not large.

Another item will be Grant's Packard sport touring car. Less than a year ago, it has been learned, Grant bought a $2000 diamond ring from a jeweler on approval, and endeavored to persuade a young woman to accept it as an engagement token. She was not ready to commit herself to the prospect of matrimony with the young realty dealer, and he sent the ring back by a stenographer to the jeweler from whom it had been obtained.

Grant, who was 36 years old, was in poor health at times, and was subject to occasional attacks of illness, in the nature of fainting spells. He sought to get $100,000 life insurance from one firm last year, but his application was rejected.

Choked All Night From Asthma

Every Sign of the Trouble Gone. Tells How She Got Well.

Readers who suffer from asthma and bronchial trouble will be glad to learn how Mrs. W. G. Pierson, Route 1, Colby, Kas., conquered her trouble. Mrs. Pierson writes:

"For 16 years, I had asthma in severe form. I couldn't sleep, and rarely tried to go to bed before 1:30 in the morning. I kept getting more weak and nervous, and had a terrible cough and severe pains. I was in Akron, Colorado, when I started taking Nacor, in February, 1925. Early in March I felt so much better I returned to Missouri. It used to be that one night in Missouri would make me choke terribly, but I don't have a sign of asthma now. I sleep all night, get up feeling rested, have gained about 10 pounds in weight, and do my work without dreading it or getting tired. Even in damp, rainy weather, I have no asthma."

Hundreds of other sufferers from bronchitis and severe chronic coughs have reported their recovery, after years of affliction. Their letters and a booklet full of valuable information about these stubborn diseases, will be sent free by Nacor Medicine Co., 577 State Life Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind. No matter how serious your case seems, write for this free booklet today. It may give your whole life a new meaning.

Stop Foot Pains In Five Minutes

If your feet ache and pain, burn and itch, are puffed, swollen, tired, tender and sensitive, write for an interesting new book, "Foot Health," which is now being sent free and postpaid to foot sufferers by Dr. F. H. Griffith, a successful foot specialist. It explains an amazing new method for correcting foot troubles at home easily, quickly, and permanently, without arches, braces, bandages, pads, cushions or other makeshift devices to be worn on the foot or in the shoe—without tiresome exercises, without discomfort or trouble. Yet foot and leg pains are stopped almost instantly, fallen or weak arches corrected, the muscles strengthened, the circulation in the feet and legs improved, the feet made strong, sturdy and self-supporting, and thus ending foot troubles for good. Simply send name and address to Dr. F. H. Griffith, Suite 1524, Davidson Building, Kansas City, Mo., and his book will be sent without cost or obligation. As it points the way to foot health and comfort every foot sufferer should have it.

IN PRISON AS DEBTOR, ASKS FOR RELEASE

Man Files Petition After Woman Awarded $2500 Auto Damages Won't Relent.

A petition for release filed by John Nickoloff of Granite City, who has been a prisoner for 66 days in the Madison County jail at Edwardsville, where he was committed under the Illinois debtors law, will be heard Monday in Madison County Court. Since Nov. 5, Mrs. Gussie Tom, Granite City, has paid the county $1 a day to keep Nickoloff in jail for his failure to pay a $2500 judgment in a personal injury suit. Nickoloff's petition states that he is entitled to release under the insolvent debtors act.

The damage suit resulted from an accident between two automobiles in which Nickoloff and Mrs. Tom were riding in June, 1924. Mrs. Tom was injured and a jury awarded her $2500 damages, holding Nickoloff responsible. Later this judgment was set aside, but in a retrial of the case Nickoloff did not appear and Mrs. Tom was given judgment by default. The Sheriff who attempted to collect the damages reported that Nickoloff had no assets, and Mrs. Tom resorted to the debtors law and had him put in jail.

At a preliminary hearing of the petition for release Friday in Circuit Court, Mrs. Tom said she would continue to pay the $1 a day required by law, and keep Nickoloff in jail until he pays. The statute, old and seldom invoked, provides that a creditor who has anyone imprisoned for debt must pay $1 a day for the prisoner's maintenance.

CHARGES U. S. PLANS WAR WITH MEXICO

ment and is trying to control Central America for bolsevik purposes, was not accidental. It was deliberate, and it was contemptible. That a responsible official should have done such a thing shows that it was a deliberate and intentional attempt to slander Mexico."

Refers to Old Students.

He was referring to the now celebrated incident in which Assistant Secretary of State Robert E. Olds sought to have three great press associations circulate an anonymous story to the effect that the Mexican Government was endeavoring to establish a "Bolshevist hegemony" between the United States and the Panama Canal. The attempt was exposed in the Post-Dispatch of Nov. 28.

Huddleston pointed out that President Coolidge had stated yesterday that Admiral Julian Latimer, in command of the large American forces now off the Nicaraguan coast, has been given "full authority to take such astion as he deems necessary" for the protection of American interests.

Says Government Is Latimer.

"So," he continued, "the American government in Nicaragua today is Admiral Latimer. The American Congress in Nicaragua is Admiral Latimer. You and I and the millians of ordinary citizens of the United States are Admiral Latimer, so far as Nicaragua is concerned. Today the question of peace or war is in the hands of a single navy officer."

"Is it not a fact," interposed Representative Blanton (Dem.) of Texas, "that naval officers have a special interest in promoting conflicts of this kind? I imagine that in wartime a Rear Admiral like Latimer would very quickly become an admiral."

"Batting averages are obtained at bat," Huddleston grimly agreed. "Honors, emoluments and glory are won by Army and Navy officers only in military operations. We have placed in charge over our activities in a foreign land, a man who has everything to gain for himself and his class by military action, and everything to lose by peaceful action."

Blanton warned Huddleston that if he persisted in uttering such sentiments he would be editorially "spanked" by the Hearst papers and by Ned McLean's Washington Post, which are advocating drestic measures against Mexico.

President Yielding to Influences.

"Such spanking gives me no pain whatever," Huddleston retorted, "but there is no doubt that President Coolidge is yielding to the influences that want war, and if we do not want war we must speak up like men. If we have not the courage in times like these to speak out in behalf of the boys who have to fight the wars, we would better evacuate this chamber and let somebody come here who will speak for them.

"Admiral Latimer, exercising the unlimited authority conferred upon him by the President, has taken possession of a part of the territory of a foreign country. He has excluded and disarmed the forces of the only lawful and constitutional authority in Nicaragua. He has established a censorship.

"Tomorrow he may seek to disarm the entire Liberal army. Tomorrow he may seek o further secure the presidency for Diaz, that tool of the New York financial interests. Tomorrow he may stop a Mexican ship loaded with arms for the Liberal forces. He may sink it. We have not the slightest right to say that trade shall not be carried on between Mexico and another country. Mexican vessels have a right to carry arms to any government that wants to buy them.

"Tomorrow Admiral Latimer may commit an act of war against Mexico. I believe he will. I believe he will provoke a situation down there that will put us into a war with Mexico which will be so outrageous and unjust that the Latin American republic throughout Central and South America will decide they cannot any longer submit to such bullying. We are trampling on the edge of a volcano on this business.

Coolidge for Right Guard.

"If we do have a war down there, I want to make some nominations for the troops that do the fighting. I nominate Calvin Coolidge as right guard, and Secretary of State Kellogg as closer of the files, and I would have the very front rank composed of the Hearsts, McLeans and those for whom they speak. I am not willing for a single American boy to be sent into Mexico to lose his life in order that the oil properties shall pay dividends."

Huddleston and Senator Wheeler both touched upon a set of circumstances which is causing an extraordinary amount of comment, both open and furtive, in Washington.

Kellogg and Albert B. Fall were friends and colleagues in the Senate when Fall was the foremost advocate of American intervention in Mexico in behalf of the oil interests. The largest owner of oil properties in Mexico at that time was E. L. Doheny. The largest owner at the present time is said to be Harry F. Sinclair.

Fall and Doheny were jointly tried and acquitted of criminal conspiracy recently in connection with the lease which Fall gave Doheny on the Elk Hills Naval Oil Reserve. Fall and Sinclair are to be tried soon on a similar charge growing out of the lease which Fall gave Sinclair on the Teapot Dome reserve.

Ned McLean, owner of the Washington Post, was the friend who "went down the line for Fall" by falsely stating that he had lent him the $100,000 which Fall actually had received from Doheny in the little black bag.

McLean Demands Action.

Since the present crisis began, the Washington Post has printed a series of extraordinary editorials, demanding that the State Department take drastic action against the Mexican government.

The Washington News has bluntly charged that the purpose of the Post is to furnish Secretary Kellogg with an excuse for taking the action he wants to take.

The McLeans and the Coolidges have been close friends since the days when Mr. Coolidge was Vice President. Doheny and his wife were guests at the White House while the oil investigation was in progress in 1923.

Mysterious Radiophone Call for Gov. Smith

derful opening of the service—when Ralph Pulitzer and Ralph Blumenfeld here, an Evening World editor, and I chatted with the casualness of men phoning across the street—to the two-hour struggle after sunset, when the whole service was at a standstill.

After two abortive attempts during this period, sunset in mid-Atlantic enabled me to get through to the World office in New York and conduct a 12-minute shouting match during which I transmitted some messages and one news story.

Conditions late Friday were the worst met with during several months of experiment. Attention should be rightly concentrated on the success, not the partial failure.

Whisper Could Be Heard.

It was impossible to believe, as I talked with Mr. Pulitzer and Mr. Blumenfeld just after 2 o'clock (9 a. m. in New York) that our voices were traversing the tossing waves of the ocean for never in years of telephoning in English cities and Paris had I encountered such perfect service. A whisper could be heard. During our talk one of my two headphones was held to Prof. Low's device for photographing sound waves, so that a photograph could be taken of our voices as we talked.

Although at the same time four other phones in the office were listening in on the conversation, not a syllable was missed; nor did any words have to be repeated in the long talks.

Service continued like this for some two hours.

For nearly two hours after that the whole efforts of the service were exerted to get the call from the World office here through to New York.

For seven minutes I shouted and New York patiently explained it could not hear. Then the controlling deity at the switchboard gave it up and cut us off.

Dictates News Story.

Real conversation began at 7:48, the moment when the sun sets in the middle of the ocean, and for a short time the audibility for some mysterious reason becomes better again.

I dictated messages gathered from eminent people, including Lady Astor, who came up to London from her country estate especially to talk to the World, but had to return because of illness in her family, before the connection was established.

There followed a story gleaned from diplomatic sources about the crisis at Hankow, which to save time I made no effort to dictate textually but told conversationally, trusting to the rewriteman to gather the sense—surely the best such message ever to travel from the old to the new world. A few remarks about the badness of the service and then, at the commencement of a talk with the editor, my 12 minutes, the maximum allowed, were up, and we were cut off.

Morning and Afternoon.

Exasperating as were the hours of effort to talk, during which the offices in London and New York were kept in touch by word of mouth but by only passing every few minutes, the impression that remains is one of the wonder of hearing Mr. Pulitzer's quiet voice as though he were in the same room, telling of how I was looking out at the Woolworth Building in the clear, cold New York winter sunlight of one morning while I peered out at the dirty, drab old Shoe Exchange where the afternoon shadows were already thick.

The Western Mail, largest newspaper of England outside London, telephoned the World's bureau to express delight at the success of their conversation with Hugh Bayard Swope, executive editor of the World. Although reception was not entirely clear, it was understood Swope's words came through clearly. "Do all Americans lead dynamic, energetic speech?" the Mail asked.

24 MURDERS LEFT UNSOLVED IN 1926, 7 LAID TO GANGS

One Hundred and Thirty-Nine Homicides, Exclusive of Automobile Cases, in City During Year.

4 OF THE KILLINGS WORK OF ROBBERS

Five Italians Assassinated Under Circumstances Which Gave No Clew as to the Motive.

A list of unsolved murders for 1926, prepared by police yesterday, disclosed that 24 persons—an average of two a month—were murdered in St. Louis by persons who have successfully evaded detection. There were 139 homicides, not including automobile cases. In addition to the 24 murders classed as unsolved, there were four in which the slayers named, have not been apprehended. Of the automobile cases, as was told last week, there were 15 drivers who feloniously fled and successfully evaded arrest.

Seven of the unsolved murders were definitely attributed to the Cuckoo-Italian gang feud. Four of the murders were committed by robbers, and five Italians were assassinated under circumstances which left the motives a mystery.

Record of Gang Killings.

The gang killings began in St. Louis on Aug. 29 when Joseph Schambra, an Italian bootlegger, was shot down by gunmen in an automobile at Ninth and Wash streets. On Sept. 3, Caesar Cipriano, an Italian leader, and Joseph Manzella, an associate, were fatally shot as they got into Cipriano's automobile in front of St. Louis Baptist Hospital after visiting a friend who had been wounded in another shooting.

Two days later, Pete Webbe of the Cuckoo faction was shot by gunmen at Virginia avenue and Davis street, and on Sept. 23, gunmen invaded the Submarine Bar at Fourteenth and Chestnut streets, killing three men, Tony Dattolo and Joseph Rubino, Italians, and Frank Christian, a bystander. Of six other men killed during the feud, two were slain by police and four were assassinated by unidentified men outside of the city limits.

The other Italian murders are variously attributed in theory to the gang war, to bootleg fights, and grudges.

Other Italian Murders.

On May 10, the body of Caesar Garavaglia, 22, of 5334 Northrup avenue, was found riddled with bullets in the alley behind his home after a visit to his sweetheart. On May 20, Mariano DeLuca, 59, 811 Carr street, was shot to death by three Italians as he sat on the doorstep of his home. On Sept. 7 Onofrio Albanese, 36, was shot to death as he sat at a card table in the poolroom at 1425 North Fourteenth street. When police arrived there was no one to tell about it, and two weeks later, Joseph Consiglio, 37, a frequenter of the same place was shot down by gunmen in front of 1417 Blair avenue. Frank Tarminia 34 years old, found dead Dec. 21, apparently was shot from behind as he shoveled coal into the stove in his grocery at 1001 North Seventh street.

The men who were killed by robbers were George Dozier, manager of the Kroger store at 3755 Cote Brilliante avenue, who was shot in the back by two men who held him up in his store Sept. 25; Samuel Yaffe, grocer at 1217 Whittier street, shot by a Negro robber in his store, Nov. 11; Jerry Highley, 56, of 717 South Seventh street, who died Nov. 4, a week after being shot by one of two men who robbed him on the street; and Wesley Lemley, a Negro, who was beaten to death and robbed in his shoe-shine shop at 1921 Franklin avenue, April 27.

Miscellaneous Homicides.

Other victims of unidentified slayers were:

William McDonald, a Negro, who was beaten to death by two white men at Eleventh and O'Fallon streets, Jan. 7.

Constant E. McCormick, known as Edward Taylor, shot by two men in his home-brew flat at 2310A Olive street, June 8.

Joseph Brown, 60, a beggar, who died of skull fracture after being hit by a man he importuned for alms, Aug. 17.

Joseph T. Haley, 37, of 1407 Salmage avenue, shot in an alley near Kingshighway and Manchester avenue, Sept. 22.

Mrs. Beatrice Light, 46, of 1606 Papin avenue, whose bruised and beaten body was found on an open lumber yard at Thirteenth and Gallanphy streets Nov. 24.

Exasperating as were these hours of effort to talk, during which the offices in London and New York were kept in touch, not by word of mouth but by cable, passing every few minutes, the impression that remains is one of the wonder of hearing Mr. Pulitzer's quiet voice as though he were in the same room, telling of how he was looking out at the Woolworth Building in the clear, cold New York winter sunlight of early morning while I peered out into the dirty, drab old Shoe Lane where the afternoon shadows were already thick.

The Western Mail, largest newspaper of England outside London, telephoned the World's bureau to express delight at the success of their conversation with Herbert Bayard Swope, executive editor of the World. Although reception was not entirely clear, it was stated Swope's words came through clearly. "Do all Americans have dynamic, energetic speech?" the Mail asked.

24 MURDERS LEFT UNSOLVED IN 1926, 7 LAID TO GANGS

One Hundred and Thirty-Nine Homicides, Exclusive of Automobile Cases, in City During Year.

4 OF THE KILLINGS WORK OF ROBBERS

Five Italians Assassinated Under Circumstances Which Gave No Clew as to the Motive.

A list of unsolved murders for 1926, prepared by police yesterday, disclosed that 24 persons—an average of two a month—were murdered in St. Louis by persons who have successfully evaded detection. There were 139 homicides, not including automobile cases. In addition to the 24 murders classed as unsolved, there were four in which the slayers named, have not been apprehended. Of the automobile cases, as was told last week, there were 15 drivers who feloniously fled and successfully evaded arrest.

Seven of the unsolved murders were definitely attributed to the Cuckoo-Italian gang feud. Four of the murders were committed by robbers, and five Italians were assassinated under circumstances which left the motives a mystery.

Record of Gang Killings.

The gang killings began in St. Louis on Aug. 29 when Joseph Schambra, an Italian bootlegger, was shot down by gunmen in an automobile at Ninth and Wash streets. On Sept. 3, Caesar Cipriano, an Italian leader, and Joseph Manzella, an associate, were fatally shot as they got into Cipriano's automobile in front of St. Louis Baptist Hospital after visiting a friend who had been wounded in another shooting.

Two days later, Pete Webbe of the Cuckoo faction was shot by gunmen at Virginia avenue and Iowa street, and on Sept. 23, gunmen invaded the Submarine Bar at Fourteenth and Chestnut streets, killing three men, Tony Dattilo and Joseph Rubino, Italians, and Frank Christian, a bystander. Of the other men killed during the feud, two were slain by police and four were assassinated by unidentified men outside of the city limits. The other Italian murders are variously attributed in theory to the gang war, to bootleg fights, and grudges.

Other Italian Murders.

On May 10, the body of Caesar Caravaglia, 22, of 5334 Northrup avenue, was found riddled with bullets in the alley behind his home after a visit to his sweetheart. On May 20, Mariano Deluca, 59, 811 Carr street, was shot to death by three Italians as he stood on the doorstep of his home. On Sept. 7 Onofrio Albanese, 36, was shot to death as he sat at a card table in the poolroom at 1425 North Fourteenth street. When police arrived there was no one to tell about it, and two weeks later, Joseph Consiglio, 37, a frequenter of the same place was shot down by gunmen in front of 1417 Blair avenue. Frank Tarminia, 34 years old, found dead Dec. 21, apparently was shot from behind as he shoveled coal into the stove in his grocery at 1001 North Seventh street.

The men who were killed by robbers were George Dozier, manager of the Kroger store at 3755 Rue Brilliante avenue, who was shot in the back by two men who held him up in his store Sept. 25; Samuel Yaffe, grocer at 1217 Prattler street, shot by a Negro robber in his store, Nov. 11; Jerry Brophy, 56, of 717 South Seventh street, who died Nov. 4, a week after being shot by one of two men who robbed him on the street; and Wesley Lemley, a Negro, who was beaten to death and robbed in his shoe-shine shop at 1931 Franklin avenue, April 27.

Miscellaneous Homicides.

Other victims of unidentified slayers were:

William McDonald, a Negro, who was beaten to death by two white men at Eleventh and O'Fallon streets, Jan. 7.

Constant E. McCormick, known as Edward Taylor, shot by two men in his home-brew flat at 1918A Olive street, June 8.

Joseph Brown, 60, a beggar, who died of skull fracture after being hit by a man he importuned for alms, Aug. 17.

Joseph T. Haley, 37, of 1407 Gamage avenue, shot in an alley near Kingshighway and Manchester avenue, Sept. 22.

Mrs. Beatrice Light, 46, of 1606 Allen avenue, whose bruised and beaten body was found on an open lumber yard at Thirteenth and Allanphy streets Nov. 24.

Mrs. Maggie Kimlein, 57, a Negro, of 1109 North Eighth street, who refused to tell how she was shot in the side Dec. 12.

James Bagby, 60, of 5200 Lotus avenue, elevator operator and acting night watchman, who was beaten to death in the Post-Dispatch mailing room Dec. 19.

Case Outside the City.

Of the unsolved murders beyond the city limits the one which aroused the most interest on the part of St. Louis police was the killing of John Barrett Jr. of 4576A North Market street, whose bullet-riddled body was found at Melrose avenue and Jennings road, St. Louis County, the night of Nov. 21. Weeping beside him was Mrs. Mabel Robinson, wife of "Chippy" Robinson, "boss killer" of the Egan gang, who would not say who killed him.

CAPITOL THRONGED FOR ANNUAL BALL

Governor and Mrs. Baker Head Line at Public Reception Preceding Dance.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 8.—The Governor's annual public reception and military ball was held tonight at the State Capitol, following a public reception at the executive mansion for State officials, National Guard officers, the Governor's staff and their wives.

State officials and employes, politicians of greater or lesser magnitude, private citizens and just plain voters were in the majority in the throng at the reception and ball at the Capitol. A military touch was given by the uniforms of National Guard officers, military school cadets and the gold-brocaded honorary colonels of the Governor's personal staff, who exercise no military functions.

The public reception was in the reception room of the Governor's suite, and the ball in the Capitol rotunda and the Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Hall in the east wing of the Capitol.

In the receiving list at the reception were Gov. and Mrs. Baker, Lieutenant-Governor Phil A. Bennett of Springfield, Attorney-General N. T. Gentry, Secretary of State Charles U. Becker, State Treasurer C. E. Stephens, State Auditor L. D. Thompson, Superintendent of Schools Charles A. Lee, Chief Justice David E. Blair and Supreme Judge Frank E. Atwood and wives of the officials. Other Judges of the Supreme Court were unable to attend, it was stated.

Mrs. Baker wore a tremet gown of black chiffon over cloth of silver, with a design of crystal and sequins that outlined the pointed bodice.

Wives of the honorary Colonels assisted at the reception. Among the St. Louis staff members were George Eigel of the St. Louis Board of Election Commissioners and Mrs. Eigel; Arthur Freund of the St. Louis Election Commissioners, H. J. Talbot and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Meyer, George Baptiste and Dr. and Mrs. James Stewart.

CONGREGATION OFFERS PRAYERS FOR ILL WIFE OF PASTOR

Her Husband, the Rev. James L. Fowle, Announces She Is Holding Her Own Nicely.

Mrs. Katherine Fowle, wife of the pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church, was reported by the Rev. James L. Fowle last night as holding her own very nicely. Mrs. Fowle has been seriously ill at St. Luke's Hospital as a result of an operation for appendicitis early in November, and two extended prayer meetings have been held at the Central Presbyterian Church, at which prayers were offered for her recovery.

Friday 60 members of the church assembled at 9 o'clock in the morning, many of them remaining until 4:30 in the afternoon. Yesterday afternoon a smaller group prayed for several hours.

MEXICO CALLS TEXAS OFFICERS SLAYERS

Killing of Five Prisoners in Ambush Battle Takes an International Turn.

By the Associated Press.

RAYMONDVILLE, Tex., Jan. 8.—The case against Sheriff Raymond Teller and seven other Willacy County officers charged with implication in the deaths of five county prisoners killed near here last September assumed an international aspect today, with the Mexican Government actively interested in the prosecution.

Mexican officials contend at least one of the prisoners killed was a citizen of the southern republic and charges filed against the officers yesterday were the result of activities of Manuel C. Gonzales, San Antonio attorney appointed special investigator by the Mexican Government.

County Attorney Roger F. Robinson declared today that the warrants were issued without his knowledge and that, so far as he knew there was no evidence to warrant holding the officers. Teresa Nunez, widow of one of the prisoners killed swore to the complaint. Robinson asserted in court it had come to his attention that Mrs. Nunez had said she did not know what she was signing when she affixed her name to an affidavit and that she had no more information now than when she appeared before the county grand jury which investigated the case without returning indictments.

Jose A. Valenzuela, Mexican consul at San Antonio, made it plain that Attorney Gonzalez is backed by the Mexican Government.

EX-GOV. ALF TAYLOR SPEAKS BEFORE TENNESSEE SOCIETY

200 Attend 32d Annual Banquet of St. Louis Organization at Woman's Club.

The thirty-second annual banquet of the Tennessee Society of St. Louis was held last night at the Woman's Club, 4600 Lindell boulevard, with about 200 persons in attendance. The principal speaker was former Gov. Alf Taylor of Tennessee, 78 years old, who spoke before the society here 30 years ago.

"Greatness and the World's Great Men" was his subject, and he discussed Abraham Lincoln, Andrew Jackson, James Whitcomb Riley, Henry M. Stanley, Buffalo Bill, Kit Carson, Thomas Edison and Henry Ford.

Prof. Eugene Tavenner of Washington University presided. Dr. M. Ashby Jones of the Second Baptist Church gave invocation.

INSTALLMENT BUYING WINS IN TEST SURVEY

Six-Month Country-Wide Investigation Discloses Economic Soundness, Paper Reports.

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 8.—A survey of the United States on installment buying made by the Portland Oregonian to be published tomorrow, states, the newspaper says, that the predominating conclusion of the six months' investigation is that installment buying is economically sound.

The Oregonian sent questionnaires to bankers in every city of more than 50,000, to be distributed in turn to 14 diversified businesses, as well as leaders of industry and economics. The survey, the newspaper says, is the most comprehensive ever undertaken on the subject.

A compilation of the questions and answers shows the following:

"In your opinion has installment buying:

	Yes	No
(1) directly, or indirectly, increased production and made for general business prosperity?	1080	131
(2) Come to stay?	1200	62
(3) Had a tendency to level the summer slump in buying?	804	353
(4) Affected the amount of savings accounts? (an ambiguously worded question to which the answer has little significance as it is not specific as to whether the effect is good or bad bankers contend it has had an excellent effect on saving.)	674	555
(5) Led to a dangerous credit situation?	674	622
(6) Materially increased the proportion of purchases of luxuries?	1238	116
(7) Had the psychological effect of inducing purchasers to "plunge" without sufficient realization of eventual payments?	980	266
(8) Reduced the amount of money available for investment?	784	450
(9) Increased the cost of goods to the consumer?	981	315

The Oregonian says the statistical department of the Lumberman's Trust Co. Bank of Portland digested and classified the findings of the survey and that from the thousands of replies the following conclusion is based on the majority of answers.

Called Prosperity's Backbone.

"Installment buying is the backbone of America's prosperity, by leveling out the production curve. It has almost banished unemployment, creating more jobs through the increased production made necessary by the tremendous consumer demand. It has reduced the average cost of necessities and luxuries through quantity manufacture. It has increased wages, encouraged thrift and ambition, prevented spasmodic business depressions and made it possible for the wage earner of America to find contentment in the possession of those things which even the rich of other countries seldom can afford."

The minority opinion holds, the newspaper states, that "installment buying and selling is a menace, causing the workmen to pledge his future and place a mortgage on his earning power, which will tend to bring a reckoning day that will shake the credit structure, should 'hard times' develop."

The Oregonian says specific opinions were requested as to the percentage of working men's future wages in the cities surveyed which was mortgaged for purchases on deferred payment plans, and the average arrived at was 39 per cent.

More estimates were asked, the newspaper states, as to the percentage of installment buying that was for the purchase of homes, automobiles, clothing, jewelry, radios, nonessentials, than for furniture, washing machines and other essential household equipment.

When the average of these replies were figured, the newspaper says, the results were as follows: Homes, 28 per cent; automobiles, 35 per cent; clothing, 9 per cent, jewelry, radios and non-essentials, 10 per cent, and furniture, washing machines and essential household equipment, 18 per cent.

The survey shows some marked differences of opinion on the wisdom of installment buying. Thomas A. Edison, in his questionnaire, says installment buying tends to stabilize production, that it is increasing in volume and that he does not believe either the bankers or manufacturers can control it.

C. S. Woolworth, chairman of the board of directors of the F. W. Woolworth Co., states that he cannot see any advantage in installment buying, saying the price of the articles is bound to be higher, that the installment purchaser very often buys what he can very well get along without, and that the family or individual is happier and more contented if cash is paid.

Answers to the questionnaires shows a diversity of opinion as to what constituted essentials and non-essentials.

Flames Destroy the Kate, Romantic Packet of South

Burns to Water's Edge at Memphis With Loss of $125,000 — Report of Incendiarism to Be Investigated.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 8. — Flames ended the romantic career of the Kate Adams, majestic river steamer, here today and removed from the lower Mississippi, the last side-wheeler to ply the great stream in Southern water.

The Kate burned as two of her predecessors of the same name before her, and left but a ruin of twisted metal beams at the water's edge to mark her final anchorage. The cause of the fire is undetermined, but after rumors of incendiarism police announced late today that an investigation would be started.

Twenty-eight years ago the great packet steamed out of Memphis, her home port, on her maiden trip down the broad river to Arkansas City, Ark. Two weeks ago she returned from Natchez, Miss., breasting the mighty current for the last time and tied up at the mother wharf where fire destroyed her today.

The Kate fro m1898 until 1922 was a United States mail boat and to many a small valley point was the chief means of communication with the world, especially in the early years of her service. For 15 years she ran twice a week from Memphis to Arkansas City and her reputation for clock-like regularity became traditional.

In the last few weeks of her service the makers of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" leased her for use in filming their scenes.

The boat, 240 feet long and with a 50-foot beam, was valued at $125,000, but river experts said she could not be replaced for less than twice that amount. A small part of the loss was covered by insurance.

The Kate Adams was owned by the Delta Packet Co. of Pittsburg, Pa., of which Capt. Tom Rees is president. Except for two years in service on the upper Ohio River, which ended early last fall, the steamer was operated on the lower Mississippi and its tributaries. She was built at Jeffersonville, Ind.

Calles Willing for Hague To Pass on Oil Laws

"attempting to influence the United States State Department to use force against Mexico in their favor."

Denies Mexico Is Bolshevist.

Declaring that Mexico was not bolshevist and that the Mexican Government was not bolshevist, he expressed doubt that the members of the Mexican Government could even define bolshevism, although they were accused of being bolshevists. The Mexican Government's program could not be described as that of any political or scientific school or theory. It was simply Mexican—it was itself; it was born of Mexico's own peculiar problems and was not a program borrowed from anywhere outside.

Calles received his visitors at the National Palace. He sat in the reception chamber answering questions offhand as his visitors asked them.

Herring, who is head of the social relations department of the Congregational Churches of the United States, addressing Calles, explained that the visitors were seeking to understand Mexico in human terms, to understand its rebirth of national pride, to appreciate the spiritual appeal of Mexican culture. He referred to the advantage which would accrue to the people of North America "if the day of exploitation gives way to a new spirit of willingness to share life and culture."

Not Used to Kind Words.

Calles was visibly moved. The grim lines about his mouth relaxed and his stern features softened into a smile.

"I rarely hear words of any spirituality," he said. "As a rule I always hear a discussion in the brutal form of material interests and menacing words about those interests.

"So, when I hear words based upon justice and brotherly love it makes me hope that true relations may at some time be established among peoples, makes me think that there are still people in the world working for international harmony upon the basis of justice. Justice is all we want in these moments so critical for Mexico. So long as nations fight only for material things and neglect spiritual things, the peace of the world will be a lie."

Calles described the enemies of the Mexican Government as "the Roman Catholic clergy, some political elements and some reactionary forces," who, he declared, would start a revolution immediately on the withdrawal of American recognition, and who, he added, "are attempting revolutionary disturbances at the present moment, although the Government does and will dominate the situation."

He answered lengthily questions regarding the religious situation, in effect repeating the previously expressed position of the Government.

Asked whether he would be willing to submit the differences between Mexico and the United States regarding the petroleum and land law to The Hague, he replied: "Yes, with great pleasure, if necessary, although it would imperil Mexican sovereignty and establish a fatal precedent as to the liberty and sovereignty of all nations. All history shows that all such international tribunals always support the viewpoint of the strong. But, if necessary, Mexico will take that chance, in order to avoid a more serious danger to the country, and will be willing to choose the least of two evils, and go to the Hague."

Defends Sacasa's Claims.

With regard to Nicaragua, Calles reviewed the history of its politics and revolutions to sustain his position that the pretensions of Nicaragua's Conservative president, Adolfo Diaz, were illegal and that Dr. Juan Sacasa, the Liberal leader, was the only constitutional president.

"Two Nicaraguan Governments were established, one of violence and illegality, the other of legality. Mexico recognized the Government of legality; the United States recognized the one of violence. That is all there is to it."

ARTICLES MADE BY BLIND WOMEN SHOW INCREASE

State Commission Reported 161 Residents of St. Louis Aided 2-Year Period.

The Missouri Commission for the Blind, in a report to be submitted to the Legislature, notes growth in its department which furnishes handiwork to the blind women of Missouri in their home and sells the finished product.

In 1925 the names of 31 women, all residing in St. Louis, appeared on the books. These women received 15,400 articles. In 1926 there were 161 women, in St. Louis and 34 counties. They received 37,709 articles.

To take care of the increased production, the commission has arranged a series of sales, each lasting a week, at various large stores throughout the State. The schedule includes the week of Jan. 9 at Nugent's downtown store; week of March 14 at Stix, Baer & Fuller; week of Oct. 9 at Famous-Barr; week of April 25 at Herr's store, Springfield, and week of May 2 at Newman's store, Joplin. Volunteer civic groups will assist in the sales.

MISSING WITNESSES VOLUNTARY 'EXILES'

Wealthy Oil Men Homesick but Won't Return for Fall-Sinclair Trial.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—While the United States Government is doing its utmost to get two "exiled" witnesses back from France for the trial of Harry Sinclair and Albert B. Fall in connection with the Teapot Dome oil leases, and the "exiles" have frankly told their friends that they are the most homesick pair in all the world, the chances of their returning soon seem remote.

A special act of Congress was passed to reach the wanderers, and a penalty of something like $100,000 has been provided in case they fail to answer to the summonses which have been sent across the ocean.

But Perry M. Blackmeer and George O'Neil, the missing ones, are rich men, with fortunes gained in the oil business, and the heavy fine proposed holds no terrors for them. They say they will not testify in the Sinclair proceedings. They left the country at the time of the senatorial investigation and have been away ever since.

Their Testimony Needed.

Blackmeer and O'Neil have been in Paris. They told friends a few weeks ago that they would trade all of Paris for just one glimpse of Broadway. The friends recently returned from Europe. They say the two have determined not to return until the Sinclair case is disposed of.

The missing witnesses are said by the Government to form an all-important link in the chain of circumstantial evidence which has been forged against the two defendants. They are wanted to testify to certain transactions in which Liberty bonds were passed. Some of these bonds have been traced, but there is said to be a gap in the evidence which only Blackmeer, O'Neil and H. S. Osler, a Canadian, can fill.

New Action Suggested.

There is little chance that the trial, set for Feb. 2, can open at that time. Secretary Fall is gravely ill with pneumonia, and if he recovers, it will be a long time before he can stand his second ordeal before a jury of his peers.

The suggestion has been made recently at the capital that a further act of Congress should be passed, prohibiting persons who refuse to come home to testify from ever returning to their native land. Whether such an act would be constitutional would be open to question, but it is seriously discussed and later may be put through.

A. B. FALL VERY WEAK FOLLOWING A RELAPSE

Condition Unimproved After Use of Stimulants to Increase Blood Pressure.

By the Associated Press.

EL PASO, Tex., Jan. 8.—Albert B. Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, who has been ill at his home here since Christmas with pneumonia, was reported very weak tonight.

H. G. Clunn, personal secretary to Fall, in making the announcement, said that, although the patient was resting comfortably, there had been no improvement in his condition since yesterday when it was found necessary to administer stimulants to increase blood pressure.

Fall, despite his 65 years, has made a good fight against his illness and was believed to be fully on the road to recovery until the relapse yesterday.

Dr. H. T. Safford issued the following bulletin: "Mr. Fall has shown a degree of weakness which could not have been predicted from the comparatively mild course of pneumonia. The blood pressure has improved in response to stimulation, but it is apparent that convalescence will be very protracted."

PLOTS AND INTRIGUES HONEYCOMB EUROPE

First International Scare Since World War Causes Fear and Arrest of Spies.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—Europe is being stirred by its first international scare since the World War.

Secret agents, mystery women, melodramatic plots and counter-plots—all the adventurous secret service stories of pre-war days when every European country was supposed to be spied on and plotted against by every other country—are being revived by sensational "revelations" in half a dozen countries.

Scotland Yard has redoubled its watch for spies at the channel ports. Even American residents, who generally are considered harmless, must have identity cards and must report their movements in Great Britain to the police.

The spy plot excitement began in earnest with the arrest in Paris recently of a former officer in the British army, Graham Vivian Stranders, whose wife is German. He is awaiting trial as a German spy. Then a woman, known as "The Eye of Moscow," recently was imprisoned in France. In Essen a long trusted German employe of the famous Krupp works was arrested and charged with espionage in behalf of France. He was reported to have committed suicide after his arrest.

Czecho-Slovakia supplies the most sensational spy drama of all in the retirement of Rudolph Gaida, young hero of the Czech legions in Siberia, from high army rank after a scandal involving wine, women and military secrets. Gaida is alleged to have been caught in the meshes of the soviet secret service, which is the bogie of all the European Governments.

In the Mediterranean countries the rule of Mussolini, De Rivera and Mustapha Kemal Pasha have resulted in numerous plots and counter-plots.

16 KNOWN DEAD, MANY INJURED IN NEW TREMORS IN ARMENIA

Inhabitants, Panicstricken Because of Recent Tremors, Flee to Mountain Sides.

By the Associated Press.

LENINAKAN, Armenia, Jan. 8.—Inhabitants fled from their homes over snow-swept plains to the mountain sides for shelter when severe earth shocks, lasting nearly a minute, shook the whole of Southern Armenia yesterday. Sixteen persons are known to have been killed, 19 received serious injuries and several others were slightly hurt.

There was a less violent recurrence of the quakes today. During both disturbances the American relief workers took refuge in the open fields.

Successive convulsions, accompanied by loud rumblings, the last few months, have destroyed the morale of the sorely tried population. Since November there have been nearly 60 shocks.

Several days ago Prof. Nikiforov, seismologist of Russia, forecast that a far more terrible earthquake than that which devastated Armenia last May might occur there at any time. He described Leninakan, which was the center of the disturbance in May, as in a vast amphitheater of volcanic action. It was his theory that gigantic layers had been loosened and that the subterranean rock and earth, seeking to find a level, would cause convulsions for months.

DIAMOND BRACELET FOUND

No Claimant for $1000 Article Lost at Hotel Chase.

A diamond bracelet, said by jewelers to be worth about $1000, was found on the floor of the palm room in Hotel Chase during the Paul Whiteman dance there Friday night.

The bracelet was picked up by William Nast, catering manager of the hotel, and held at the desk to await the claim of its owner, but so far no one has appeared to claim it. It is now in a safe deposit vault at the hotel in Nast's care pending claim and identification.

Fear of Communism Cause Of Many Strange Actions

vented from attending a meeting of the Interparliamentary Union at Washington. In each of these cases the department, when called upon to explain, issued vague and unofficial statements about the subversive doctrines of the excluded persons. It has steadily declined to make public any concrete charges against them.

The height of absurdity, if anything could be more absurd than the cases already mentioned, was reached last month, when Secretary Kellogg refused to permit Mme. Alexandra Kollantay of Russia to land in the United States on her way to Mexico, to become the soviet minister in that country.

"Have we sacrificed and forever discarded," asked Senator Borah, apropos the exclusion policy of the State Department, "every tradition which once gave us a unique distinction among the nations?"

Jumpy About Russia.

Of a piece with this policy is the refusal of the United States Government to recognize Russia. Other great nations, including Great Britain, have entered into diplomatic relations with the soviets, apparently without danger to their institutions, but the United States balks even at negotiations looking to recognition. Our nerves are still jumpy. We still adhere to the Hughes formula. He had a way, it will be recalled, of reducing everything to a legalistic formula. Russia must, among other conditions, assume the Kerensky debt before we agree to discuss recognition. That is our last official word on the subject.

It wouldn't be our last word if the business interests of the country were not finding it possible to trade with Russia across the barrier of nonrecognition. If big business finds that it is hampered by the barrier and demands its removal, the State Department will be very likely to find that the Hughes formula, after all, is not final.

Purchasing Agents Welcome.

Meantime, it is interesting and enlightening to compare the exclusion of the Karolyis and the Anna Lerners with the hospitality extended to soviet purchasing agents. On the very day that one of these "dangerous communists" was denied admission to the United States, news dispatches recorded that a soviet agent was in Chicago, buying rams to be shipped to Russia for breeding purposes.

"Since Countess Karolyi is excluded as a communist," asked a reporter at the State Department, "why do you not keep out this agent, who is the representative of a communist government?"

The reply, from an official dispenser of information, was a masterpiece of diplomatic sophistry. The general effect of it was that the department could not presume to say that the man in question, the citizen of an officially nonexistent government, was a communist. The reply confirmed what everybody knows to be true—that Russian business men, whatever their beliefs, are free to come over here as they please to buy American goods. Nor does any sentiment which it may cherish against Bolshevism keep American business from bdying in Russia. Only recently, for example, an arrangement was made with the soviets by the Alminum Company of America—the Mellon company—for the purchase of bauxite in Russia.

They Call Him "Nervous Nelly."

Aside from its obsession on the subject of communism, the main trouble with the State Department, as said at the beginning of this article, is the head of it. Unlike the corresponding branch of the English Government, the State Department maintains at the capital no permanent staff of experts on foreign affairs. Our staff is shifted about from pillar to post. A man may be called from service at Rome to head the Mexican division at Washington and another may be taken from the Russian division and shipped off to South Africa. The consequence is that the subordinates in the department, skilled though they may be in the general practice of diplomacy, are apt to lack expert knowledge in the fields to which they are assigned—the sort of knowledge that can only come from years of specialized study. Often they are young men, with but a scant background of experience.

Now, this condition of inexperience may be no severe drawback if there is at the head of the department a strong man with a well-defined policy. Hughes was such a man. He impressed his will on his staff. They knew what he wanted. Kellogg is not that sort of man. In the Senate he was known as "Nervous Nelly." The name still fits. He is a vacillating man. His maneuvers in the Nicaraguan situation—his shifting from one position to another to explain the presence of the marines in Nicaragua—convicts him of lack of candor. His course in the controversy with Mexico and now in the Nicaraguan affair has laid up for this country a formidable store of ill-will in Latin America.

Then There Is Olds.

As one of his assistant secretaries, Mr. Kellogg has his former law partner, Robert E. Olds. He is a man without previous diplomatic experience. It is enough to say of Olds that he was the man who attempted to spread, through the press associations, without assumption of responsibility by himself or the department the discredited story that the Calles Government of Mexico was fostering bolshevism in Central America.

The department as it now is takes its tone from Kellogg. That is the chief trouble with it.

There may also be significance in the fact that business men have easy access to subordinates in the department. Upon the staff there is a constant rain of influence from varying interests. A subordinate may be hauled this way and that, till he is completely bewildered. A lawyer of some private interest may receive information which is denied to the public. In all this there may be nothing sinister. Yet it is bound to detract from public confidence in the department.

In England the system in this respect is different. When business men there want a line of action, they appoint a delegation that goes straight to the proper authority. A recent example was the call of a delegation interested in China trade upon Foreign Minister Chamberlain. The news of the conference was published. Our method is more circuitous, more subterranean, more open to the suspicion of wire-pulling.

A Policy of Concealment.

The State Department shrouds its acts in secrecy. Consider how little we have been permitted to know about Nicaragua, and how grudgingly that little has been given. Reporters get their information either at the "press conference" with the Secretary, which is similar to the President's conference, or through an official "division of current information."

Newspaper men seeking to interview Assistant Secretary Olds after the Post-Dispatch had told of his effort to indoctrinate the three press associations with his story of Mexican "bolshevism," were compelled to make their approach through the head of this division—the department's press agent. He reported that Mr. Olds could not be seen.

Under the British system of direct Cabinet responsibility to Parliament the Ministers must stand on the floor of the House of Commons and submit to questioning. Our only substitute in a congressional resolution calling for information or a request to a Cabinet member to appear before a committee.

Neither of these methods is wholly satisfactory.

The fact that our system permits a great deal of secrecy does not, of course, excuse Kellogg. He could bring the foreign policy of the United States out into the open if he would. A little more open diplomacy and the country would not be so likely to wake up some morning and find itself confronted, without previous warning, by what the diplomatists call an "accomplised fact."

These "accomplished facts" are the chief weapons of the diplomatists everywhere, in committing the people to a course of conduct.

CALLS FOR REPORT ON STATUS OF ALL DEFUNCT BANKS

State Finance Commissioner Orders Deputies to Wind Up All Liquidations as Soon as Possible.

TO INVESTIGATE NIGHT AND DAY

Had Ordered Affairs Cleaned Up by Jan. 1—Attorney Says Work Virtually Is Concluded.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 8.—State Finance Commissioner L. Cantley, has issued a call to the special deputies in charge of 118 defunct banks and trust companies in Missouri, for reports on the status of liquidation accounts, and has instructed the deputies to wind up the affairs of these banks as soon as possible. This is the first time such a call for reports on all defunct banks has been issued by the Finance Department.

Cantley will go to St. Louis Tuesday for a conference with the deputy and special attorneys in charge of defunct Night and Day Bank, to determine why liquidation was not completed Jan. 1, as had been ordered by the department. Cantley last October gave instructions that the bank's affairs be wound up by the end of the year.

"They promised to have the liquidation completed by Jan. 1, but it has not been done," Cantley said. "I am going down to see why, and to try to terminate the liquidation, and the expense to the depositors, as soon as possible."

The Night and Day Bank closed on Jan. 6, 1922, and up to last October the liquidation expense paid from assets from the bank totaled $158,900. Of this amount $65,000 was paid in fees to special attorneys, after their claims were approved by St. Louis Circuit Court. Charles N. Gilles is special deputy in charge of liquidation of the Night and Day Bank. Thomas E. Francis and Clarence Case are the special attorneys. Gilles also has charge of the defunct Chipnewa Bank of St. Louis.

Wants Department Attorney.

Night and Day depositors have received 62 per cent of their claims so far and it has been estimated that another 5 per cent can be paid.

"Some of the bank liquidations have been dragging along with no special effort by the deputies to close them out," Cantley said.

"We want to close the matter out as soon as possible without injuring the interests of the depositors, to reduce the burden of liquidation expenses on the assets of these banks."

Cantley said he favored some move to reduce the large fees paid from bank assets to special attorneys employed to handle the legal work in the liquidation. "Under the existing system these special attorneys have been necessary," he said, "when we go into the courts for orders approving the liquidation work, without an attorney, the Courts ask about our counsel. This department has had no real control over the fees of these attorneys. They go into court with a claim and the Court approves a fee which must be paid."

He suggested thousands of dollars in attorney fees could be saved for depositors in defunct banks, if provision was made for an attorney for the Finance Department, at a fixed salary, to handle all legal matters connected with liquidations. Many of the matters are routine, Cantley said, and could be handled from the department here by one attorney. Provision could be made for employing special counsel only when a large amount of litigation grew out of a bank failure, he said.

New Deposit Instructions.

"I believe 50 per cent of the bank's liquidation could be handled without special counsel, considering the court decisions, rulings of the Attorney-General on procedure, and other data, that we have available here on liquidation questions that have been settled in previous cases," Cantley said.

The finance department has instructed special deputies to deposit funds collected in liquidation of a defunct bank in some depository in the county in which the bank closed, the depository first to be approved by the Finance Commissioner. This order terminates a former practice by the liquidation officers depositing liquidation accounts with some bank with which they were friendly. There have been instances of funds of a defunct bank in the southern part of the State being deposited with a bank in the northern part.

Clarence T. Case, one of the Night and Day Bank attorneys, said yesterday that the affairs of the defunct institution virtually were wound up. Only the sale of odds and ends, such as notes and judgments on which collection has failed, remains. Case said that regardless of the price they bring, their value is so small, compared with the amount of the total deposits, that their disposition will have only a slight effect on the amount still to be paid depositors.

Snow melting from the roof on a freezing day is the surest sign of a heat-leaking house. Lining your attic with Celotex will end this waste, save fuel money and convert your attic into an attractive, livable room.

Don't spend your money to melt the snow on your roof!

Even solid, weather-tight roofs can't hold escaping heat . . . . Sealing your attic with Celotex will stop this needless loss

Anyone who can use a saw and hammer can finish off an attic room with Celotex. You simply nail the broad, light boards to the studding and rafters. Celotex not only shuts out heat and cold but converts your old attic into an attractive, livable room.

LOOK at your roof after a snowstorm!

If roof snow melts on a freezing day your own heating plant melts it. Your roof is leaking valuable heat—your fuel and money are being wasted. Building authorities know that 97% of American homes contribute to this loss.

Don't let your house leak heat!

Your home can be as tight to heat as it is to wind and rain, but ordinary materials alone—wood, plaster, wallboard and shingles—won't make it so. A special insulating (heat-stopping) material is necessary.

Celotex Insulating Lumber provides this essential protection.

Celotex is not cut from trees—it is made by mammoth machines from the tough fibres of cane. Countless tiny air cells sealed within the fibres provide the most effective insulating material known to science.

More than 119,000 homes built with Celotex have set a new standard in American building practice. For these homes are winter-warm, summer-cool, quiet, strong and about ⅓ more economical to heat.

LINE YOUR ATTIC with Celotex. And here is good news for those who built before Celotex was available! You can still enjoy many of the advantages of this amazing lumber by lining your attic with Celotex.

While attic lining cannot effect the same results as complete house insulation, it gives protection where it is most needed. The roof is the most exposed, yet the thinnest and least protected part of your house.

Also, because heated air rises, more than 60% of the avoidable heat-leakage in an uninsulated house is through the roof in winter. And in summer, such a roof is poor protection against the sun's attack.

SAVES MORE than it costs. Lining your attic with Celotex is not a big job or an expensive job. You simply nail the broad, light boards right to the studding and rafters. Enough Celotex to line your attic will cost you very little. And Celotex will more than pay for its cost in the fuel money it saves.

Celotex also converts your old attic into a comfortable, livable room. Its golden-tan color and rough-textured surface make an attractive wall finish . . . or you can decorate it in many ways.

There are also many other places where Celotex is the ideal material for re-decorating, repairing or remodeling.

Ask your architect, contractor or lumber dealer to tell you more about this amazing lumber. All lumber dealers can supply Celotex.

Meanwhile, send the coupon below for the free Celotex Building Book. It tells you how to use Celotex in old and new homes alike.

Purses containing money dropped on the streets or cars are returned to the losers almost every day through POST-DISPATCH wants. Most persons are honest and loss for the loser's notice in the People's Popular Want Ad medium. Call MAin 1111.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

MARCELLA. — Your coin 11st does not command any premiums.

G. W. T. — The 1867 nickel is worth 20c.

H. F. B.—Write to the Bureau of Fisheries, Washington, D. C., regarding the fish in which you are interested.

THANK YOU.—You may procure Hudson's "Green Mansions," the book you mention, at the Public Library.

VALLEY PARK.—You will find the address you desire listed in the telephone book. The collector died some months ago.

M. M. — Directions for taking care of ferns appeared in this column on Jan. 2, 1927. You may consult the paper on file at the Public Library.

WARSON ROAD.—You might inquire at the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, 506 Olive street, about the trees you desire to import.

OLD READER.—Full directions for making tamales appeared in this column Sept. 22, 1926. You may consult the paper on file at the Public Library.

E. McM. — Perhaps a dealer in firearms might be able to tell you the value of the old gun. The name you mention is undoubtedly that of the maker. The 27 notches may mean that the owner has fired that many shots with fatal results.

J. F.—The United States had $8,274,924,217 in stock in July, 1925. Of this amount $4,774,312,599 was in circulation. The balance is held in the Treasury to replace paper money and for reserve purposes.

DAILY READER.—You should ask the advice of the school regarding the type of drafting lessons most suitable for the work you intend to take up. Of the list you give only the mechanical course seems to be feasible for you.

J. J. — New York City is the largest city in the United States in population. The Southern Pacific Railroad is 12,561 miles in length, the longest distance covered by one railroad in the United States. The intersection of Grand and Lindell boulevards is approximately the geographical center of St. Louis. The population of St Louis is 821,543 persons, according to the last census report.

MRS. O. J. M.—When an opponent doubles a bidder in bridge the bidder scores twice the amount for tricks if the contract is fulfilled and usually gets 50 points more for fulfilling the contract. When the trick score is more than 30 then 100 points is scored for game. The method of scoring does not differ whether you progress or not. There is a new scoring method that is being used by some players in which 125 points is given for game. You will obtain many books fully describing the game at the Public Library or at the book stores.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

MOTHER.—It would be against the law for your 13-year-old son to drive a motor-propelled automobile through the city streets even though it is a home-made machine of his own invention.

OLITA.—Your banker can explain the financial terms you ask about at greater length than we can in this column. A sinking fund is usually a certain amount of money set aside by a company with which to retire bonds when they become due. Stock priced at 97½ means that stock of an original par value of $100 is only worth $97.50. Par value means the original value of stock whether the amount be $100, the usual amount, or $10.

WORLD WAR VETERAN. — If the estate has enough funds, the administrator will send you a check for the amount of the legacy, probably in a year's time. There will be no complications because you did not go to Kansas City for the reading of the will or the inventory of the estate. The court costs and other estate expenses will not be deducted from your legacy if the estate has other property sufficient to pay them. There will not be an inheritance tax on your legacy because it is too small.

WORRIED YOU. — Your landlord would have to give you one month's notice to move unless there was an agreement to the contrary when you rented the rooms. Your landlord cannot legally put you out without notice. You would be entitled to the noonday meal if the landlord means the original value of stock whether the amount be $100, the usual amount, or $10.

WORLD WAR VETERAN. — If the estate has enough funds, the administrator will send you a check for the amount of the legacy, probably in a year's time. There will be no complications because you did not go to Kansas City for the reading of the will or the inventory of the estate.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

GRACE.—As you express willingness to consult a physician you should do so to determine the cause of the numbness that occurs in your fingers.

WORRIED.—You should consult a physician immediately, as the condition you describe is very unusual and may be the result of a malignancy that requires immediate surgical attention. Perhaps the high blood pressure is caused by the other condition. You should write to Olivia undergoing a complete examination.

L. J. — Varicocele results from venous pressure, and thickening of the walls of the veins composing its mass. Treatment consists in building up the general health, bandaging and operations to remove the distended veins. If the condition is not properly treated it becomes worse and results in partial or complete physical incompetence.

PARK AVE.—Dieting is the most reliable method of reducing high blood pressure. High blood pressure is not a disease, but a condition due to some disease of the organs or tissues of the body. We could not suggest any treatment without knowledge of the condition that is causing the high blood pressure. You should write to Olivia undergoing a thorough physical examination. We will send a proper diet list upon receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope

A SALESMAN

Who recognizes the advantage of selling on a commission basis. We are not looking for the safety type of salesman who wants to be guaranteed against himself, because we would be afraid to hire him for the reason that he knows himself better than we know him.

We have no $25,000 jobs for salesmen. No salesman can become one of our executives in a month. We are not looking for the quick, slick, cleanup salesman. We do not sell real estate, books, insurance, etc.

We do have average salesmen earning $8,000 yearly. We do promote salesmen with sales records to executives. We are looking for several men with specialty selling experience for Central West territory.

Let's get down to "brass tacks." We only want to interview salesmen who are sincere in their desire to make a permanent money-making connection.

Remember, no quick cleanups here, but an opportunity which you will immediately recognize after talking it over with us.

Telephone MR. W. E. BLACKSHAW, Sunday or Monday, at Hotel Statler, for a personal interview. Strict confidence observed.

HOGS AND CATTLE SHOW IMPROVEMENT

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS

	Last Week	Prev. Week	Year Ago
Cattle-Calves	90,636	18,348	26,420
Hogs	45,311	64,582	81,673
Sheep	11,241	7,092	8,488
Horses-Mules	2,010	486	2,257
Totals	120,187	90,408	118,838

*Holiday Saturday.

Hogs and cattle closed on a slightly improved basis at the St. Louis National Stock Yards last week. Sheep and the better grades of horses and mules ruled steady, and lambs developed weaker tendencies. Combined receipts were of fair volume at approximately 120,000 head for the six days. Cattle and calves made up about 25.52c of the run. The supply in this department was liberal Monday and moderate on light succeeding days. Following a substantial decline in the market Monday, cattle rallied in subsequent trading and more than retained the initial loss. Beef steers finished 25c higher for be period, with some of the heavier grades showing an even larger gain. The top was $10.75 per cwt, paid for both light and weighty consignments. The bulk of all sales was $8 to $9.25. Light yearling steers and heifers were more easily moved than the previous week and values ruled strong, spots 15 to 25c higher. Sales were largely at $6.50 to $9.50 and odd lots of choice animals reached $10 and $11. The cow market developed strength, with a large part of the run 15 to 25c up. The majority of the beef offerings cashed at $5.25 to $6 an best kinds scored $7 and better. Cutt cows sold late at $4 to $4.50 and canners $3.75 to $4. Bulls maintained a firm trend, with good to choice beef and bologna grades making $6 to $7, plain and medium bolognas $5 to $6.75 and common and canner grades $4.50 to $5.

The stocker and feeder trade was of larger volume due to increased re ts and a better demand. Most of the steers averaged steady to strong and me of the she-stock 15 to 25c higher. The bulk of steers brought $6.25 to $7.50 and the top was $8. Cows and heifers were most numerous at $4.50 to $6.50. Top veal calves sold at a popular price of $14.75, with a few at $15.25, the top. Veals, first cut, closed at $12 to $12.50, heavy calves $8.50 or $9, and southern canner yearlings $4.50 to $5.50.

Hog Receipts Light.

Receipts of hogs in the local market during the new year's opening week were of light volume compared with like periods recently. This feature had a strengthening effect on the market and sharp gains were scored in early and mid week trading although losses were allowed to depress toward the close. As a result the market in final dealings Friday was 15@25c under the precious six day period winding up on light hogs, heavy and butcher hogs however 25c higher. Packers have received strong support throughout the week from shipping interests and packers were forced to bid prices of choice butchers in most cases to secure supplies. Bulk of butcher hogs on the weighty order of 250 lbs. and better sold during the six days at $11.85 to $12 with sales at the high time ranging upward to $12.15 and $12.25. A larger proportion of this class was included among receipts than for some time past, 1,000 butchers from 190 to 240 lbs. sold mainly at $11.90 to $12.15 with best grades as high as $12.25. Lighter shippers ranged in price from $12.10 to $12.40, the latter figure representing the highest of the week. Quality in the native division was good throughout the week but some contributions from South and Southwest territory met with discrimination from buyers and prices were far from satisfactory to sellers, occasional sales noted in the $10 column where flesh was lacking. Native pigs were in fair demand and a good clearance was effected in this department, prices however closing practically steady with a week ago. Offerings of 130 to 150 lbs. scaled at $11.50 to $12.15 with lighter weights $11 to $11.50. Southern pigs were hard to move and prices ranged $10 to $11 largely. Some very plain kinds clearing as low as $9.50. Packing sows closed the period on a slightly lower basis, most closing deals in a spread of $10.50 to $10.75 with best kinds making $10.90. Stags at $9 to $10.75 were steady.

Receipts of sheep and lambs the past week at the local yards totaled better than 10,000 head, a generous offering for this time of the season. Arrivals the previous week were cut one day short by reason of the holiday, but totaled only a little better than 7000 head. During the corresponding week last year the offering aggregated 8488 head. Quality of arrivals graded good here. Western lambs making up a large part of the receipts. Natives too, were generally of good flesh, although some heavy weights showed lack of finish. Trade was ruled by a strong undertone throughout the week, with prices showing declining tendencies during the early part, a shortage of sensional and values are catching a big percentage of the fed Western lambs while others ranged $12.60 and $12.65. Butchers furnished the week's highest figure when they paid $13 late in the week for a small lot of choice quality natives. Bulk of natives cleared throughout the six-day period in a spread of $12 to $12.65. Cull lambs generally changed from day to day, majority of this class making $8.50 with occasional lots on hand at $9. Shorn were steady on most cases, although aged Southern wethers showed a 25c decline. Receipts in the wether division were light, yearlings ranging from $9.50 to $10 with some 2-year-olds at $8.50. These were fed Western stock. Southern aged wethers brought $6. Mutton ewes sold mainly at $5.50 to $6 if of desirable flesh, with the medium and heavy kinds clearing at $4 to $5. Choppers and bucks ranged $3 to $4 and canners $2 to $3.

Quotations: Slaughter stock—Good to choice lambs $12@12.75; butchers, $13; medium to good, $11.50@12; plain to medium, $10@11.50; cull and common, $8@9; skips, $5@7. Good to choice yearling wethers, $9.75 to $10.25; medium to good, $8.25 to $9.75; plain to medium, $8 to $8.25. Good to choice aged Western wethers, $7.25 to $8.25; Southern kinds, $4.75 to $6.75; fair to good fat ewes, $5 to $6; good to choice mutton ewes, $5.50 to $6.50; medium to good, $4.50 to $5.50; plain to medium, $4 to $4.50. Choppers and bucks, $2 to $4; canners, $1.50 to $2.50; fat goats, $2 to $2.50; thin to fair goats, $1 to $2. Fat kids, $4.50 to $5.50; thin to fair kinds, $2 to $4.

Horses and Mules.

Horse and mule receipts showed a good increase, aggregating 2000 head for the six-day period. The better classes of stock held about steady, although weakness was again evidenced in some of the inferior grades. Clearance was fair. WHEAT CLOSES LOWER ON THE CHICAGO MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Selling by spreaders slipped in the bull the bull market in wheat today. There was good buying early and outside trade showed a little expansion and mills were buying futures in a conspicuous way. But all this buying went for nothing when pressure developed. At the close the market was ¾ to ⅞ lower, and for the week ¼ higher to ⅝ lower.

The market made little progress during the week as trade was mostly local. Prices see-sawed back and forth. The Pattern Interview of Friday aroused some bullish enthusiasm, but enough buying developed to take care of week-end profit-taking.

Liverpool was ¼ to ⅜ lower at the close and the only explanation was weak-end realizing with prospects for heavier world shipments. Buenos Aires, however, closed ⅛ higher. The late selling here was mainly by local traders who were buying corn and this was believed to be the buildup of spreads previously placed. Broomhall cabled that the United Kingdom bought a cargo of Australian wheat afloat at 54 shillings per quarter and a cargo of 63½ pounds Barusso wheat shipment 2 months, 31 shillings per quarter. Moderate export demand was reported at the seaboard with 64,000 bushels of Gulf wheat sold there yesterday. Shipping sales were 10,000 bushels. Minneapolis stocks decreased 35,000 bushels for one day.

Corn was strong after an easy start. Trade was mostly local and the outstanding buying was credited to local traders who were said to be selling wheat and buying their purchases. Closing prices were ½ higher and for the week ¼ to ⅝ higher. May 79¾ to 80. July 83¾ to ¾. Shipping demand was slightly better with sales of 58,000 bushels reported. The cash situation is stronger and consignment notices are said to be falling off, indicating a reduction in receipts in the immediate future.

Oats were affected by the action of other grains. Shipping sales were 30,000 bushels. The close was unchanged to ¼ lower and for the week ¼ to ⅜ lower.

Provisions were firm early and then reacted under scattered commission house selling. Lard was 5 to 7½ lower and ribs 7½ higher.

Little Jobbing Trade Done in Potatoes—Easier Feeling.

ST. LOUIS PRODUCE ROW, Jan. 8.—Potato jobbing trade was light as usual at week-end and there was an easier feeling in the market. There were a few sales of

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"Passing of the initial week of 1927 has brought no fundamental change in the stock market, but it has uncovered the best market for bonds since 1913. An enormous volume of money always is released on payment of the January coupons but the forces at work for good sometimes are offset in the bond market at this season of the year, in part at least, by influences pulling in the opposite direction. Money became more plentiful after the year's turn 12 months ago, for example, but at that time the stock market was going strong and the prospects for a big upturn in business immediately were favorable. The inducements of the bond market were not so alluring in some respects as others.

Swing to Bonds.

"At the moment more investors have confidence in the market for bonds than in the market for stocks, however, and a larger proportion of the January reinvestment funds presumably will be put into these descriptions than a year ago. Transactions in the bond market yesterday ran to a total of $21,376,000, which represents the most active session since April 21, 1926, and exceeded the volume for the corresponding day last year by no less than 65 per cent. When such a daily volume is set beside that of $12,964,000 for 12 months ago, and the volume of stock market transactions is compared to that of early 1926, the drift of things may be seen plainly enough.

Day's Bond Sales $21,376,000.

"Thus on yesterday when the aggregate of listed bond sales rose to a new recent high of $21,376,000 as against $12,964,000 for the corresponding session a year ago the total stock transactions fell to 1,264,000 from 2,130,000 for the comparable session of the year previous. Funds that were moving into stocks a year ago now are going into bonds. That a substantial amount of money still finds its way to the speculative markets cannot be denied by any one who has followed the forward creeping movement of brokers' loans to a level nearer the peak for all time than the low of last spring, but the fact remains that the emphasis now is on seasoned issues, whereas in early 1926 it was on speculative securities. With money rates close to those for this week of last year the reason for the changed emphasis must lie somewhere else.

Why Bonds Preferred.

"It lies primarily in the attitude toward speculation and toward business. Investors that were reckless a year ago now are cautious. This is not to say that the authorities do not have faith in the fundamental position of industry. Most of them express such confidence openly and freely. What it does mean is that investors in general believe that the stock market is not so safe a place at the moment to put their money as the bond market, and, having learned a lesson none too pleasant, they prefer to play safe until the evidence of what the future offers is more clear. Forecasts for early 1927 virtually all expressed confidence in business, but in no instance did the prophecies reckon on a sharp expansion in the months immediately ahead.

Must Watch Comparisons.

"No development since the year's turn has arisen to change the outlook for good business in the year now on, although fresh signs of stabilization at a high level may be seen in the continued large volume of trade, the firmness of the commodity markets and the conspicuous absence of the clouds that usually appear late in a period of prosperity and give warning that the forces of depression are gathering. Sight should not be lost in the next six months of the fact that industrial activity early in 1926 ran to abnormal levels and that even if the record months of the year previous are not passed the failure does not reflect a downturn in business but an adjustment to a more normal position."

A. T. & T. Feature Saturday.

"Reinvestment buying of the better grade dividend paying stocks imparted a firm tone to the stock market again today and prices continued to point to higher levels. Motor shares were active and received good support in response to the successful opening of the National Automobile Show here today, but speculative movements were largely dominated by professionals. Good rails and industrials were chiefly influenced by investment buying. The flow of funds to this center was again reflected in heavy buying of high-grade bonds.

A. T. & T. Is Strong.

"Another flood of buying orders for investment securities forced several popular issues to the highest levels for the movement. American Telephone and Telegraph shares were in unusually keen demand, not alone as a result of speculative buying based on prospects of increased earnings from introduction of the radio phone but because of heavy reinvestment buying. Shares of the premier public utility soared to above 155 to the highest price at which they had sold since 1902, when a top of 149 was reached." Advance of this stock in the last several days has brought profits to hundreds of thousands of investors who hold the stock, including thousands of employes. In the face of some profit-taking, the rise has been maintained in a steadily expanding volume of sales. International Telephone and Telegraph shares strengthened in sympathy. Other investment issues, including many rails, worked higher, Rock Island establishing a new peak at 73 and Atchison rallying with New York Central.

Some Sharp Advances.

"Speculative issues participated in the display of strength and several sharp advances were recorded, but uniformity of the rise was less pronounced than in standard favorites. Allied Chemical pushed forward, while Commercial Solvents "B" shares were in brisk demand. Profit-taking in some of the stocks sponsored by pool operators caused scattered irregularities, but in the main an undertone of confidence prevailed and speculative selling for the decline dwindled.

Decrease in Surplus.

"Prospects of a setback in the easier money tone of the last week were held out in the weekly statement of the Clearing House banks, which revealed a decrease in surplus of $90,103,030, resulting in deficit of $69,015,900. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $139,379,000 as a result of completion of year-end settlements."

Exchange Trade Dull.

"Foreign exchanges showed a tendency to drift lower in dull trading. Sterling lost a small fraction, while lire fell back 2 points and French francs eased a trifle. Elsewhere in the European list changes were confined to narrow limits.

SHARES SOLD

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Total sales for the week on the New York Stock Exchange were 7,904,190 shares, compared with 8,250,800 last week, 11,264,000 same week a year ago and 10,946,590 two years ago.

MORE SETTLED TONE TO TRADE ON CURB

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Trading on the Curb Exchange today displayed a more settled tone with active support developing in the several groups. Victor Talking Machine scored an early gain of 3¼ points upon the announcement of a reconstruction of its capital issue. The new 7 per cent prior preferred appeared in the morning lineup with sales at 94¾ and 97¼ and the new common issue sold at 38 to 37.

American Cellulose made a further sale of 6 points and Singer Manufacturing rose 10 points. Motor shares were in better demand at moderate improvement. Public utility shares displayed quiet strength but lacked any outstanding feature.

There was increased activity in the oil division, with a firm undertone being in evidence. Price changes were generally narrow, however, and without marked significance. Texas Pacific Land sub shares sold up about ¾ point at the opening. Creole Syndicate was in supply at concessions in the later dealings selling from 27 to 25⅝.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The Evening Post in its conprritated weekly foreign exchange review says:

"The market all week was of an unusually quiet and orderly character, without any substantial disturbance of the position of the leading documents. Where some wide changes occurred they did not materially alter the position of the exchanges directly affected.

"Sterling fluctuated from $4.85¼ to $4.84¾ for demand, but the supply, both on the decline and in slight rallies, was small and without significance. French exchange held close to $3.95 and did not have a range of two points. Italian had a sharp break in the first half of the week, when it yielded 13 points to $4.38, but recovered part of the loss on small buying in the last two days.

"A special movement sent German exchange to 23.74, a fall of 10 points from the high level of the last week of the old year. This movement came immediately after announcement of the transfer of a block of ear marked gold from this country to Germany.

"Most interest in the week's trading was attached to the development of strength in Spanish exchange, which rose nearly 30 points to 13.56.

"Norwegian had wide fluctuations, crown checks on Oslo ranging from 26.38 to 25.50. Swiss and Dutch were both in supply from the end of the year level.

"The new Hungarian currency was taken as a basis for exchange transactions and trading in it exchanged hands freely in pengos, which have a parity of 17.49, and were traded in at 17.80 to 17.62.

"Far Eastern exchanges were generally firm. Japan holding at close to the same rate that prevailed immediately after the death of the Mikado was announced. Toward the end of the week a firmer tone developed, and cables were bought at 48.93.

"American Cellulose made a further sale of 6 points and Singer Manufacturing rose 10 points. Motor shares were in better demand at moderate improvement. Public utility shares displayed quiet strength but lacked any outstanding feature.

There was increased activity in the oil division, with a firm undertone being in evidence. Price changes were generally narrow, however, and without marked significance. Texas Pacific Land sub shares sold up about ¾ point at the opening. Creole Syndicate was in supply at concessions in the later dealings selling from 27 to 25⅝.

MOST ACTIVE BOND MARKET SINCE SPRING

Average Price Level Reaches Highest Point Since 1913 — Sale of $60,000,000 New York City Issue Feature of Week.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The first week of the new year witnessed the most active bond market since last spring and a higher average level of quotations than anything recorded since 1913. Prices for all grades of securities have moved upward, but with the largest gains in the higher yielding obligations foreign and domestic.

The Jan. 1 disbursement of interest and dividends broke all records and this money came back into the market has been the foundation of the advance. As events show the reinvestment demand has not been discounted in December as it so often is.

Statistics given out this week by the American Bankers Association showed that the total on deposit in all kinds of savings institutions in 1926 was $1,000,000,000 dollars more than that on deposit in 1925. Lest the reader think there is an error in this figure, let it be said that the aggregate savings accounts now are $24,-886,192,000 or an average of $211 for every man, woman and child in the country. The institutions which are entrusted with the care of this huge sum are perforce constant buyers of securities.

Turning to the features of the week in the market, the demand for the high yielding foreign dollar obligations stands out above anything else. Prices for this group as a whole now stand higher than at any time since trading in them was initiated after the war. New high records for individual issues have been numerous throughout the list. In this development French obligations have led the way largely because most of them are still selling at a level low enough below the callable powers to admit of substantial additional appreciation. This possibility of professional demand combined with high current income at the market proved irresistible.

The most important new financing of the week was the $60,000,000 in New York City 4¼ per cent corporate stock. The entire issue was disposed of to one banking syndicate at a price to net the city about 4.11 per cent and the syndicate sold out to investors within 48 hours on a slightly lower yield basis. That so large an amount should be placed so promptly notwithstanding the absence of unattractive return simply goes to show the confidence that the investment community has in the long range security outlook and the realization of the fact that steadily decreasing amounts of Liberty Bonds outstanding will make for the enhancement in value of high-grade municipals. Another feature of the week was the quality of the municipal bond which gives it an advantage over taxable corporate bonds more than sufficient to compensate for the difference in price.

Short Session Bond Trade Heavy.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Strength which characterized the bond market throughout the week continued in today's short trading period. Slight recessions in several of the popular lists were ascribed to the inevitable profit-taking. Trading was in unusually heavy volume for a half holiday session.

Establishment of new high records by Juo-Slavian 8's and Tokio 5's featured the foreign group. Other governmental and municipal liens showed narrow changes although moderate gains were recorded by some of the industrial issues, notably Holland-American G's and Fiat 7's.

High grade railroad liens displayed a firm undertone, except for a moderate set back in St. Louis and Southwestern first 4's, the fluctuations were rather narrow. Utility issues also showed narrow and irregular changes.

Public offering of $6,000,000 United Electric Co. of Missouri 7 per cent external first mortgage sinking fund gold bonds will be made next week by a syndicate headed by E. H. Rollins and Sons. The bonds will carry stock purchase warrants.

COTTON MARKET IS QUIET BUT GENERALLY STEADY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The cotton market was quiet, but generally steady today. March sold off from 12.95 to 12.88 in early trading, but improved, closing at 12.94. The general market closed steady at net advances of two to five points.

The opening was steady at an advance of two to seven points in response to favorable reports from the English goods market and after steady Liverpool cables. Some Southern selling and realizing was encountered on this initial upturn, and prices eased off a few points in early trading, selling down from 12.82 to 12.76 for January and from 13.14 to 13.08 for May. Offerings were light, however, and the market stiffened up again on renewed covering, while there also appeared to be a growing confidence locally that the rather unsettled weather outlook for the Southwest might develop into rains over the week-end.

January sold up to 12.85, while later months rallied to about the early high price and the close was within a point or two of the best on most positions. Private cables attributed the steadiness of Liverpool to covering and trade calling and repeated inquiry for cotton cloths from India, with more business from South America, although many offers received from India for yarn were unworkable.

The holiday in New Orleans and the small Saturday lack of arbitrage opportunity, with the Liverpool market closed before the opening, probably had a restricting effect on business here during the day.

Reviewing the situation, conditions look favorable for a continued improvement in business with a generally optimistic outlook for spring trade. It was considered that if textile trade developed as anticipated, spinners might re-enter the raw material market.

Very little trade buying was in evidence however, and the bulk of the small business was attributed to the evening up which accounts for over the week-end.

The afternoon cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 178,000 bales against 228,000 last year.

New York Cotton

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The feature of today's cotton market was the steady demonstration from trade sources on every slight decline. Prices maintained quotations within a narrow range and ended at high figures of the day at a 2 to 5 point advance over last night. Final trading was at highest levels of the past week and within a few points of last week's top. Spots advanced 5 points to 13.15c.

Weekly Metal Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—The steel market opened the new year quiet and the volume of business showed no material improvement. The outlook, however, was considered favorable as the potential demand was believed to be satisfactory. The railroads were said to be in need of new cars and the Automobile Show was expected to result in some increase in automobile production. Prices held steady.

Iron was quiet and steady with sufficient inquiry to assure future business.

The declining tendency of the copper market was apparently checked by the settlement at a unanimous buying interest at about 13¾ cent for electrolytic delivered at Connecticut Valley points, and the tone was steadier toward the end of the week. Several large consumers were said to be testing the market and the volume of inquiries brought in by the new low prices was considered as an indication that considerable business had still to be bought for February and March shipment.

These features encouraged a firmer attitude and some producers were asking 13¾ at the end of the week although metal was reported still available at the 13¾-cent level.

Tin average slightly steadier, but the tendency on the part of consumers continued to be to limit operations to requirements. Uncertainty regarding the future was said to be forcing caution on the part of buyers.

Lead was slightly steadier toward the close of the week, with trade somewhat better, buyers in some instances taking advantage of the more attractive selling schedule.

Zinc was steady and consuming interest better. The trade was awaiting the issuance of December statistics.

Antimony was strong and demand existed for delivery the first quarter of this year. Chinese shipments were being curtailed owing to floods and the political disturbances.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Following is a list of bonds traded in on the New York Stock Exchange today with the volume of sales and prices up to and including the close of the market. DEPOSIT BOX OF BANKER WHO KILLED HIMSELF OPENED

The safety deposit box of Frank D. Heller, cashier of the National Bank of Jerseyville, Ill., who killed himself Wednesday, when bank examiners started an audit of his books, was opened yesterday but nothing of value or importance was found, Paul J. Hamilton, attorney for the National Bank who was present, announced.

Nothing has been announced as yet about the financial condition of the bank, but it is known that discrepancies and irregularities in Heller's accounts have been discovered.

FOREIGN SECTION OF CITY IN CHINA LOOTED BY MOBS

American Residents of Kiukiang Taken on U. S. Gunboat Penguin, Dispatches State.

By the Associated Press.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 8.—Aroused by anti-foreign agitation, Chinese mobs have been rioting and looting the foreign section of Kiukiang since Thursday. Dispatches received here today said all foreigners were evacuating the city, which is 450 miles up the Yangtze River from Shanghai.

Coolie mobs flung down the barriers before the British concession Thursday and overran the district. Joined by Chinese soldiers, they looted the business district and dwellings of foreigners. Cantonese Government authorities helplessly looked on, while the mobs vented their anger upon the white people, the dispatches asserted.

The British relinquished their district to the rioters. On Thursday 258 British women and children, with a few men, boarded gunboats and started for Shanghai.

Another dispatch said American residents of Kiukiang had been taken on board the American gunboat Penguin Friday. All women and children departed from the city. Following the rioting Cantonese troops took charge of the concession.

Refugees began arriving here today from Hankow, 585 miles up the Yangtze, where infuriated Chinese mobs attacked the British concession Monday and Tuesday and since have held possession. Without money and with only the clothing they were wearing, some 300 British women and children were landed in this city. They left Hankow Thursday with but scant notice, some of the children being carried away wrapped in blankets.

The refugees made the long river trip in two badly overcrowded boats, the Poyang and the Loongwoo. One vessel equipped to accommodate only 20 foreign passengers carried 122. The other with a capacity for 30 had 180 aboard.

When the rioting Chinese took over the British concession at Hankow Wednesday, the British women and children of the district were hastily taken aboard ships in the river in commandeered launches. At midnight when the situation became worse orders were given the vessels to depart.

Have Your Prescriptions Filled Here
The best quality of drugs and chemicals is used in our prescription work for two reasons: First, we believe in the old saying "The best is none too good for the sick," and if a customer of ours is in need of medicine we feel that he is entitled to the best. Second, if we dispense only the highest quality of drugs the attending physician gets results from the medicine, the patient gets well, and our reputation in this specialized field grows.

PETERSEN STARS IN ATTACK

Crowd of 4000 Sees Game at Field House — Jayhawkers Sweep Their Way to Early Victory.

Kansas University, five-times winner of the Missouri Valley Conference basketball championship, started the 1927 campaign with a victory, defeating Washington University, 31 to 15 at the Washington U. Field House last night. About 4000 persons witnessed the contest, which opened the Valley conference campaign for the Bears.

At the end of the first half Kansas held a 17 to 7 lead.

Although Kansas was able to break through for 14 field goals, the Bears put up a tight defense, a majority of the Jayhawker field goals coming from mid-floor. In this defense, Kurz, backguard of the Bears, proved the outstanding star, and throughout the game he was a constant threat on the offense because of his fine dribbling. His play was easily the feature of the Washington team's work.

Peterson Wins the Tip-Off.

The Jayhawkers started in the lead and were never headed throughout the contest. Petersen, center, who stands more than six feet, gave his team the sphere on every tip-off, and this enabled Kansas to take give shots at the basket before the Bears even touched the ball. Petersen scored the first goal from a mixup under the Washington basket. In the first quarter, the score was 7 to 5, favor Kansas.

In the second period, however, Petersen and Schmidt, the high point getter of the night with six field goals and two free throws, found the range and while Washington was being held to two points, the quintet coached by Dr. F. C. Allen added 10 to its total, to lead 17 to 7 at the close of the opening half. Schmidt counted 10 of his 14 points in this half.

To start the second half, the Jayhawkers were given a real treat. It was furnished by the husky Kansans. With each of the five regulars figuring, the husky invaders scored seven successive baskets from midfloor, while the Bears were held without a point. All this came in the first five minutes and ended the Jayhawker scoring for the night.

Because of the "five-man" defense used by Kansas, the only team in the Missouri Valley to employ the system, the six field goals for the locals came from difficult angles. The Kansans also had a great advantage, as four of the five men stand over six feet. Kurz was the only local player to compare with the visitors.

Kansas Beats Bears, 31-15, in Conference Game

PETERSEN STARS IN ATTACK

Kansas University, five-times winner of the Missouri Valley Conference basketball championship, started the 1927 campaign with a victory, defeating Washington University, 31 to 15 at the Washington U. Field House last night. About 4000 persons witnessed the contest, which opened the Valley conference campaign for the Bears.

At the end of the first half Kansas held a 17 to 7 lead.

Although Kansas was able to break through for 14 field goals, the Bears put up a tight defense, a majority of the Jayhawker field goals coming from mid-floor. In this defense, Kurz, backguard of the Bears, proved the outstanding star, and throughout the game he was a constant threat on the offense because of his fine dribbling. His play was easily the feature of the Washington team's work.

Peterson Wins the Tip-Off.

The Jayhawkers started in the lead and were never headed throughout the contest. Petersen, center, who stands more than six feet, gave his team the sphere on every tip-off, and this enabled Kansas to take give shots at the basket before the Bears even touched the ball. Petersen scored the first goal from a mixup under the Washington basket. In the first quarter, the score was 7 to 5, favor Kansas.

In the second period, however, Petersen and Schmidt, the high point getter of the night with six field goals and two free throws, found the range and while Washington was being held to two points, the quintet coached by Dr. F. C. Allen added 10 to its total, to lead 17 to 7 at the close of the opening half. Schmidt counted 10 of his 14 points in this half.

To start the second half, the Bears were given a real treat. It was furnished by the husky Kansans. With each of the five regulars figuring, the husky invaders scored seven successive baskets from midfloor, while the Bears were held without a point. All this came in the first five minutes and ended the Jayhawker scoring for the night.

Because of the "five-man" defense used by Kansas, the only team in the Missouri Valley to enjoy the system, the six field goals for the locals came from difficult angles. The Kansans also had a great advantage, as four of the five men stand over six feet. Kurz was the only local player to compare with the visitors.

Illinois Beats Bear Swimmers

Washington Wins Four Firsts, Breaks Two Records, but Loses Meet.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Jan. 8.—With each team winning four first places, but Illinois scoring heavily in second gave Coach Manley's University of Illinois swimming team a 42 to 27 victory over Washington University of St. Louis here tonight.

Two Illinois records were broken during the meet, both by the visitors. Heideman made the 150 yards back stroke in 1:55 which lowered the former record made by Bowen of Illinois by four seconds. The Washington Medley relay team composed of Heideman, McCardle and Ledbetter lowered the Illinois record of 3 minutes 37 3-10 seconds by making the distance in 3 minutes 31 4-5 seconds.

Groh of Illinois, a Belleville boy, featured the meet by taking first in the 100-yard free style and fancy diving.

U. S. G. A. NUMBERS 1200 CLUBS AS RESULT OF MERGER

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 8.—The United States Golf Association, at its annual convention here today, absorbed the greens section, a separate corporation.

William C. Fownes Jr., of Pittsburg, president, and all other officers, with three exceptions, were re-elected.

The action of the parent body, completing the merger, followed approval of the proposal yesterday by the greens section, which was formed six years ago to conduct experimental and research work on growing of turf grasses and maintenance of courses. The active membership of the U. S. G. A. will be increased from 328 to 1200 clubs as a result of the fusion.

St. Louis U. Five Loses Its Fourth Straight Game

Billikens Drop Contest With De Paul University by 28-13 Count.

The St. Louis University basketball team suffered its fourth successive defeat of the season at the St. Louis U. gym last night, losing to De Paul University of Chicago, 28 to 13.

The Billikens were outplayed by the Chicago quintet in both halves, the count at the halfway mark being 14 to 9 in favor of the visitors.

Both offensive and defensive play of "Squinty" Hunter's boys showed weakness, the De Paul players breaking through regularly.

Leading scorers were Steinecke, left forward, and Fisher, center, for De Paul, with four field goals each. Fitzgerald, center, got a pair of field goals for St. Louis, and, with a free throw, led his team with five points.

About 900 persons saw the contest.

Flowers Impresses 2500 Boxing Fans in 4-Round Exhibition Against Lawson

Former Middleweight Champion Showers Opponent With Punches From All Angles— Scheduled to Oppose Loniski in Los Angeles on Jan. 22.

Theodore "Tiger" Flowers, the Fighting Deacon of Atlanta, "Gawgah," and recently dethroned middleweight champion of the world, strutted his stuff at the New Coliseum last night. About 2500 boxing enthusiasts and idol-worshippers of both black and white persuasion were impressed by the Negro phantom's pot-pourri of boxing, dancing, plain and fancy ducking and a smattering of acrobatics. His medium of entertainment was a four-round exhibition with his stable-mate, Bob Lawson, dusky light-heavyweight.

"Tiger" has generally been billed as the fastest and cleverest ring artist his race has produced in the past decade. Of course it is difficult to get a true index of ability through an exhibition; but he certainly looked like a combination of a flying dervish and a sleight of hand artist in his workout. He hops around with a Mordkin's grace and handles his maulies with such lightning speed that he's always about three punches ahead of you.

Sees Too Many Gloves.

Lawson, himself no slouch as far as agility goes, saw boxing gloves coming so fast at him that he didn't even try to avoid them. Happily for him, all hands were untaped and 12-ounce pillows were used. "Tiger," a southpaw hitter, uses his jabbing right for staccato tattoos that seem to come from a piston geared in high. Backhand, forehand, up, down, and straight from the shoulder he showers his punches with a grace and versatility. Against roommate competition he had an opportunity to show his tricks of trade and with that Etheopian love of the spotlight he grabbed it with glee.

Following his skit last night, he and Lawson entrained for Los Angeles where they fight on January 22. "Tiger" meets Leo Loniski while Lawson tackles an opponent yet to be named. Then will come a bout in Denver, followed by training in Atlanta for the tentatively agreed upon return match with "Micky" Walker, who took his title away from him through the much discussed decision of referee Yanger at Chicago.

Three Bouts End in Knockouts.

The four bouts that preceded on the all brunette program were in no way similar to the exhibition. They produced as lively a fiesta of fistic fierceness seen here or hereabouts since the levee was in its prime. Three of the quartet ended in knockouts; while the fourth, although starting rather tamely, ended in a lively give and take melee. Of good old gore there was plenty.

The semifinal bout which went the 10 round limit saw Kid Dusty of St. Louis and Speedy Moulden of New York battle at catchweight somewhere in the neighborhood of 165 pounds. Although Dusty swapped swings at what seemed a considerable weight disadvantage, the consensus gave him an edge on his opponent. Speedy's name belied him in that his movement was too ponderous to avoid the straight and true wallops of the Kid. The latter carried most of the fight and had far better judgment in placing his punches. There was very little give and take mixing, both of the battlers seeming to have a rather high regard for any potential haymakers.

The fighting of the evening was most furious when R. Johnson of St. Louis and Alfonse Nixon, otherwise known as Kid Shimmy, got together in the second bout, a six-round affair at 170 pounds. Here was an old-time barroom mix-up.

Landis May Call In League Heads In Scandal Case

Reported He Will Confer With Johnson and Heydler Before Making Decision.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—Confronted with the greatest problem of his baseball regime, Commissioner Landis rested up today after his strenuous inquisition of 37 players named in the 1917 scandal by "Swede" Risberg and "Chick" Gandil.

These two collectors of the Chicago White Sox "pool" for the Detroit Tigers in that year, departed [illegible] homes tonight.

Against their testimony of a "fixed" Labor day series between these two teams, Landis must weigh the story of Bill James, Detroit pitcher, to whom they gave the money.

"They said nothing to me about paying for a 'sloughed' Labor day series," James told the commissioner. "They told me the $850 was a present for the three games we won from Boston. Gandil told me during that Labor day series that the Sox would give $200 to each Detroit pitcher who beat Boston, and his testimony that he 'fixed' the Chicago-Detroit series with me is an absolute lie."

Johnson Remains Silent.

This was the climax of the story of the 35 players who denied the charges of Risberg and Gandil, and having heard this testimony, Landis apparently was content with the results of his inquiry. Almost immediately he cut the hearing short and announced he would give his decision at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

President Johnson of the American League, in which six clubs have players involved in the charges, tonight continued his policy of silence, but admitted he might have something to say after the commissioner's decision next Wednesday.

Johnson was placed on the major league advisory board at the annual baseball meeting a month ago and there were reports today that

2-YEAR DOCUMENT SAID TO CALL FOR AN ANNUAL SALARY OF $40,000

Former Cardinal Manager Is Named Captain of Giants, and Nets Him $500 Extra—Predicts Club Will Win Pennant Next Season.

By George W. Daley
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Signed to the fattest contract ever given a baseball player by the New York Giants—or any National League Club, for that matter—Rogers Hornsby today smilingly predicted that the Giants will win the pennant next season with one of the best teams the Polo Grounds have ever seen.

Hornsby Salary Second Highest In Big Leagues

ROGERS HORNSBY, former Cardinal manager, who today signed a two-year contract as a player with the New York Giants, is now the second highest paid athlete in the majors, outside of managers. Babe Ruth is the best paid.

Last season Ruth drew $52,000 for his services, but this year must be signed to a new document by Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the New York Americans.

It is expected that Ruth will receive at least $52,000 in 1927. Hornsby, according to reports from the East, will get in the "neighborhood" of $40,000.

The Texas Thumper had just completed a business session with John J. McGraw and he was very happy. He had agreed to play for two years, 1927 and 1928, with the Giants for a salary greater than the $30,000 a season named in the holdover contract which came with him when he was so suddenly traded to the New York club for Frank Frisch and Jimmy Ring two weeks ago.

Named Captain of Team.

Rogers had also been named by McGraw as the captain of the team. He has been invited to accompany the Giant manager on a holiday trip to Cuba, Miami and other southern points before the baseball training season opens. These things tended to make him frankly exuberant, but the fact that he will get more money for playing second base in New York than he received for playing and managing in St. Louis probably had the most to do with the smile that wreathed his face.

Charles A. Stoneham, president, John McGraw, manager, and Judge Francis X. McQuaid, treasurer of the Giants, would give out no figures as to the exact amount named in the contracts Hornsby signed—one for 1927 and one for 1928—but shrewd guessers placed the salary at $40,000 a year. In addition there is $500 per year extra for the captaincy.

Nothing was said about it today, but the general feeling is that the two-year term and the captaincy place Hornsby in line to succeed to the management of the Giants when McGraw decides to retire. He has said that he hasn't any idea of that at present, but if he should Hornsby is the Crown Prince.

Predicts Giant Victory.

"Yes, I think the Giants will win and that I will be in another world series in New York next fall, said Hornsby, after he had signed a new contract. "I predicted the Cardinals would win last spring and my prediction came true. Now I say the Giants will win, because I believe they will have the best team in the National League.

"I am tickled at the way I have been treated by McGraw. He does business the way I like to do it—yes or no, without any haggling or moaning—no small-town stuff. It didn't take us any time at all to come to terms.

"I am going to come to New York to live. I am going to St. Louis, then to Texas, and probably will go to Florida for a time. I will try to attend the annual dinner of the New York Chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association on Feb. 6.

Weighs 175 Pounds.

"The injury to my back which affected my playing all last summer seems to have disappeared. I am back at my regular weight, about 175, and feel that I will be able to play as well as ever—possibly much better than the last two years, for I won't have any worries about managing—and that is a real worry."

Hornsby was much interested in the reports from San Antonio as to the condition of Ross Young, right fielder of the Giants.

"I hope Young will be able to play his regular game. He is my idea of the best type of fighting ballplayer. I am informed by Bob Connery that Al de Vormer, the new catcher of the Giants, was the best catcher in the American Association last year, and think McGraw made a great move in getting him."

McGraw made the admission that correspondence has been held with Zack Wheat, former left fielder of the Brooklyn Robins, but said that he would have nothing definite to make public until Monday.

Hornsby Denies Rumor of Claim Against His Stock

Former Cardinal Manager Knows of No Effort to Block Sale.

"Absolutely nothing to rumor, which now is old," was Rogers Hornsby's telegraphic response from New York last night to the Post-Dispatch when he was asked about a report, current in baseball circles for several days, that Frank Moore, a Cincinnati betting commissioner, was contemplating action to block the transfer of Hornsby's stock in the Cardinals club.

Cincinnati newspaper men had heard Moore had retained an attorney to come to St. Louis Monday to file a suit to restrain Hornsby from disposing of his stock, pending settlement of their financial affairs. In Cincinnati sporting circles it was understood that Moore was claiming Hornsby owes him $92,000.

Moore, who operates extensively during the Latonia race season, was evasive when the Post-Dispatch telephoned him. At first he said that Hornsby did not owe him any money and that he was not trying to block transfer of the stock. "But I'll have an important announcement to make in a few days," he added.

Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, knew of no effort to block the sale. Moore and Hornsby once were close friends, the bookmaker having accompanied the Cardinals on their training trip last spring.

Hornsby holds 1167 shares, or about 10 per cent of the club's stock, for which he paid $43 a share, but which he now values at about $120,000. He sent his telegram just before boarding a train for St. Louis, after signing a contract with the Giants.

Guard Scores 17 Points.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Jan. 8—Adams, a guard, scored 17 points to help Fruitland High School defeat Cape Girardeau Central in a basketball game here, 33 to 14.

Sox Release Edwards.

CHICAGO, Jan. 8.—The Chicago Americans tonight announced the release of Jim Edwards, left-hand pitcher obtained from Cleveland two years ago, to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast League. Tom Gulty, outfielder, obtained from the Little Rock Southern Association club last year, was turned back to that club.

SOLDAN AND ROOSEVELT WIN HIGH SCHOOL BASKET LEAGUE GAMES

CENTRAL AND CLEVELAND LOSE OPENING GAMES

Victors in Each Case Outplay Their Opponents—Soldan's Passing Attack a Brilliant Feature.

The Public High School Basketball League season opened last night, when Soldan won a decisive victory from Cleveland High at the Cleveland gym by a 35-15 score, and Roosevelt defeated Central on the Beaumont High floor, 29 to 15. About 1000 persons watched the game at Beaumont and only 500 were present at Cleveland High.

Jarrett of Roosevelt, playing a running guard position, opened the scoring for the Rough Riders early in the opening quarter with an accurate shot from near the center of the floor. Willets of Central tied the count immediately after with a field goal. Jarrett duplicated his first shot soon after and Watts and Meier started the spurt that lead to a 15-to-5 score in Roosevelt's favor as the half ended.

Willets again opened Central's attack with a field goal soon after play resumed, but Watts offset the tally with a follow-up shot. Lorenzen's team opened up at this point and increased their total to 22 points before Corcoran or Callan's quintet caged two foul goals. Corcoran added three more points a little later and Hartman completed the Red and Black scoring with a free toss.

Central, champions of 1926, gave little indication of making a serious threat for this year's title although Callan's team showed some improvement in the second half. Roosevelt's lineup included six men from last year's squad while Forrest Willets was the only man in Central's team that returned from last year's champs.

Soldan Scores a Surprise.

Soldan surprised the 500 spectators, who witnessed the mauling of Cleveland, as it was expected that the two teams would be about evenly matched with two veterans on each five. Cleveland's experienced players, Joe Mowry and George Coover, lived up to their reputations, but the reserve strength was weak.

Soldan wasted no time in opening its scoring, which only let down when the West End five had run up an overwhelming lead. Soldan passed in, around and through Cleveland to score 14 points in the opening period, while the Carondelet team could only tally four points.

Constance registered two field goals in the second quarter, Pulford one, and three free throws, Soldan increasing its lead to 23, while Cleveland ended the half with 9 markers. Each one of the regular Soldanites, with the exception of Gordon, sunk a goal from the field, which, together with two free throws by Dorris, and two by Edmiston, ended Soldan's scoring at 35. Mowry's two field goals and a pair of free throws by Meier, were the only scores made by Cleveland in the final half.

Dorris was the mainstay in the Soldan attack, accounting for 13 of his team's points. Burt Constance was looping shots from all over the court, but his total was prematurely cut down, when he was ejected from the game on four personal fouls.

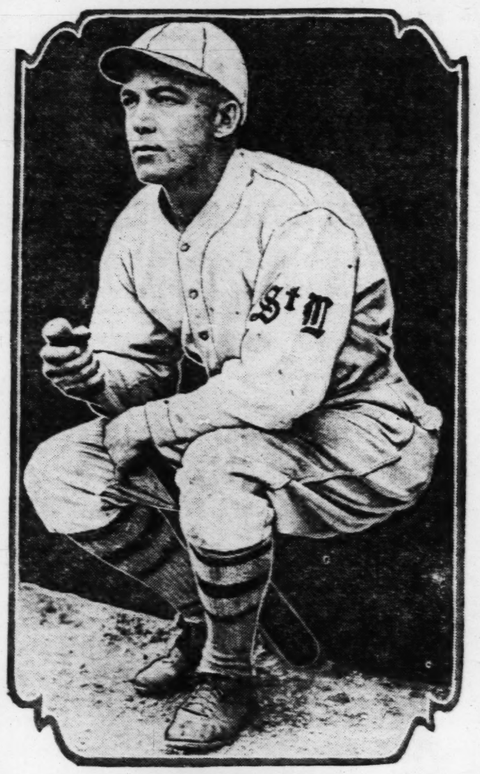
Urb Shocker's Mistake in Pitching to Southworth's Strength Gave Cards a Game

Ten Great Plays OF THE 1926 World Series: By John McGraw

Whether Yankee Hurler Was Careless or Daring, He Put the Ball Inside and at Right Height and Bill Hit a Homer.



BILLY SOUTHWORTH.

THE Post-Dispatch presents herewith the fifth of a series of 10 articles by John J. McGraw, in which the manager of the New York Giants describes what he considers the "Ten Great Plays of the World Series." McGraw is recognized as one of the great strategists of baseball and in this series he tells of the plays which figured most prominently in the Cardinals' victory over the Yankees in the play for the 1926 baseball championship of the world.

(Copyright, 1927.)

I DON'T know if Urban Shocker became careless as he was about to escape from a bad hole, or whether his control slipped, but he certainly contributed the first big thrill of the last world series when he pitched a ball a trifle inside and at the right height for Billy Southworth in the seventh inning of the second game at the Yankee Stadium.

Shocker was always a daring pitcher and it may be that he deliberately tried to surprise Southworth by pitching to his strength instead of his weakness. It was a fatal move.

At the beginning of that inning Bob O'Farrell had doubled to left center and Thevenow had followed with a single to left, O'Farrell cautiously stopping at third. All the Cardinals feared the throwing arm of Bob Meusel.

It is a good thing for younger ball players to remember that a powerful throwing arm is effective, even when it doesn't have to be used. Meusel's arm is a threat always.

Shocker Gets Two Men.

Shocker immediately bore down on Alexander and forced him to pop up to Lazzeri. He also used everything he had on Bottomley, who lifted a short fly to Meusel in left. Again the powerful throwing arm was too big a threat and the runners held their bases. With two out, following this dangerous start, it looked as if Shocker had escaped. He probably didn't realize that Southworth is one of the gamest and most versatile men in the game at the bat. We could all see that Billy had set himself to "pull" the ball to right if possible. That should have been a warning to Shocker. He probably didn't notice the position of Billy's feet.

Instead of toying with such a dangerous batter, Shocker almost clipped the corner of the plate with his first pitch and then cut one loose right in Southworth's groove.

Bill Won the Game.

Taking a full swing, well timed, Southworth caught the ball squarely on the nose and drove it into the right-field bleachers. It was very high, but the force of the blow carried it far enough to clear the screen and escape Babe Ruth, who was making a desperate attempt to get under it.

O'Farrell and Thevenow trotted home ahead of Southworth and the game was sewed up. That one hit established Southworth as a dangerous factor and put the Cardinals in the series.

On account of his being a veteran, I think the old-timers got more of a thrill out of that home run than if any other man on the St. Louis team had hit it.

Four Tied for Lead in Coast Golf Tourney

Cooper, Guest, Cruickshank and Watrous Each Score 141 for 36 Holes.

By the Associated Press.

EL CABALLERO COUNTRY CLUB, VAN NUYS, Cal., Jan. 8.—Four players shared low honors of 141 at the end of the 36 holes of qualifying play tonight in the $10,000 Los Angeles open golf tournament.

The leaders were Harry Cooper of Los Angeles, who won last year's tournament, Charles Guest of Lakeside Country Club, Hollywood; Bobby Cruickshank, New York, and Al Watrous of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Sixty-five of the 130 starters qualified for the 36 holes of medal play tomorrow which will decide the distribution of the big purse.

Play in today's 18-hole round started late and dusk overtook the last twosomes over the course.

Al Watrous, playing with George Von Elm, amateur national champion, slid into the class of the leaders with a brilliant 69, which, with a similar card by John Jones of Kelso, Wash., proved to be low card today.

One hundred and fifty-seven was the figure for 36 holes which let 65 players under the tape for the championship final flight tomorrow.

Allen Moser, 17-year-old lad of Wilshire Country Club, Las Angeles, turned in the low amateur gross score with a card of 146. He was in the bracket with the noted MacDonald Smith and Thomas Armour of the Congressional Country Club of Washington, D. C., winner of the Long Beach open tournament and only two strokes behind George Von Elm, national amateur champion.

Out .....444 434 534—35
In .....435 335 425—34—69

Other qualifiers were:

142: John H. Jones, Kelso, Wash.

145: Larry Nabholtz, Cleveland.

146: Allen Moser, Los Angeles amateur; Thomas Armour, Washington; Macdonald Smith, Great Neck, N. Y.

149: Dick Linares, Long Beach; Willie Hunter, Santa Monica; William Mehlhorn, New York.

151: William V. Creavy, Larchmont, N. Y.

'Journey to Net' Means Much In Tennis, Helen Wills Says

Rush Forward Must Be Made When Opponent Is Hard Pressed — Some Star Players at This Type of Play.

By Helen Wills

THERE are players who have good volleying form and excellent volleying strokes and who are yet not able to say that they play a satisfactory game at the net.

Helen Wills.

Knowing how to make the net strokes in tennis doesn't seem to be all there is in the net game. To be a good net player one must have something else. The beginner will probably not thing at first of this thing which is so important to forecourt play.

The realization has played for of it does not come until one has played for some time. I found it to be true when I was a beginner, and, as I look back, it seems that I was quite slow in realizing its importance.

When written down, the words "the journey to the net" do not seem to have much meaning, and yet when understood by the beginner, they mean a great deal. All players who have discovered this truth will tell you that this is a most important point in the volleying game.

Star Net Players.

ONE cannot say how many good volleyers are held down just because this principle hasn't been recognized by them, but it is safe to suppose that there are a great many.

Some players seem to have a natural inclination for the net position. I think the play of Vincent Richards illustrates this; also that of Jean Borotra, the French player. Among the women players Mrs. Godfrey, formerly Kathleen MacKane, stands out. These players appear to arrive at the net without apparent effort, just as if it were, in their minds, the logical place on the court for tennis to be played. Their feeling for the approach, or, as I have called it, "the journey to the net," seems almost instinctive.

But there are others who must cultivate this so that they can learn to do it in an easy manner, and so that it becomes natural with them. It is quite possible, and quite within the reach of those who can adapt themselves and have the desire and interest for practice.

Time for Rush to Net.

THE journey to the net" has a proper time and place. The judgment of the individual must decide the opportune moment for advance. There are, of course, hundreds of situations arising in the course of a game which present a proper opening for a net rally. The study of this particular phase of the game is fascinating, for it is here that the generalship and judgment of the player has opportunity for full expression.

The beginner asks: "What is the right time for a net approach?" The answer, generally speaking, might be this: The time for the net approach is at that point in the rally when your opponent is hard pressed or out of position in his court and you feel that you have time to get well in to the net to deal with his return successfully and decisively. If your opponent is hard pressed, for the time being, his return will probably not be as good or as accurate as it would have been otherwise. It is at these times that you have the best chance of winning the point.

THE HUNTING CALL

By ALEC MERMOD

MOST of us have cleaned out guns and have laid them aside, only to be taken out at the opening of the duck season next September.

Some few will continue shooting rabbits until Feb. 1 and a goodly number will get out when the squirrel season opens next June.

All of us will watch with a good deal of interest the news from Jefferson City after Legislature convenes, but we must not just watch and wait. We must be ready at a moment's notice to help fight any adverse bills that are sure to come up, and we also must help if we want an open season on doves.

Dove a Sporty Bird.

A great many hunters do not realize that the dove is a real "sporty" bird and not as easy to bring to bag as they think, neither do a great many know that the dove is a good table bird.

Let some of our hunters who have never shot any doves plant themselves near a feed lot where the birds have been feeding for some time and try their skill. They will find that it's not so easy as it looks. We recall an incident in Colorado some 30 years ago, when one of our prominent trap shots paid us a visit.

He had never shot doves, but was a good quail and snipe shot, and ranked close to the top as a trap shot.

We took this chap out and took our stand near the mouth of a canyon, out of which the doves came to feed. A few stragglers commenced to fly by at a moderate speed, and our friend had no trouble in getting them, and complained of the tame sport, but when the flight started, the birds flying at about 60 miles an hour, a different tune was sung, our trap shooting visitor was stopping about one bird in ten, and only after he had fired about 100 shots did he begin to kill any birds.

He Gets a New Idea.

This man returned East with a different idea about dove shooting.

It is bad enough to have a Federal law that sets so late a date as Sept. 1 before we can shoot doves (the season should be Aug. 15), but when our own State puts the dove on the song bird list, it's time we had a change.

We, in Missouri, protect the dove so that our Southern neighbors may have all the more to slaughter. Some people who do not shoot nor care anything about game have a mawkish sentiment about the dove, saying the bird should not be killed and should be held sacred because it was the dove that brought a given twig to the Ark after the flood.

There are a good many species of doves, so why should we pick out the turtle dove as the kind that carried the twig?

Value Small to Farmer.

As we have stated before, the dove is of very little value to the farmer and there is really no economic reason for protecting this bird which affords good sport in bringing to bag and makes such a good table bird.

When talking to one of our hunters last week about the scarcity of birds, he expressed the opinion that both quail and rabbits died in large numbers on account of being infected by some disease, stating that he had found a great many dead birds during the shooting season.

His was the first account of this kind we have had and we cannot reconcile ourselves to this idea. The writer covered a great deal of territory and did not run across any dead birds (nor many live ones for that matter).

The fact that there were no quail roosts to be seen is proof positive that there had been no birds in the vicinity for some time.

Seen Any Dead Quail?

If any of our readers saw any dead quail (during the hunting season) that in their opinion had died from some disease we would like to hear from them.

Quail dying from any disease would be found close to their roosting place and close together.

A number of years ago an epidemic of some kind destroyed hundreds of birds in Northern Arkansas and in nearly every instance the whole covey was found dead on the roost, while others died when leaving, being strung out for a distance of 25 or 30 feet.

We note with regret that the Game and Fish Department has decided to introduce the imported pheasant throughout Missouri, for if the pheasants thrive and multiply to any extent our quail will be a thing of the past, for where other States have planted pheasants in a quail or chicken country the results have been very unsatisfactory.

Killing an Eagle.

Several years ago when small-caliber, high-power rifles were new and untried, a friend was showing an imported rifle to several cow men gathered at the Stirup Ranch in Colorado, he was telling us how powerful this rifle was and how far it would kill, when an eagle was seen to light on a point of rocks just a mile from where we were standing, the owner of the rifle said, "I will scare that eagle off the rock in five shots," we all doubted his ability to do this. Of course, at the distance the eagle was not visible, but we all knew about where he had stopped, so "Sandy" fired the five shots but the eagle did not move. As we were anxious to know how close to the eagle the shots struck we sent one of the boys down to have a look and report.

The boy came back with the eagle.

National Cue Tournament by Wire Suggested

Peterson Thinks Plan, if Tried, Would Decide Real Amateur Champion.

Charles C. Peterson, St. Louis fancy shot billiard expert, has a novel idea, by which he hopes to decide a true national amateur champion. The idea is to hold a telegraph tournament, in which a number of players could be contestants, and decide the title on the number of games won and lost. Peterson has written various billiard keepers throughout the country asking their views.

Peterson is convinced that a tournament of the kind he suggests could be run off successfully and in addition, would do away with the traveling expenses, which hold present amateur tournaments to a minimum entry total.

"A telegraph tournament would do away with traveling expenses and would reduce the handling of a title event to a trifling sum," Peterson said in discussing the idea. "I think a telegraph tournament would be one of the most popular and constructive events ever staged in billiards."

20 Fundamental Shots.

Conditions for the tourney would be the same in each city. Peterson has charted 20 fundamental player shots. In each city, the shots would be placed on the table according to the key and the player would negotiate the shots. Then he makes the first one, he would continue until he scored 100 points at straightrail, then go on to No. 2 and so on until the 20 are completed. Under the conditions a maximum score of 200 could be made.

Following each match, the player's score would be sent to a central headquarters, so that an accurate account of the games could be kept.

Selection of the player to represent the various cities would be left to the roomkeeper, the only restriction being that the player must be an amateur. Each entrant would be required to oppose each other entrant once.

Prizes for First 10.

Peterson's idea is to charge an entry fee of not more than $25 for each room and would provide prizes for the first 10 to finish in addition to a cup to the winner, which would class the event with the outstanding championships of today.

"I think the idea has great possibilities and I believe it could be worked up in three cushion or other styles of billiards. But above all it would decide a really representative national amateur champion and would appeal to the public as well as the star player in that it would be highly instructive," Peterson said.

Peterson's letters were sent out early last week, but to date he has received answers from the various men he asked to join in the tourney.

with both gentlemen standing toe to toe and swinging from the shoulders. Johnson had the better of the first two rounds but couldn't stand the gaff. Flowers took all the St. Louisan could offer and knowing that he couldn't do any more went to work in a workmanship manner. Twice Johnson was groggy but always came back for more. Flowers' tan torso took on a vermillion hue from body punches and his face was wabbled. Then with 25 seconds of the fifth round to go, Flowers planted a right to the jaw that did the job.

In the third fight, Kid Edwards went down to the canvas for the count right to the chin, ably delivered by Lawrence Hawkins. The blow came in the fifth round of their scheduled eight-round battle at 118 pounds. Hawkins, a clever Inky with a monotonous left, won for the first four rounds, but the latter stayed in his shell and prevented further damage. Through a tactical error, Inky decided to mix it up the fighting in the next round and suffered the consequences in an amazing dispatch.

The opening bout was declared a draw as a four-round affair between George Willman and Billie Wilson, both of St. Louis at 140 pounds. Billie Willie upset the dope by putting a curtain-lowering punch above Willman's heart in the first session. Walter Halsey

Webster Groves Girl Won a Set From Mrs. Chapin in Title Tournament Last Season and Later Captured State Honors—Mrs. Baehr Placed Second.

By Davison Obear.

The ranking committee of the Missouri Valley Tennis Association has selected Ruth Bailey, Webster Groves school girl, as No. 1 in this territory for the year 1926. Miss Bailey succeeds Mrs. Melicent Endicott Baehr.

In the Missouri Valley championship for women at Kansas City last June, Miss Bailey made a splendid showing against Mrs. Charlotte Hosmer Chapin, No. 9 ranking player of the United States in 1925. Mrs. Chapin won the match but Miss Bailey took the first set, 6—2, and was leading 4 to 1 in games in the second set when the former Pacific coast star rallied to win, 6—4. Mrs. Chapin's greater experience enabled her to win the third and deciding set, 6—1.

Won State Title.

Miss Bailey participated in the Missouri State event at St. Joseph the week following the Missouri Valley championship. She won the singles title, defeating Mrs. Baehr in the final round. Unfortunately, Miss Bailey decided to rest on her laurels and with an idea of changing her game, did not play in any local events during the remainder of the season.

Mrs. Baehr, placed No. 2 in the ranking, was semifinalist in the Missouri Valley event, finalist in the Missouri State tournament and later in the season won the St. Louis District championship. Lottie Hagemeyer, a former Municipal champion, reached the semifinals of the Missouri Valley and Missouri State events and was finalist in the St. Louis District championship.

The next four places in the singles list are given to Kansas City players. All of these players distinguished themselves in tournament play in 1926. Mrs. Marjorie Hires Gage and Mrs. Evelyn Seavey Park were defeated by Mrs. Baehr and Miss Hagemeyer in both singles and doubles at Kansas City. Emma Tobin, another Kansas City player, won the Kansas State title

LANDIS MAY CALL IN LEAGUE HEADS IN SCANDAL CASE

Landis might call in his confreres on that body—Johnson and President John Heydler of the National League. Not since the "Black Sox" scandal of 1920, when Landis was called in to clean up the game, have the major leagues faced such a disclosure, although the events antedate the "crooked" 1919 world's series. In that affair, the American League acted alone to banish the eight suspected White Sox.

In this case, there are involved more than a score of players still on the roster of the American County Team Comes From Behind in Second Half—Schneider Injured.

Coming from behind in the second half, Webster High School defeated Beaumont High at basketball last night, 17 to 13, on Webster's floor.

The score at the end of the first half was 9 to 6 in favor of Beaumont, wild shooting costing Webster many points in this period.

Captain Schneider of Beaumont was injured in the opening half, and had to leave the game.

Poor passing on both sides marked the contest. The stars were Green, center, and Sample, forward, for Webster, and Weiss, forward, and Rost, center, for Beaumont.

PAOLINO WILL BATTLE HANSEN ON THAT DATE

Promoter to Hold Two Indoor and Three Outdoor Shows for Season—Berlenbach Must Beat McTigue.

Baltimore and Soldiers' Field Offered Rickard

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.

STADIUMS in various parts of the country already are being offered to Tex Rickard for the bout in which Gene Tunney will defend his heavyweight championship in September.

Baltimore is the first to toss its area into the bidding, in spite of the fact that Rickard virtually has decided to stage all his outdoor shows in the Yankee stadium here. Frank A. Hancock, manager of the Baltimore stadium, advised Rickard today of the availability of that site, pointing out it can accommodate 137,000 for boxing. This would exceed the capacity of the Sesquicentennial stadium at Philadelphia, which housed 125,000 for the Dempsey-Tunney battle.

Chicago, where Soldiers' Field seated close to 110,000 for the Army-Navy game, also has offered a prospective battleground.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—With the heavyweight champion, Gene Tunney, and all of his outstanding challengers except Jack Delaney, under lock, barrel and key, Tex Rickard today began shaping his plans for elimination bouts that will pave the way for a title match in September at the Yankee Stadium.

The promoter disclosed a program calling for two additional indoor shows, featuring heavyweights, and three outdoors, all at the stadium, one in May, the second or "semi-finals" in July and the "final" on or about Sept. 15. Originally, Rickard planned only two big outdoor shows, but the unusual wealth of heavyweight material has prompted him to change his schedule.

Paolino Meets Hansen.

Bouts in which Paul Berlenbach will meet Jim Maloney and Jack Sharkey oppose Paolino, the Spaniard, or Knute Hansen, probably will furnish the first major elimination tests late in February or early in March at Madison Square Garden. Paolino and Hansen are matched Feb. 7 as a preliminary, while Berlenbach must dispose of Mike McTigue on Jan. 24 to remain in the running.

Although Rickard has not yet reached an agreement with Pete Reilly, manager of Jack Delaney, the promoter is confident Delaney will figure later in the program. Jack Dempsey is counted upon by Rickard to meet the winner of the eliminations in the July show. Rickard, incidentally, cleared up an uncertainty which has been reflected in the wide variety of reports as to the exact financial terms for Tunney's first title defense.

$400,000 Sure for Tunney.

Tunney, the promoter disclosed, will receive a flat guarantee of $400,000 and 40 per cent of the gross receipts in excess of $1,000,000. This would net the champion as much as Dempsey received in the battle of the Sesquicentennial last, September, $770,000, if the gate receipts of the next title bout reach the Philadelphia figure of approximately $1,900,000.

The terms of Tunney's new contract with his manager, Billy Gibson, also came to light today. Gibson will receive only 15 per cent of Tunney's boxing earnings and 10 per cent of the champion's theatrical profits. In addition his authority is curtailed, all decisions being reserved by Tunney so far as fights and terms are concerned.

BETHLEHEM WINS FROM COATS AFTER BEING OUTPLAYED

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 8.—Outplayed for three quarters of the game, Bethlehem Steel rallied late in the second half to snatch a victory from J. and P. Coats in an American Soccer League game here today by the score of 2 goals to 1. That Bethlehem did not have to overcome a bigger margin than a one-goal lead to win can be attributed to the brilliant work of Edwards in goal for the Bethlehem eleven. Edwards handled twelve assists as well as Parks, in goal for the visitors. One of his efforts was to save a penalty kick from Harvey.

Bethlehem scored early when in the first five minutes of play a beautiful movement contributed by Jeap, Stark and Gillespie, ended when Stark slipped the ball to Gillespie at the very goal mouth and the Bethlehem center forward had little trouble shoving it through.

Coats retaliated with a dash that fairly carried the Bethlehem defense off its feet. Harvey and Curtis, the outside wingmen, ran rings around the defense, but fortunately Edwards was at his best in handling well meant shots. With the exception of Carnithan and McGregor, the Bethlehem defense was leaky as a sieve.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Jan. 8.—Andrew "Boy" Charlton, 19-year-old Australian swimmer, today set what is claimed a new world record for 880-yards, covering the distance in 10 minutes and 32 seconds.

with both gentlemen standing toe to toe and swinging from the shoulders. Johnson had the better of the first two rounds but he couldn't stand the gaff. Shimay took all the St. Louisan could give and knowing that he couldn't work any more went to work in a real workmanship manner. Twice bell time Johnson was groggy; but always came back for more. His tan torso took on a vermillion hue from body punches and his head wabbled. Then with 25 seconds of the fifth round to go, Shimay planted a right to the jaw that did the job.

In the third fight, Kid Inky went down to the canvas from a right to the chin, ably delivered by Lawrence Hawkins. The blow came in the fifth round of their scheduled eight-round bout at 118 pounds. Hawkins jabbed Inky with a monotonous frequency for the first four rounds but the latter stayed in his shell avoiding further damage. Through some tactical error, Inky decided to open up the fighting in the fifth and suffered the consequences with an amazing dispatch.

The opening bout was designed as a four-round affair between George Willman and Billie Willie, both of St. Louis at 140 pounds. Billie Willie upset the plans by putting a curtain-lowering blow above Willman's heart in the third session. Walter Haisner referee.

RICKARD PAOLINO WILL BATTLE HANSEN ON THAT DATE

Promoter to Hold Two Indoor and Three Outdoor Shows for Season—Berlenbach Must Beat McTigue.

Baltimore and Soldiers' Field Offered Rickard

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.

STADIUMS in various parts of the country already are being offered to Tex Rickard for the bout in which Gene Tunney will defend his heavyweight championship in September.

Baltimore is the first to toss its area into the bidding, in spite of the fact that Rickard virtually has decided to stage all his outdoor shows in the Yankee stadium here. Frank A. Hancock, manager of the Baltimore stadium, advised Rickard today of the availability of that site, pointing out it can accommodate 137,000 for boxing. This would exceed the capacity of the Sesquicentennial stadium at Philadelphia, which housed 125,000 for the Dempsey-Tunney battle.

Chicago, where Soldiers' Field seated close to 110,000 for the Army-Navy game, also has offered a prospective battleground.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—With the heavyweight champion, Gene Tunney, and all of his outstanding challengers except Jack Delaney, under lock, barrel and key, Tex Rickard today began shaping his plans for elimination bouts that will pave the way for a title match in September at the Yankee Stadium.

The promoter disclosed a program calling for two additional outdoor shows, featuring heavyweights, and three outdoors, all at the stadium, one in May, the second or "semi-finals" in July and the "final" on or about Sept. 15. Originally, Rickard planned only two big outdoor shows, but the unusual wealth of heavyweight material has prompted him to change his schedule.

Paolino Meets Hansen.

Bouts in which Paul Berlenbach will meet Jim Maloney and Jack Sharkey oppose Paolino, the Spaniard, or Knute Hansen, probably will furnish the first major elimination tests late in February or early in March at Madison Square Garden. Paolino and Hansen are matched Feb. 7 as a preliminary, while Berlenbach must dispose of Mike McTigue on Jan. 28 to remain in the running.

Although Rickard has not yet reached an agreement with Pete Reilly, manager of Jack Delaney, the promoter is confident Delaney will figure later in the program. Jack Dempsey is counted upon by Rickard to meet the winner of the eliminations in the July show. Rickard, incidentally, cleared up the uncertainty which has been reflected in the wide variety of reports as to the exact financial terms for Tunney's first title defense.

$400,000 Sure for Tunney.

Tunney, the promoter disclosed, will receive a flat guarantee of $400,000 and 40 per cent of the gross receipts in excess of $1,000,000. This would net the champion as much as Dempsey received in the battle of the Sesquicentennial last September, $750,000, if the gate receipts of the next title bout reach the Philadelphia figure of approximately $1,900,000.

The terms of Tunney's new contract with his manager, Billy Gibson, also came to light today. Gibson will receive only 15 per cent of Tunney's boxing earnings and 10 per cent of the champion's theatrical profits. In addition his authority is curtailed, all decisions being reserved by Tunney so far as fights and terms are concerned.

BETHLEHEM WINS FROM COATS AFTER BEING OUTPLAYED

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Jan. 8.—Outplayed for three quarters of the game, Bethlehem Steel rallied late in the second half to snatch a victory from J. and P. Coats in an American Soccer League game here today by the score of 2 goals to 1. That Bethlehem did not have to overcome a bigger margin than a one-goal lead to win can be attributed to the brilliant work of Edwards in goal for the Bethlehemites. Edwards handled twice as many shots as Parks, in goal for the visitors. One of his efforts was to save a penalty kick from Harvey.

Bethlehem scored early when in the first five minutes of play a beautiful movement contributed by Bell, Stark and Gillespie, ended with Stark slipped the ball to Gillespie at the very goal mouth and the Bethlehem center forward had little trouble shoving it through. Coats retaliated with a dash that nearly carried the Bethlehem defense off its feet. Harvey and Curtis, the outside wingmen, ran around the defense, but fortunately Edwards was at his best handling well meant shots. With the exception of Carnihan and McGregor, the Bethlehem defense was leaky as a sieve.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Baseball Is Sound.

EXTREMISTS are raving that the end of baseball is in sight. That is because a few ancient scandals are being aired, and because the offenses of a few individuals, scattered over half a century, are being charged against the entire baseball structure, instead of to the mere individuals responsible.

Baseball is no more at fault than any other American institution. It has its share of black sheep and its occasional scandal. But, in proportion, it probably has fewer skeletons in its closet than any other institution of equal rank.

Run through the scandals that have transpired in banking, in business, in our national Government, in the enforcement of the eighteenth, amendment of our Constitution, in amateur sport world and even in religious life, and then show us what right any one of them has to cast a stone at baseball.

Baseball is whiter than snow compared to many of the examples that might be drawn from our daily environment. If baseball, as an organized enterprise, is near collapse, as has been forecast, then why not the collapse of society in general?

BASEBALL has come up in 50 years in a manner to shame some of its critics. Step by step it has cast aside those practices and customs of the dark ages, advancing and housecleaning all the time. Its officials have done everything that could be asked to stamp out evils such as beset any enterprise which involves a lot of men of unknown character and a lot of money as well.

Baseball's Worst Evil.

IF there is one thing that contributes more than another to retard the complete clarification of baseball's atmosphere, it is the prevalence of gambling in various forms on all ball clubs.

A ballplayer is a full-blooded person with lots of money—too much for young men—and a lot of time in which to get into trouble. When they are not playing poker or shooting craps, many of them are betting on horse races or something else.

This situation exists on every major league club in the country to a considerable degree.

Formerly managers prohibited poker for big stakes. They prohibited craps and bets on horse racing entirely. They contended that the mind of the player could not be on his job if he were in a position to win or lose big money.

It Happened in St. Louis.

THEY were right. The writer can cite one instance told by an official of the Cardinals that happened during the past season, when the race was hot. The official was seated in a box just over the players' bench. The game was close and the public interest keen.

"In the seventh inning," the official said, "I heard one of the players remark: 'I wonder if that second race has been run yet—I'd like to know if our horse went over.'

"Let's send out and get a paper and find out,' his companion suggested.

"Imagine that, in the middle of a hot game and a hot flag race! And that's what betting does to a baseball club. The minds of those players were more on their money than on winning the game and earning their salaries."

Put It in the Contract.

OWNERS have contemplated putting an anti-gambling clause into their contracts. It is not generally known, but one reason why Hornsby tore up his one-year contract offer from the Cardinals was that a clause in it prohibited him from gambling or from associating with those who gambled.

Whether such contracts would hold good is questionable. In the case of the majority, as with Hornsby, it would be merely construed as a restriction of personal liberty and resented. Probably it could not be enforced, although the mere presence in a contract of such an inhibition would serve to remind the player that the game was objectionable to his employer.

Player Owes Something.

THE ball player has not yet come to realize his obligation to the sport as well as to his employer. Persons have become accustomed to gossip about players who gamble and to suspect them. That reacts and causes suspicion against the entire sport.

In the banking industry an employe suspected of any act like gambling or other dissipation is promptly given his release. His acts bring suspicion upon his bank.

The necessity of protecting the bank's name is no greater than the need of guarding the good name of baseball, or any other quasi-public enterprise.

The Munn-Lewis Series.

WAYNE (BIG) MUNN and Strangler Ed Lewis are rolling along in high with their oft-repeated skit "Get the Money." The pair wrestled in Chicago last week before a 7000 crowd, which seemed to enjoy the exhibition of the fat boys.

We quote from a Chicago writer who animadverts on the show:

"The attendance and enthusiasm indicate that fans still like their sport tricked out. Lewis and Munn put on a good burlesque. They ought to, being so well-acquainted with each other, having met twice in Kansas City, twice in Denver, once each in Tulsa, Houston, Vernon and Michigan City, not mentioning other localities.

"Lewis was so hog-fat and his legs were in such condition that he would have been easy prey for a regular wrestler, but he was able to put on his show with his headlocks, slides to the rope and handsprings and the crowd actually liked it."

And they have the nerve to talk about baseball scandals in Chicago!

Wait till they start a squad of investigators trailing the wrestling circuses. If you have never smelled a real scandal you'll need a gas mask then.

Warm Welcome For Tilden Here

Committees Appointed to Escort Big Bill and Junior Coen.

William T. Tilden will be given a warm welcome when he arrives in St. Louis at 5 p. m. Wednesday, to appear in a tennis exhibition later in the evening at Washington University field house. Colleges Should Take Up Soccer, Ratican Urges

Wellstons Play Ratican Eleven In Feature Today

THE Wellstons, leaders in the St. Louis Soccer League, will oppose the Raticans in the second and feature game of the double-header at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. The Ben Millers and White Banners battle in the opener, starting at 2 o'clock.

The last meeting between the Wellstons and Raticans resulted in a tie. Both elevens will use their full strength. The Millers are favored to defeat the crippled White Banners, at present tied with the Raticans for last place.

Ribby Murphy and John Cradock will handle the game.

The greatest boost soccer could receive in this city would be for the high schools and colleges to take up the sport, in the opinion of Harry Ratican, one of the best forwards ever developed in the city. Ratican played with several major teams in the East and also served as coach of the Navy eleven at one time.

"If the schools and colleges would take up the game, it would help greatly," said Ratican. "However, athletic directors are loathe to take up the sport. This in the main is due to the fact that very few know anything about soccer. But I still think the system at old Christian Brothers' College was the best.

"Here we played soccer all the time. And we also had good teams in other sports when I attended the school.

"I have found that if a man is a good soccer player he can play any other sport well. For that reason I think the schools and colleges should take up the game. It not only would add another form of athletic endeavor, but it would give the athletes of the schools something to do, say from Thanksgiving day when the regular football campaign closes until the basketball season opens.

Prefers Soccer to Rugby.

"In between these dates, no fewer than six contests could be played. The Eastern schools, such as Princeton, Penn, Penn State and others have adopted soccer as a major sport. If St. Louis U. and Washington took up the game, intercity games could be arranged and I am confident these battles would draw big crowds.

"I have played both college football and soccer and of the two I think soccer is the better. In soccer a man can go along for years. But how many college football players are able to carry on after they have been out of college say for five years?

"If the colleges took up the game, it would not alone help keep the athletes in condition during a dull season, but it would put the game on a higher plane in this city."

Weakest in Defense.

Ratican thinks that the greatest weakness with the present-day soccer is defense.

"All of our teams have good offences, but they lack defense. This is one phase of the game we must work upon. The elevens can get goals, but usually they can't keep the other fellow from tallying. Opposing forwards are able to get the sphere too often without a fight from the defenders."

ST. L. U. HIGH WINS FROM EVANSVILLE TEAM BY 17-13 SCORE

The first inter-sectional game played by the St. Louis University High School, resulted in a 17 to 13 victory for the young Bills, over the Peet's Memorial High School of Evansville, Ind., last night on the St. Louis University High School court. The ability of Daly to follow through long shots enabled him to score five field goals, to lead the local team's attack.

The defensive work of both teams was splendid. The first half ended with the score tied at 7 all. The Junior Billikens' attack opened after the intermission, and led by Daly, managed to draw away from the boys from Indiana. Klenck scored three goals from the floor, to be high-point man for his team.

Jimmy Smith to Bowl in Exhibition Here Wednesday

World's Champion to Show at Grand-Arsenal Alleys—Seven Local Women Will Compete in 12-Game Title Tourney in Chicago Next Week.

Jimmy Smith, world's bowling champion, will be seen in action here next Wednesday, when he appears in exhibition matches at the Grand-Arsenal alleys, Wednesday afternoon and evening. Smith has been appearing in matches in the Far West and this will be his first showing in St. Louis since he participated in the Petersen Classic on the Delmar Recreation alleys earlier in the season.

During his tour to the Pacific Coast and back, Smith appeared in many cities, meeting all comers under all conditions and ran up an average of better than 200 for all his engagements. Last season, showing in 151 cities, he rolled 1851 games and had a grand average of better than 207.

Smith holds many records. Twice he has won the A. B. C. all-events. He was Middle West all-events champion in 1919, and twice he was Wisconsin State champion. In 1911, in the Canadian title tourney, he rolled 279, 236 and 256 for a record total of 771. Last season at Denver he averaged 243 for 30 games.

During his career he has bowled 16 perfect games. Smith's present tour will occupy all his time until he competes in the American Bowling Congress tourney at Peoria, Ill., in March.

St. Louis Women Enter.

Seven St. Louis women bowling stars will compete in the L. V. Estes individual championship tournament to be held at the Bensinger Recreation, Chicago, Jan. 15 and 16. The local contestants will be Mrs. M. Kelly Jr., Mrs. T. M. Hill, Mrs. M. Schulte, Mrs. Chris Schmitt, Mrs. George Durbin and Miss Mae Moredock.

The tourney will be 12 games total pins to count. Six games will be rolled the first day and the others the following.

First prize in the competition will be the L. V. Estes medal, a diamond set platinum bar pin, valued at $800 and $200 cash. The entry fee is $18, of which $15 is returned to the prize fund.

Lamberts Go Into Lead.

The Wooster Lamberts went into the lead in the Major City League on the Rogers alleys, taking three straight from the Rogers Recreation. While the Lamberts were making a clean sweep, the Witter Razz five was dropping the odd to the King Bees, while the Greenfields won two of three from the Colbion Recreations. Bob McAllister Is Defeated in 'Comeback' Race

4-Yard Handicap Enables Donohue to Win Over Former "Flying Cop."

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Bob McAllister, former New York policeman, made his "comeback" on the track at athletic games of the Knights of Columbus here tonight, finishnig second to Jack Donohue of the St. Anslem's Club in a 100-yard dash handicap.

The former national champion, known as the "Flying Cop," running from scratch after an absence of two years, flashed all his old-time speed, but Donohue's four-yard handicap proved too much for him to overcome after he had sprinted home first in two preliminary heats. Donohue was a bare step in front. The winner's time was

NAVIGATOR WINS PONCHARTRAIN HANDICAP AT NEW ORLEANS

BULLETIN RUNS SECOND, BEATEN IN THE STRETCH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 8.—The Green Tree Stable's 4-year-old Navigator, which flashed his finest form in winning a previous race, sprinted to victory in the Ponchartrain Handicap at the Fairgrounds this afternoon. A $2 ticket on the winner paid $42.80.

The race, a dash of six furlongs for which eleven of the most capable sprinters in training accepted, held the place of honor on a program offered under ideal conditions and before another large and representative attendance.

Navigator won at the direct expense of H. G. Bedwell's Bulletin, a margin of one-half length separating the two and Wm. Daniel's Vespasian finished third a head back of Bulletin and a mere neck in advance of Great Sport, the finish being one of the most spectacular of the meeting. Coming as it did in the principal race of the afternoon, the thrilling culmination aroused the large attendance to an enthusiasm never before manifested here.

While a quintet of the field including Bulletin, Arcady and Noah cut out a terrific early pace Ellis was rating the ultimate victor along in sixth place and not far off the leaders. This prevailed for the first three furlongs after which Navigator was permitted to begin to move up and finishing with a fine rush he overhauled the leaders in the last 50 yards. Vespasian appeared to be wearing Bulletin down at the end and Great Sport and Arcady were giving in rapidly.

Only One of Several Surprises.

The winner was quoted at big odds and his win netted his owner $1550, with $400 for second, $200 to third and $100 to fourth. He negotiated the distance in 1:14 1-5.

Navigator's rather unexpected triumph was only one of many surprise victories registered during the matinee. But for the win of Scotland, an odds on choice, in the Captain J. S. Rees purse, the afternoon would have been almost devoid of formful performance.

Scotland's win was over a course of six furlongs, the nimble-footed three-year-old winning by a half length over Lady Marie, which beat Patricia Marian a comfortable distance for second. After W. Garner hustled the victor into command in the first furlong, he was never in danger, until right near the end, where Lady Marie closed menacingly and began to wear him down rapidly. A belated rush carried Patricia Marian into third.

The first two numbers went the way of rank outsiders, Paul Weidel II scoring an easy win in the opening and Geo. Dever inflicting a decisive defeat to the 11 he met in the second event. Paul Weidel II got up in the late stages of the six furlongs of his race with Quince Garden, outstaying Brunswick for third. Geo. Dever found the one mile and a sixteenth of the second race to his fancy and he pulled away from his opposition after reaching the stretch and held Royal Flag safe in a mild drive. Third went to Transfer, which cut out the pace until the winner gained the track.

A. Gordon's Banton scored a lucky win in the Suzanne Lenglen purse, at one and one-sixteenth miles and offered as the sixth race. He was the leader after the first quarter of a mile to within 70 yards of the finish, where Fire On headed him, only to falter the balance of the trip and lose out in the last few strides. Fire On was ridden very wide by R. Finnerty and but for this probably would have won. Sir Peter finished a tiring third, while War Man and Mayne completed the field.

IN THE DAYS OF FINISH PRIZE FIGHTS

By Joseph B. Choynski

Veteran Writes He Was Sore When Jeff Was Awarded Draw

Says He Outhit His Rival 2 to 1 During 20 Rounds of Fighting—Later Helped Train Jim for "Comeback" Bout With Jack Johnson.

By Joseph B. Choynski.

CHAPTER XVII.

JUST before I landed that punch, Jeff and I exchanged the only remarks made during the 20 rounds. He had been doing considerable leading, using chiefly a left jab. His chief second, Delaney, kept urging him to wait and counter—to permit me to do some leading. Once when I started a hook, he beat me to the punch with a stiff right to the face.

"How'd you like that?" asked Jeff.

"I'll answer you in a minute," I replied, and a few seconds later I handed him the wallop which he afterward told the world was the hardest sock he ever received in any fight.

I tried everything I had to knock the big fellow out. Time after time I connected solidly with vulnerable spots. Jeff soaked up punches like a blotter takes ink. Of course I did not escape punishment myself but I think I hit Jeff at least two to one. Therefore I felt pretty sore when the umpire-referee called the fight a draw. I asked him if he could see nothing but a home run.

Picked Him as Champion.

AMONG the newspaper men who witnessed the fight was Harry Weldon, famous as a sports writer of that day. A day or so after the battle, while chatting with Weldon, I said, "Harry, Jim Jeffries will be the next heavyweight champion of the world. He can beat Fitzsimmons."

"I agree with you," replied the Cincinnati scribe, "and I would say so publicly but for fear of being laughed at."

Years after his fight with me Jeffries was reminiscing with a New Orleans sport writer and fell to discussing the hard wallops he had received in his ring career. I have this interview preserved in my scrap-book of newspaper clippings.

"I never felt a single blow that Sharkey struck me in the hard fight at Coney Island," said Jeff. "Nor did the blows that Fitz hit hurt me. When I fought Corbett it was like the punch of a baby. But I am going to tell you, and it may surprise you, of the only blow that ever shook me up and of who gave it to me.

"Joe Choynski is the man who gave me the punch that made me see stars for a few seconds. I felt it from the roots of my hair to the soles of my feet. It simply shook my whole system, and I am telling the truth when I say that never before or since have I received such a punch that affected me as that did."

Helped Train Jeffries.

WHEN in 1910 Jeff came out of a six-year retirement to fight Jack Johnson, he sent for me to train him. Later Jim Corbett also joined the Jeffries training camp. Here were three heavyweights, each of whom had fought the other. We boxed together—the three of us—played together, went on the road and ate and slept together.

Contrary to the general opinion, Jeffries was in great shape—physically. He was not in shape mentally, but I did not know it until just a few minutes before the fight. Jeffries was doing 10 miles on the road daily and winding it up with a sprint that left him breathing gently and not at all fatigued. He was going through his other training work, fairly eating it up—boxing, bag punching, wrestling, handball and pulley exercises.

But Jeff's long retirement had shaken his confidence. What he should have done was to fight two or three minor heavyweights before meeting Johnson. Judgment of distance, or timing, can be acquired only to a certain extent by boxing. Actual fighting is necessary to perfect the eye.

Sullivan's Appraisal.

MIKE SULLIVAN, coach of the University of Pennsylvania, came to Reno a few days before the fight, took one look at Jeff and telegraphed his hometown papers that Jeffries was not in condition. That was the quickest athletic appraisal on record. Mike knew more in one glance than the men who had been working with the big fellow for months. When I read that report I was sore, and when I met Sullivan I said, "What do you know about Jeff's condition?"

A man could train one month if his stamina was below par, but no man could train three months—that is, put in three months of hard work, as Jeff had done—if he were not in tiptop condition. Of course, Jim had been doing light work before the final three months of grinding toil.

Ten minutes before Jeffries left his dressing room to enter the arena something happened that caused me to lose confidence in him, to realize that he himself had lost confidence. One idea Jeff and I had in common was that hand bandages were a disadvantage to a fighter. I never wore bandages, as I believed they tended to interfere with the blood circulation in the hands. Jeffries thought the same thing, and we often discussed the matter, and so when, just before the battle, Jeffries asked me to go and get bandages—when only a few days before he had bragged that he never used them—I realized suddenly that he was in a bad way. He went into that fight beaten before he put up his hands.

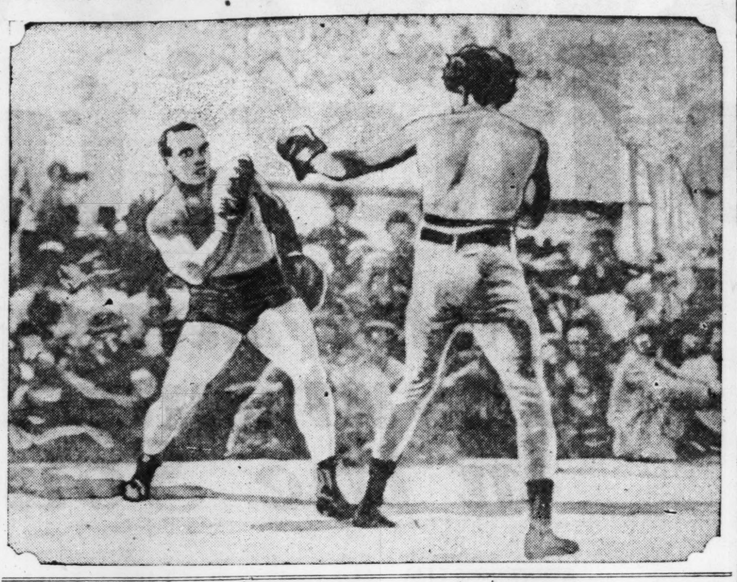
When Choynski and Jeffries Met



Amateur Stars To Appear on Motorbus Card

Eddie Burke, Tony Pirrone, Harry Durso, O'Neil and Others to Box.

Most of the leading amateur boxers of the Western A. A. U. are included in the list of entries for the first show to be held by the People's Motorbus Athletic Club at the First Regiment Armory next Friday evening.

Eddie Burke, product of Sherman Park, one of the most skillful amateur featherweights of years, will appear in the headline bout against Frank Sims. Tony Pirrone will meet a lad from Christopher, Ill., whose name has not been forwarded from the East Side. Harry Durso, Russell Hemingway, Pete White, Frankie Mazer, Frank Power, Frankie Merz, Eddie Anderson, Bill Hakeman, Thomas Powell, Al Stillman, Eddie O'Neil, Jacob Grasswick, Bob Brooks and possibly Dave Knost are among the entries.

Matchmaker Ted Johnson is making an effort to match Knost, the Sherman Park heavyweight, with Brooks, a representative of the Motorbus Club.

Harry Sharpe will referee; Judge Robert Hall and Seneca Taylor will be judges and Al Neist will be the timekeeper.

BICYCLE CLUB RIDES TO BELLEVILLE TODAY

The first run of the year for the Guaranty Cycling Club will be held today. Leaving the club headquarters on Twelfth boulevard at 8:30 a. m., the local cyclists will journey to Belleville, thence to Scott Field, and return to Belleville for lunch and late in the afternoon return to St. Louis. During their stay in Belleville they will play indoor baseball. The Guaranty does not close their riding season, but hold monthly runs the year around. Their run today will be in charge of J. Cody, 1927 road captain; H. Brown, first lieutenant and J. Vickers, second lieutenant. Any cyclists desiring to make the jaunt are asked to be on hand before 8:30 so that accommodations can be made.

Baker to Box Goldberg.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—An attempt by the Pennsylvania Boxing Commission to block Sammy Baker's bout with Henny Goldberg at the Broadway Arena in Brooklyn Monday night was foiled when the New York Commission today sanctioned the match. The Pennsylvania authorities wished to have the match prohibited because Baker is to box Champion Pete Latzo soon. In refusing to uphold the claim of the Pennsylvania Board the New York Commission cited that Latzo already had caused Baker inconvenience by taking two postponements.

MURCHISON IS ENTERED IN MEET AT BROOKLYN

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 8.—Loren Murchison, crack Illinois A. C. sprinter, will return to competition at the Brooklyn College indoor athletic meet in the Thirteenth Regiment Armory, Brooklyn, on Jan. 22. It has been announced that Murchison has entered for the Olympic sprint series.

Soccer Final Is Set for April 30

St. Louis Eleven, if Successful in West, Will Be Handicapped by Late Date.

If one of the four St. Louis teams enterpd in the National Cup competition is successful in winning the Western title and thereby entering the final, it is probable that, like in seasons past, the local entry will be weakened. According to reports from the East, the final is scheduled to be played either April 30 or May 1. At this time, many of the St. Louisans, are away playing baseball.

One of the freaks is the way the sectional championships will be decided this season. The schedule for the West is as follows: First round, Feb. 26 or 27; second, March 19 or 20; semifinals, April 2 or 3; final, April 16 or 17. In the East, is is as follows: First, March 26 or 27; second, April 2 or 3; semifinals, April 9 or 10 and final, April 17.

Thus it will be seen that officials will be fortunate if the final can be played on one of the dates set. For instance, there is no allowance for replays of tie games, should any occur, as the elevens are scheduled to go through four rounds in as many weeks. The only way it could be accomplished would be to play week-day contests.

Bethlehem, the present national champion, defeated the Ben Millers of this city, 7-2, in the final last season and is again rated as a strong contender for the honors.

Little Cyn, the 3-year-old filly by Friar Rock-Miss Kearney, now is the full property of the Coldstream Stud Stable, the arrangement between John E. Madden and Charles B. Shaffer having terminated in her purchase from Madden for $10,000. She is being trained by Frank M. Taylor and perhaps will be a starter in the Kentucky Derby. She is entered for a number of important stakes, including the Pimlico and Latonia Oaks.

E. A. Hargest's Dr. Mayer won the sixth race at Havana, and the oralizers paid off at 30 to 1, but the bettors who used the parimutuel machines got $161.80 for each $2 they invested. Dr. Mayer, a 6-year-old gelding, was reserved off the pace and came with a rush during the last furlong and outlasted the favorite, Lime Rock. In his first out at Havana, Dr. Mayer finished tenth, 11 lengths behind the winner. Before being shipped to Havana, Dr. Mayer raced at Laurel, but did not have much success.

A Great, Growing St. Louis Institution

Alfred M. Best, the outstanding American authority on insurance, says of the Missouri State Life: "It is most ably and agressively managed. It has reputable and very substantial backing, its board of directors being composed of well-known and influential business men in the Middle West. The company has had a remarkable growth. It has a good surplus. Its actuarial methods are conservative and sound."

The Largest Insurance Company in the Southwest

THE Missouri State Life Insurance Company is an established Saint Louis Institution, growing with the city and enjoying the confidence of Saint Louisans. No institution in the city is doing more toward the city's growth and popularity in spreading the good name of Saint Louis throughout the Union.

The Company is licensed in 40 states and territories, including Hawaii and the District of Columbia, and has a field organization of 4000 representatives with branch offices and general agencies in practically all of the principal centers. New men are constantly being brought into the Company and friendship and progress are the dominating influences throughout the organization.

During 1926 the Missouri State Life enjoyed an unprecedented growth and enters the New Year with assets of over $70,000,000 and a volume of insurance in force in excess of $670,000,000—a gain of over $83,000,00 for the year. In the last three months of 1926 the Company issued more than $40,000,000 of Ordinary Life Insurance and during the last four months gained more than $45,000,000 of insurance in force on its books.

The Missouri State Life has recently revised its rates and is now offering the public the utmost in protection with broad coverage and unexcelled service. The Company writes policies to meet every life insurance need. Courteous, trained representatives are at your service.

The Missouri State Life Building is one of the outstanding buildings of the city. The more than 600 people employed in the home office are surrounded with the most healthful conditions and equipment furnished them with which to do their work is the best obtainable. These advantages naturally attract young men and women from the better homes in St. Louis, and the opportunities for advancement in the organization make the Missouri State Life "a great company to grow with."

Nineteen twenty-six was the Company's greatest year in Group Insurance. Our total volume of Group Insurance in force was practically doubled during the year. Many of Saint Louis' largest business concerns are providing this form of protection for their employes through the Missouri State Life.

"MY FRIEND, BERNARD SHAW" —By Archibald Henderson

Shaw the Man—The Combination of Youth and Old Age, Gaiety and Seriousness—The Unassuming Irish Gentleman Who Is "Something in Lunnon" to Fellow-Villagers—His Contempt for Prize Awards and "Stuffy Little Coteries" of Literature.

THIS is the first of a series of articles, to be published within the next several weeks in the Sunday Post-Dispatch, written by Archibald Henderson, an American, under the heading, "My Friend, Bernard Shaw." The articles reflect an intimate association with the great English author over a period of 22 years. Mr. Henderson, a North Carolina college professor, is the author of "George Bernard Shaw, His Life and Works," (1911) and "Table Talk of G. B. S." (1925).

(Copyright, 1927.)

BERNARD SHAW is the cleanest man I have ever known. Cleanest physically, mentally, morally, spiritually. He is immaculate in person. His skin is as tender as a baby's. His clothes are soft, loose, unobtrusive and expensive. He abhors starch and blacking, dress clothes, and frills of any sort. He has no bad habits. He does not eat meat. He does not drink intoxicants of alcoholic content, or even mild stimulants like tea and coffee. He does not smoke tobacco in any form. He never swears. No breath of scandal has ever touched his public or private life. He is the most happily married man I know.

For all his wit, frivolity and satire, Bernard Shaw is essentially austere, ascetic, astringent, antiseptic. He is an extraordinary combination of youth and old age, of gaiety and seriousness. I find him an almost inexplicable mixture of Puck and St. Francis of Assisi, or of Peter Pan and Euripides. At times he has the wit of Wilde, the ferocity of Swift, the satire of Voltaire. The saccharine, the romantic, the individually emotional, have all been omitted from his make-up. He has achieved world-wide fame through the wild exactitude of his wit and wisdom, an extraordinary gift for giving the wrong reasons for the right course of action, and an uncanny power of divination into the hearts and souls of human beings.

A quarter of a century ago, when I was taking my second doctorate in mathematics, I attended a performance of a play called "You Never Can Tell," by an author unknown to the public. It was a performance at the Studebaker Theater by the amateurs of the Hart Conway School of Acting. I felt as if I were having an electric bath of ultra violet rays. I was bowled over by the gaiety and irresponsibility of Dolly Clandon, in whom I subconsciously recognized the progenitress of the modern flapper, the type-figure of the present generation. I immediately procured all the available works of this unknown author, whose name was Bernard Shaw, and devoured them with the utmost avidity and enjoyment.

A Demand for a Photograph

Although I had never seriously contemplated devoting my attention to literature, I was deeply interested in the modern dramatists: Ibsen, Bjornson, Maeterlinck, Hauptmann and Schnitzler. After reading Shaw's works, I realized that some strange detonation had taken place in my brain. Accordingly, with the methodical madness of youth, and wholly unconscious of what I was undertaking, I wrote to Mr. Shaw and proposed the writing of a book about him. At this time no book of any sort about him had as yet appeared.

I awaited his reply in great trepidation, almost in fear and trembling. After an interval there came a post-card bearing the alarming request: "Send me your photograph!"

Now at this point, I must explain the true cause of my alarm. To make an honest confession, all photographs of me, wherever taken or reproduced, always represent me as a highjacker with homicidal instincts, or as a yeggman bearing all the stigmata of crime. Finding a photograph which seemed somewhat less forbidding in appearance than the others, I sent it on to Mr. Shaw, believing that by this rash act I was forever relinquishing all hopes of carrying on my cherished design. What was my amazement when I received a postcard from Mr. Shaw, bearing the incredible legend: "You look like the man who can do the job!"

The House on the Adelphi Arches

The clever Irishman began by pitching my entire plan, which was drawn on a very modest scale, out of the window. "I do not think what you propose is important as my biography, but a thorough biography of any man who is up to the chin in the life of his time as I have been is worth writing as a historical document, and, therefore, if you still care to face it, I am willing to give you what help I can. Indeed, you can force my hand to some extent, for any story that you start will pursue me to all eternity; and if there is to be a biography, it is worth my while to make it as accurate as possible." This is what Mr. Shaw said in a letter on typewriter size paper written in his own fine, beautiful handwriting, 54 pages long!

Drawn by BOHUN LYNCH.

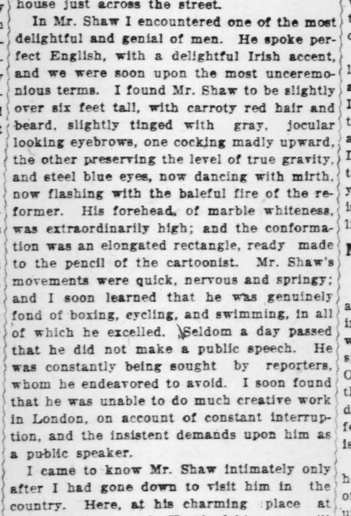
The dining room at 10 Adelphia Terrace, London. Bernard Shaw and Archibald Henderson neglect the meal to enjoy one of many arguments.

After three years of unremitting labor, I went to London in 1907 to visit Mr. Shaw. He was then living at his present home, 10 Adelphia Terrace, London. The house in which he lives rests upon the famous Alephi Arches, where Charles Dickens and his boy friend played hide and seek after work was finished at the blacking factory at Hungerford Market. These mighty arches were built by the four Adams brothers, who bought the estate of Durham Yard in 1768, and constructed a series of well built streets on the Strand level.

Mr. Shaw's quarters were on the third floor of this building, overlooking the Thames, with the Houses of Parliament in plain view on the right. Some years later Sir James M. Barrie took quarters in another house just across the street.

In Mr. Shaw I encountered one of the most delightful and genial of men. He spoke perfect English, with a delightful Irish accent, and we were soon upon the most unceremonious terms. I found Mr. Shaw to be slightly over six feet tall, with carroty red hair and beard, slightly tinged with gray, jocular looking eyebrows, one cocking madly upward, the other preserving the level of true gravity, and steel blue eyes, now dancing with mirth, now flashing with the baleful fire of the reformer. His forehead, of marble whiteness, was extraordinarily high; and the conformation was an elongated rectangle, ready made to the pencil of the cartoonist. Mr. Shaw's movements were quick, nervous and springy; and I soon learned that he was genuinely fond of boxing, cycling, and swimming, in all of which he excelled. Seldom a day passed that he did not make a public speech. He was constantly being sought by reporters, whom he endeavored to avoid. I soon found that he was unable to do much creative work in London, on account of constant interruption, and the insistent demands upon him as a public speaker.

I came to know Mr. Shaw intimately only after I had gone down to visit him in the country. Here, at his charming place at Ayot St. Lawrence in Hertfordshire, you will find, not the red spectre of Socialism or the harlequin of the popular prints, but an unassuming Irish gentleman who shows you what it is to live the life of a typical English squire. Here he is on easy terms with the villagers, from the rector of the parish church, which he habitually attends, to the butcher who, when asked who Bernard Shaw was, diffidently replied: "He does something in Lunnon, I think, sir. But it isn't for me to ahsk him about his trade, now, is it, sir?"



Drawn by BOHUN LYNCH.

Henderson succeeds in convincing Shaw of something—perhaps that a man need not be dead to be judged a genius.

Does His Work in Violet Ink

Mr. Shaw never wastes a moment of his time. In the old days he used to write his plays in tiny little notebooks, as he rode jerkily along on the top of omnibuses. I have sat beside him in a train, while he wrote an essay, an article, or a letter to the press, upon a portfolio resting in his lap, writing in a very small and delicate writing with violet ink. In important communications and productions, literary and epistolary, he has often written me in pencil. He knows what he calls his own rhythm in style and composition. To retain this rhythm in its purity, he adheres to the practice of writing with his own hand, which custom has now almost gone out of fashion since the invention of the typewriter.

Mr. Shaw is like a high-powered automobile, always in perfectly oiled condition. He accomplishes from five to 10 times what the average man accomplishes, by husbanding his energy and minutely organizing his time. He declares that he is a drunkard of a peculiar type, that he is intoxicated with the heady draft of productive work. Periodical headaches lay him low, but once these are past, he returns to his labors with accelerated energy and almost feverish ferocity. One night, when I was visiting him at Ayot, I inquired why he had chosen this place to live. He replied: "Let us take a walk over to the cemetery in the moonlight, and I will explain." He pointed out to me a tombstone, on which I deciphered the inscription:

JANE EVERSLEY
Born 1805. Died 1895.
"Her Time Was Short."

Shaw's comment was: "My dear Henderson: I decided after seeing this inscription that, if it could truly be stated, of anyone who had lived to be 90 years old, that their time was short, then this was precisely the climate and environment for me."

For many years the American people have laughed over their breakfast cup of coffee at the quips and wise cracks of this funny Irishman. Today we are brought up with a turn to read that the Swedish Academy has awarded to the jester at the Court of King Demos, the world's most coveted prize in letters: The Nobel Prize for Literature, for the year 1925. The year is immaterial, the award is for lifework of supreme achievement in literature having an idealistic tendency.

Meeting of Shaw and Mark Twain

This new world of ours sees in the humorist and the wit, the philosopher and the genial interpreter of the age. I crossed the ocean with the late Samuel L. Clemens, and saw the spontaneous ovation to him as Mark Twain at Oxford University, which conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Today I witness the crown of world letters conferred upon the greatest living wit and satirist.

Mark Twain and Bernard Shaw were my heroes and my close friends. I had the honor of introducing these two extraordinary figures to each other upon the station platform of St. Pancras, London. I have written the biographies of both men; the greatest humorist and the greatest wit, respectively, of our era.

As Mr. Shaw, who had come to meet me, drove me to the Northumberland Hotel, he addressed to me this unforgettable remark: "Mark Twain and I are in very much the same position; we have to put matters in such a way as to make people, who would otherwise hang us, believe that we are joking!"

As we drove along, we simultaneously noticed with keen amusement the newspaper caption in huge letters, borne by the sandwich men:

MARK TWAIN ARRIVES
ASCOT CUP STOLEN

In all of his speeches in Great Britain, Mr. Clemens jocularly repudiated the charge, intimated in that association of news items. In his last speech, he solemnly acknowledged the theft of the Ascot Gold Cup, to the huge delight of his appreciative audience.

Outstanding Among Brilliant Contemporaries

Why is Bernard Shaw? What extraordinary and spectacular qualities moved the Swedish Academy to confer its most coveted honor upon him? Shaw himself once wittily

Lowden Develops Real Strength in Persistent Race for Presidency by "Campaign Tour" Lasting Six Years

Illinoisan Has Covered Country Like a Tent in His Travels Until Virtually Every Voter Has Heard Him or Read His Speeches—Sentiment in His Favor Plainly Discernible to Political Writers Even Though Republican Leaders Do Not Recognize It.

Man Who Has Held No Public Office Since Governorship in 1921 Gains Respectful Hearing Because of Efforts to Advance Plans for Farm Relief — Addresses Himself to Problems and Makes Real Effort to Find Solutions — Popular in South.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

FRANK O. LOWDEN isn't interested in politics, or, so he says. He isn't running for the Republican presidential nomination in 1928, at least, not for publication. He simply wants to help.

Lowden wants to help. That is why he has been making speeches from one end of the country to the other almost constantly during the last six years. He wants to help the corn growers, the cotton planters, the hog raisers, the wheat raisers and the tobacco men. He wants to help the truck gardeners. He wants to help the country banks, the country schools, the city banks, the colleges and the credit men. He wants to help the lumber men and the newspaper publishers. He wants to help the meat packers, the meat eaters, the taxpayers and the vegetarians. He wants to help the men, the women, the children and the livestock. He wants to improve the soil and conserve the minerals under the soil. He hasn't attempted to purify the air, but give him time.

Not interested in politics? Not any more than a professional ballplayer is interested in his contract. Not thinking of 1928? Not any more than Calvin Coolidge is thinking of it.

As a matter of fact, Lowden has been industriously running for President from the day the polls closed in November, 1920, and before. The history of presidential politics shows few parallels to the remarkable campaign which he has conducted. In the last six years he has covered this country like a tent. If there is a voter who hasn't heard him or read his speeches in that time, the voter is to blame.

Nevertheless, he cannot on that ground be charged with insincerity when he says he is not interested in politics. The speech of politicians has a meaning all its own, and its meaning, when a man says he is not a candidate, is that he doesn't think the time is ripe to make an announcement. They all do it. They say that Coolidge even pretends not to be interested in a third term.

Develops Unsuspected Strength Everywhere

That cold little circle of New England politicians who have been in control of the Republican party for the last few years probably are not aware of the Lowden sentiment which exists. They will not get very far out into the country without becoming aware of it. Political writers who cover much territory in the course of a year are very well aware of it. The extent to which it permeates the entire country, especially the agricultural States, outside the East, is astonishing, and nothing is more astonishing than its strength in the South. There are experienced observers who think Lowden would come near carrying Arkansas and South Carolina as the Republican nominee for President.

This writer has encountered the Lowden sentiment far and wide, and in the most unexpected places, and has been amazed at its depth and pervasiveness. Although it is particularly apparent in farming communities, it is by no means confined to them.

Where did it come from? What is at the bottom of it? Lowden has held no public office since he left the governorship of Illinois in 1921. He has not avowedly been a candidate since the disclosure of the $5000 paid to Missouri's "Gold Dust Twins" wrecked his candidacy before the Republican national convention of 1920. He has been a private citizen, a gentleman farmer, going his individual way.

But what a way! How helpful! How sympathetic! And what a long and inclusive way it has been! It has taken him from the Michigan lumber country to the Mississippi delta. He has pursued it from New York to Jacksonville, and from Des Moines to Denmark. He says he has no idea how many thousands of miles he has traveled since 1920, but it would be a stupendous total. He declines to estimate the number of speeches he has delivered and articles he has written, but it would reach into hundreds.

Now, anybody who has passed the political age of 12 years, knows that Lowden is running for the presidential nomination in 1928. Perhaps nobody but himself knows just how long he has been running, but certainly he has been actively at it since 1919. In that time there have been two presidential elections, and a third is approaching. Lowden is still running.

Deals With Real Problems

One must admire his energy and persistence, and the nature of his campaign compels respect. He is no Lincoln, nor even a Roosevelt, but this much is true: While other men have been courting the favor of interests which supply campaign "barrels," and while still others have been busy lining up delegations through appointments and otherwise, Frank Orren Lowden has addressed himself to genuine public problems, and has made a respectable effort to find solutions for some of them.

In a time when statesmanship consists mainly in sectional appointments, distribution of "pork," judicious tax refunds and Bruce Barton interviews, it is encouraging to see a man who endeavors to gratify his ambition for the presidency by actually attempting to contribute something tangible to the political thought of the country. That is something. Viewed by high standards it seems little enough, but viewed by present conditions, it unquestionably is a good deal.

That nothing less than the presidency will satisfy Lowden's ambition, seems plain enough. He has declined the vice presidency, a post in the Cabinet, and has refused to be a candidate for Senator when his nomination and election would have been virtually certain. Other than the White House, there is no place to climb to.

The cupidity, or stupidity, of two St. Louis politicians probably kept Lowden out of the presidency in 1920. Had it not been for the revelation (by Senator Reed) of the fact that Nat Goldstein and Bobby Moore, delegates to the Republican national convention, had each received $2500 of Lowden money, it now seems very likely that Lowden instead of Senator Harding would have been nominated. Whatever Lowden's qualifications, few will deny that anything would have been better than the reign of the "Ohio gang" with its sordid trail of corruption and tragedy.

Of course, the story of the "Gold Dust Twins" will be revived if Lowden openly announces his candidacy. What effect it will have at this date is problematical. It did not prevent the Republican convention in 1924 from nominating Lowden for the vice presidency on the first ballot, an honor which he promptly declined. Lowden has always denied that he knew anything about the payment, and he repudiated Goldstein and Moore as soon as it became public.

Farms and Pullmans Don't Mix

Relief for agriculture undoubtedly is the keystone of the personal platform which he had built under himself in his six years of incessant campaigning. He has identified himself in the minds of the farmers as the farmers' friend, and he is so strongly intrenched with them that it does not seem possible anybody could dislodge him. Indeed, so definitely has he assumed that character that the Eastern industrial and financial interests are reported to have become suspicious of him.

When it is remembered that Lowden married Florence Pullman, heiress to the sleeping car fortune, and that his own wealth is many millions, it will be realized that he must have gone to considerable lengths in the farmers' behalf before he forfeited, or at least strained, the confidence of big business in his "safeness and saneness."

One of the most charming singularities of those who are enjoying the advantage of the highest tariff in history is their firm belief that to extend governmental aid to the farmer is, at best, "paternalistic," and at worst, "communistic," and that any man who entertains that idea is to be viewed with alarm. The outstanding representative and spokesman of these men is, of course, Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon.

The fact is, that the average return upon capital invested in agriculture today is 3.5 per cent, as compared with an average return of 11 per cent on capital invested in industry. The farmer and his family earn an average of $648 a year, as compared with an average of $1250 a year earned by industrial workers. If the farmer made the allowance for depreciation which industry makes, he could show no return whatever on his investment.

There are several means by which Lowden would improve the situation. One is by the promotion of co-operative marketing, by which the farmers would be able to fix the prices of their own products, instead of having them fixed by the people to whom they sell. He advocates the establishment of a Federal Farm Board as the agency through which such co-operation would be established. Obviously, individual farmers cannot do such a job themselves.

Next, he advocates the principle embodied in the McNary-Haugen bill, which is now before Congress, after having been defeated in the last Congress through the opposition of President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon. Briefly, the principle is this:

That a good crop results in dumping a surplus on the market, resulting in reduced prices, thus penalizing the farmer for a successful year. That this would be remedied by the establishment of an export board, which would ship the surplus abroad and sell it for whatever it would bring, thus insuring a strong price at home. That the loss suffered on the exported surplus, and the expense of operating the board, would be distributed among the farmers on a pro rata basis.

20 to 1 Better Than Coolidge

If those who live in cities doubt that the farmers (and that includes cotton planters) have been thoroughly "sold" on this idea, they have not been well informed. They have been "sold" on it, right down almost to the last man. They are hot for it, and hot for those that are for it, and hotter against those who are against it. Not long ago the writer was in Iowa and inquired of a prominent farm leader what would be the outcome of a presidential primary in that State, with President Coolidge against Lowden.

"Lowden would beat him 20 to 1," was the reply.

One day I happened into the office of a Southern Senator in Washington. There was a stack of 200 telegrams on his desk, all from the same section, and all on the cotton situation. I inquired the reason.

"Lowden made a speech at the State fair yesterday," he said. "I swear, I believe he could carry my State for President." His State was a pillar of the late Confederacy, one of the solidest blocks of the Solid South.

But relief for agriculture is not the only message which the genial, portly, white-haired, 67-year-old ex-Governor has carried to the ends of the nation in his long crusade. Turn over the files of the newspapers for the last seven years. You will find him before a Chicago gathering, urging compulsory arbitration in coal strikes. Next he is attacking centralization and advocating local government, before the Bar Association in St. Louis.

He speaks to bankers on taxation. He tells the Women's Fair Price League that he Encroaching on States' Rights.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

ANENT your editorial in Tuesday's Post-Dispatch, "Mr. Beck's Bogey Man," and Senator Norris' speech in the Senate, the question is primarily as between the State and the Senate, who has the right to select the representative of the State in the Senate? Senator Norris claims that the power is with the Senate; that it may vise the qualifications and precedents, both politically and morally, of any Senator sent to the Senate by any State, and he justifies it on the ground that the power will never be abused. Such is always the claim of those who usurp power. Their primary intention is always asserted as being to use it to the best ends. It was the cornerstone of many a tyrant's throne.

Whether or not the power will be wisely used is not the question. The question is, who has the right to exercise it? Each State under the Constitution is given the power to select its own senatorial representative. To have that power or right, subject to vise by the Senate, would be to deny the power and right. When you once concede the power to the Senate to vise a State's selection of its representative to Congress, you immediately concede its right to exercise that power for any cause whatsoever.

It is no answer to say it will not be abused, for it has been abused. Victor Berger was denied a seat two or three consecutive times in the House of Representatives, because he was of a socialistic turn of mind and preached socialistic doctrine, and for no other reason whatsoever. The House practically denied him the right of free speech until finally it came to its senses and when he was elected the last time, seated him, although he was the same Victor Berger that it had expelled two or three times.

The Senate has nothing to do with the selection of the nominees by the respective parties. The Constitution gives the Senate no right to regulate the different political parties within the State and to dictate to them how they shall select their respective nominees. That was squarely held by the majority of the Supreme Court in the Newberry case.

The State of Illinois exercised its constitutional right to select and send to the Senate whomsoever it chose, and for the Senate to now clothe itself with the snow-white, spotless toga of respectability and to decline to seat Mr. Vare is not only, in the language of your editorial, piffle, but a direct thrust at the very foundation of the Constitution, namely, the inherent right of the people locally to select for themselves their representative to the National Assembly. I carry no brief for Vare or Smith. They are Republicans and I am a Democrat, but I hold myself to be among those who are attempting to beat back the continuous assaults that are being delivered against the Constitution and the principles that have made it a great instrument and us a great nation.

Farm Relief.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Act 1. St. Louis buyer registers at the local hotel.

Act 2. Local buyers meet him in lobby and ask price he expects to pay per crate and number of cars. Agreement three cars at $4.25 per crate, and buyer is not to appear at sale.

Act 4. Sale. No outside buyers and local dealers do the organization a great favor by taking them off of their hands at $2.50 per crate. Thus everyone is relieved, especially the farmers. This is one of the 57 varieties used. Publicity is better than law.

Better Than Birth Control.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN a recent issue Mr. Johnson, with relation to the fact of 75,000,000 men constantly out of work in America and Europe, raises the question, "What is the only remedy and hope for the future?" And answers it by, "Universal birth control." As this answer is as intelligent as chopping up the family when food runs short, we must find the cause and cure in another direction.

As society is constituted at the present time, nearly all of its activities are subverted to private ends through private channels. Society has collectively no purpose, which would engage and co-ordinate individual effort, and the individual is too much involved in the necessity for providing a physical sustenance to take immediate concern for society. As the industries absorb but a varying fraction, there must remain a balance of unemployed until such time as the individual ends become secondary to social ones. It is only through social co-operation that the maximum individual welfare becomes available.

WILLIAM COQUELIN.

Cure for Drunkeness.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

A CANADIAN Judge says it is no crime to get drunk. Possibly the best way to instill abstinence is to tell the average man to get drunk, and then through pure pigheadedness he will climb on the water wagon and remain there.

SIDNEY AVERILL.

WHERE GOV. BAKER FAILS.

Commenting on the achievements of Gov. Smith of New York and his larger opportunity under the reorganization of the State government, which increases his power, the New York World aptly remarks: "It is not the machinery that counts so much, as the man."

Is the government of Missouri run by a machine or by a man?

We regret to say that we have searched Gov. Baker's message to the Legislature for signs of high leadership, of a man of vision, who will dominate the machinery and make it work effectively in the public interest.

Gov. Baker ignores the larger aspects of the problems now confronting the State, and deals with the petty aspects, or with the larger aspects in a petty way. There are good recommendations in his message. But instead of outlining constructive measures and reconstructive reforms, he tinkers with the problems.

There are three great reforms which have been occupying the public mind and which have been the subject of exhaustive study, resulting in constructive programs.

One subject is that of reorganization of State departments and boards, for economy and efficiency, for which the Association for Economy in Public Expenditures has outlined an excellent plan, including a budget system.

Gov. Baker ignores the work of this association. He ignores the necessity for a comprehensive plan of organizing and co-ordinating departments and boards, but suggests a budget commissioner. A budget commissioner would help, but his work would be largely futile without a thorough reorganization.

A considerable portion of the Governor's message is devoted to a defense of the growth of State expenditure, followed almost directly by an exposure of the loose and irregular way in which the needs of the various departments, boards and institutions are estimated, the appropriations are made and the money is expended. According to his own confession, there are too many boards, functions overlap, the State's needs are blindly estimated and appropriations are hastily and loosely determined, and expenditures are wasteful, resulting in deficits. Upon his own statement, comprehensive reorganization and co-ordination are needed.

His reply to pleas for less taxation is a suggestion of more taxes—nuisance taxes—for a school fund.

Another subject is that of revising the criminal code of the State and the processes of administering justice, for the purpose of simplifying procedure and rendering it more effective for the prosecution and punishment of criminals. Some of the foremost men of the State, aided by the foremost men of the nation, have been engaged in this work. Gov. Baker ignores all that they have done. He asks for power to dismiss law officers who fail to do their duty, and for an act enabling the Attorney-General to prosecute in cases where local prosecutors have refused to do their duty.

In the matter of reform of bank inspection, for the purpose of preventing a recurrence of the numerous and disgraceful bank scandals and failures which have blotted the State's record, Gov. Baker contents himself with referring the recommendations of the Missouri Bankers' Association to the Legislature, and offering a couple of minor suggestions of his own, more or less impractical.

The Governor recommends the building of another penitentiary for hardened convicts, to relieve the crowded condition, but ignores the scandalous conditions existing in the penitentiary, not only from overcrowding but bad management.

These examples are sufficient to show the methods of the tinkerer, as contrasted with the methods of the leader. Politics seems to reign supreme in the gubernatorial mansion.

It is too early yet to discover what leadership there is in either house of the General Assembly. There is need of it in the Legislature, because the hope of finding it in the executive office is vain. If the Governor's power and influence are not used for purposes of obstructive or comprehensive remedies, we shall be agreeably disappointed.

A ZEALOUS CONGRESSMAN.

A zealous member of Congress from Wisconsin, Mr. Beck, is annoyed because Americans traveling in Europe discuss international affairs over the teatable at the Ritz and on the terrasse of the Cafe de la Paix. He thinks this violates some law or other and he wants the House Foreign Affairs Committee to do something about it.

We admit that travelers who talk politics are a menace, and we wish Mr. Beck luck in his fight. When he gets through with it, there are some other great international menaces that a man of his vision should swat, such as the American tourist who startles the Swiss countryside by loud and lusty yodeling. We will wager a pre-war mark against a bushel of Kerensky rubles that Mr. Beck can find a law against this, too.

ENTER THE ORACLE.

Havelock Ellis does not believe Socrates ever lived. He thinks the pug-nosed little fat man who has come down to us through the writings of Plato and Xenophon was only the oracle through which the Greeks projected the wisdom of their time.

This is not so much a new theory as an old one made interesting by eminent advocacy. When the wisdom of any period becomes greater than the individual can attribute to himself, or let us say the period itself will ascribe to the individual, the oracle steps in. The Greeks were in that fix. They were bursting with wisdom. So Socrates occurred, and to him was modestly handed over what everybody thought. The trial of Socrates and his execution symbolize the inevitable consequences of thought. Galileo in his cell, Bruno upon his pyre, Spinoza cast out by his people—they were all Socrates, the same thing over again.

Which brings us to the White House spokesman. Meet the oracle in our own time. There was too much to say for Mr. Coolidge to say it all—too much wisdom, too much prescience, too much downright divination. Some superman had to be fabricated to say all that. Perhaps in time it will be hard to make out whether or not there was any such person. Eminent scholars will think there was—others will think not. Everything the White House spokesman said will be comparatively scrutinized, hidden meanings will be revealed by lecturers to women's clubs, and what is to us a commonplace term will in time take on the glamour of greatness, perhaps as merely W. S.

Just so we do not miss the significance of what is happening. That is all.

THE NEW MONROE DOCTRINE.

In 1911 Secretary of State Knox negotiated a loan convention with Nicaragua, on behalf of United States bankers in which Nicaragua customs were pledged in the hands of an American fiscal agent to be approved by the President of the United States.

The Senate declined to ratify this convention because it would have reduced Nicaragua to the position of vassalage in which San Domingo, Haiti, Panama and Cuba find themselves, and would have destroyed the concert of Central American states under the treaty of peace and amity concluded by them at Washington in 1907, under our guidance.

In 1913 another convention was negotiated whereby, for a consideration of $3,000,000, Nicaragua proposed to grant to the United States an exclusive right to build a Nicaraguan canal, to lease certain islands and to grant territory on her coast for a naval base. The convention, in customary ambiguous diplomatic language, gave to the United States the right to intervene in the internal affairs of Nicaragua on any sort of vague pretext.

Costa Rica, Honduras and Salvador filed protests as soon as the terms of the convention became known, affirming various grounds of a meritorious character, one of which was that such a relationship between the United States and Nicaragua would make forever impossible a realization of the long-cherished dream of union of the Central American republics.

After three years the Senate ratified the convention, but with a reservation to the effect that nothing in the treaty "is intended to affect any existing right of any of the said named states." The ostensible purpose of this reservation was to preserve the independence of Nicaragua, but the language seems hardly adequate. Whatever the purpose of the Senate was, it is apparent that the executive branch of the Government, in supporting a particular faction with the use of warships and Marines, considers Nicaragua done for as an independent State.

Where is our imperial policy to end? Shall we not also make satellites of Costa Rica, Honduras and Salvador? And why not of Mexico?

It is all very well to protect the Panama Canal and to anticipate a European competitor through Nicaragua. It is not necessary or safe, however, to pervert our Monroe Doctrin into a new policy, under which the destruction of the independence of American states becomes the exclusive privilege of the United States.

THE TURKISH-AMERICAN TREATY.

At the present session of the Senate two treaties will come up for ratification. One is the pact abolishing poison gas, which has attracted the support of such divergent persons as Gen. Pershing and Senator Borah, and which will probably be indorsed without much debate. The second is the treaty with Turkey, which has an equally valid claim for ratification.

The chief objection made by the opponents of the latter treaty is that it puts our stamp of approval upon all the acts of past and present Turkish Governments. Fortunately, there is no foundation for such an objection. All the treaty provides for is a ratification of the present status and the renewal of the former diplomatic relationship between the two Powers. The provisions regarding most-favored-nation treatment and the abrogation of many of the judicial favoritisms hitherto possessed by foreigners have already been approved by other nations in ratifying the Lausanne Treaty.

What most of the opponents evidently do not like about the treaty, though they have only hinted at it, is that it does not settle the Armenian problem. However, that is surely not an adequate reason for a refusal of indorsement by the Senate. If the United States refused to have diplomatic relations with any nation which did not give scrupulously fair treatment to its religious and racial minorities, most of our diplomats would have to be either pensioned or fired.

WATCH MASSACHUSETTS.

One of the new year's experiments, which the whole country will watch with interest, is the compulsory automobile insurance law of Massachusetts. The purpose of this law is protective. It aims to secure the accident victims of irresponsible motorists. The need for such a law is shown by the appalling number of accidents. When 22,000 people are killed annually in automobile accidents and more than 500,000 injured, and when no substantial redress is possible in the big majority of cases because the driver is not financially responsible, the State's duty to intervene seems to us to be mandatory.

Can the State intervene successfully? Cries of "No! No!" come from various quarters—from Eminent Respectability, from Obvious Selfishness, from Dubious Interests.

We shall soon see. Massachusetts will show us. Our guess is the old Bay State will prove that it can be done.

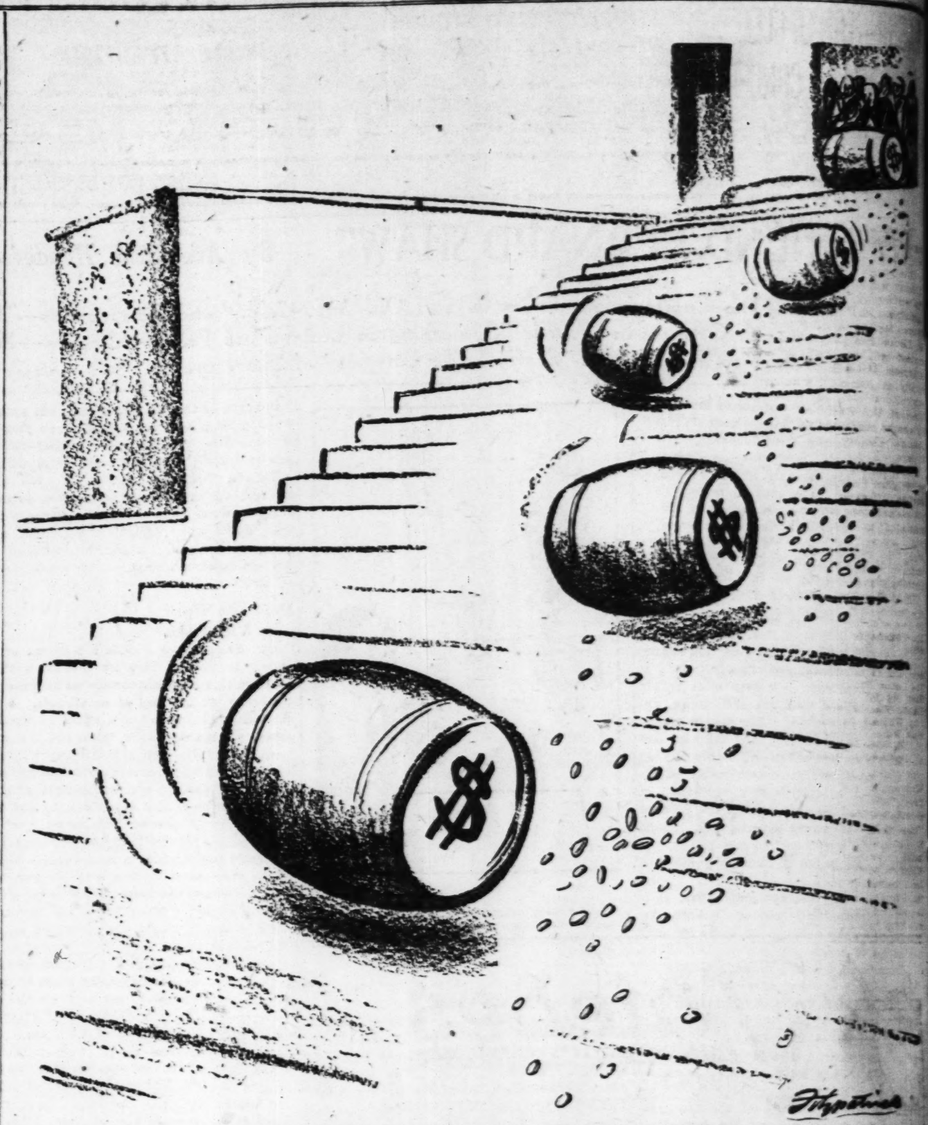
The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries finds there is subsistence in the average trout stream for 800 trout to the mile. Since there are just about 800 fishermen to the mile on the average trout stream, the calculation seems to come out even.

A NEW CALENDAR.

The Italian Fascists, not content with devising such a novel method of torture as the forced feeding of castor oil, and such an unconventional fiscal device as a nonreproductive tax on bachelors, have now established a new calendar. Henceforth all official documents and pronunciamentos will bear two dates, that of the usual Gregorian calendar and that of the new Fascist calendar, which will date from the day the black-shirted tyrants seized control of the Italian Government.

It is to be expected that presently Elbert H. Gary and other perfervid admirers of the efficient Fascist dictatorship will suggest that the United States follow the example of the Mussolini Government in this respect. But it will be difficult to find, in the whole of our national history, an event of like significance to the Fascist rise to power. The capture of the Federal Government by the Ohio Gang would not serve, because that gang, while tyrannical enough, was interested in grafting rather than governing.

There is one date in American history which might, on account of the fact that Mr. Gary and the other admirers of Fascism are all publicly devoted to prohibition, suit them as the first day of a new calendar. That is Jan. 16, 1920, the date on which the Volstead act became a law and the Antisaloon League took charge of a considerable part of the United States Government.



THE MISSOURI LEGISLATURE IS IN SESSION.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE RELIGIOUS CENSUS.

From Editor and Publisher.

NOW that it is over we must in candor say that the so-called religious census that the Church Advertising Department of the International Advertising Association has been conducting through newspapers in various cities has been an ill-advised enterprise. It was a foregone conclusion that few people would vote, even through the ballots were impersonal. This thing of an editor printing a questionnaire which searches the sacred soul precincts of his readers is not in our picture of what editors have any right to do. The questions must have offended thousands of sensitive and reverent people. The layman does not walk up to a stranger, or even a next-door neighbor, and ask if he believes in a personal God, immortality, the efficacy of prayer or family worship without risking being told where to head in with his impudence. Why should a newspaper assume the right? To say the least, the census was in bad taste. And what did it avail? Out of millions of circulation and such first-page bally-ho as one rarely sees, the census polled a total of 65,000 votes in 16 great cities, happy sign that the average citizen still regards his religious views as private. We can see no significance in the result, somewhat because of the tiny fraction of the population represented, but mainly because those who did not vote are so likely to have been either very zealous religionists or very zealous antireligionists. Are these meaningless "statistics" now to be made to dance? If advertising copy is made from them, it will merely increase the fund of public misinformation.

AFTER DINNER SPEECHES.

From the Indianapolis News.

THE Americanization of the British Isles was advanced a step recently when the Chamber of Commerce of Tunbridge Wells adopted a scheme for stopping after-dinner speakers. Each speech was limited to five minutes. At the end of four minutes a green warning light was flashed in view of the speaker. At the expiration of the allotted time a red light was flashed. This was a signal not only for the speaker to stop on the instant, but also for the members to launch a sufficient volume of applause to drown out the speaker and to keep it up until he retired. The plan arouses the suspicion that the Tunbridge Wells Chamber of Commerce has imported an American secretary fresh from the luncheon club front, where the art of reducing a speaker to silence has been developed extraordinarily. The problem of how to stop a speaker by courteous methods has long since given way in the United States to the problem of how to stop him by any method short of force. The English have apparently begun where the American Luncheon Club veterans left off. This affords some measure of intensity and duration of their suffering, and certainly it implies admiration for American ingenuity.

THE FALL-DOHENY VERDICT.

PAUL Y. ANDERSON in The Nation.

SAY what you will, criticism of the Fall-Doheny verdict comes down in the end to a criticism of the jury system. From observation as a reporter assigned to the trial, and from a long interview had with a juror after the trial, this writer is satisfied that the disappointing outcome of this celebrated prosecution is simply a part of the price we pay for protection against judicial oppression * * * The very nature of our criminal procedure made the outcome almost inevitable. Under a time-honored rule, extensive knowledge of a case is sufficient to disqualify a talesman for jury service. In other words, the availability of a citizen for jury service was in direct ratio to his lack of information, in a case where possession of that information was a condition of intelligent citizenship! Nobody will contend that a man should be permitted to sit on a case when he has formed or pronounced opinions as to the guilt or innocence of the accused, but there seems no excuse for enforcing the rule to a point where mental paralysis becomes the goal of achievement in selecting a jury. Under such conditions as obtained here, a little ingenuity in the planning and commission of a fraud becomes a defense safer than an alibi.

FLAPPERS, PAST AND PRESENT.

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

"THE modern flapper does openly what her sisters of old did secretly," said a recent New Orleans visitor of dramatic prominence. Maybe, but think how difficult it must have been, as well as unsatisfactory, for those other-day sisters to lipstick their mouths, pluck their eyebrows, wear gossamer hosiery exposed above the knees, "all in secret." And when they drove a nifty roadster down the avenue at 65 miles per hour, how did they manage to "keep it secret" from the traffic cops?

BALLADE.

Pource que je n'ay point d'argent.
(Translation from Villon.)

They have forgot what went before;
I am no longer friend of theirs;
On my regard, they set small store.
The meanest of them love forbears;
All that I do is futile play.
All has become a hollow joke;
You'd know the reason, so you pray?
Because it happens I am broke.

No fault of mine that I abstain
From my accustomed tavern place,
Endure without a murmur, pain,
Accept good deeds with humble grace;
If some few friends of former days
Alleviate misfortune's stroke
I'll not despair, but render praise,
Because it happens I am broke.

Though hard to bear my present state,
And fortune sleeps, nor seems to care,
That she awaken soon or late,
And smile on me, my constant prayer.
I don't despair with sad regrets,
They will be heard who God invoke;
I do not think that God forgets
Because it happens I am broke.

WASHINGTON U. GLEE CLUB TO GIVE CONCERT

Program at Odeon Thursday Night Includes Two Original Songs.

The annual concert of the Washington University Quadrangle Club will be held Thursday at the Odeon. This year's concert holds special interest for alumni and friends of the university, as Washington will participate in the Missouri Valley Intercollegiate Glee Club contest in St. Louis Feb. 4. Others in the contest will be the University of Arkansas, Iowa State College, University of Kansas, Kansas State Agricultural College, University of Missouri, University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College and Westminster College.

The Washington Glee Club is led by William Parson, director of the Garden Theater orchestra. The annual program includes two songs presented to the public for the first time—"Fight, Washington, Fight," by Ted Williams, a medical student, and "Alma Mater" by Dorothy Gaynor Blake.

The full program is as follows:

The Builder...C. Wakefield Cadman
Oh Peaceful Night...Edward Derman
The Vagabonds ...Frimi
When Yo' Head Am Bowed—Carpenter
Soon I'm Goin' Home...Wm. Lester
The Lotus Flower...Schumann
Keep Agoin' ...Jacobsen
Fight, Washington, Fight (arr. by William Parson)...Ted Williams
Alma Mater...Dorothy Gaynor Blake

Lecturer to Show Pictures.

Dr. Cora Johnstone Best of Minneapolis will lecture at the Town Club at 8 p. m. Tuesday, showing her new three-reel picture, "Tales of Trails," in which several St. Louis women may be recognized. Her main picture is "The Kingdom of the Clouds," taken from the top of Mount Victoria and the Hermit range, and colored in the natural tints. Miss L. R. Ernst will introduce Dr. Best.

BALLADE.

Pource que je n'ay point d'argent.

(Translation from Villon.)

They have forgot what went before;
I am no longer friend of theirs;
On my regard, they set small store,
The meanest of them love forbears;
All that I do is futile play,
All has become a hollow joke;
You'd know the reason, so you pray?
Because it happens I am broke.

No fault of mine that I abstain
From my accustomed tavern place,
Endure without a murmur, pain,
Accept good deeds with humble grace;
If some few friends of former days
Alleviate misfortune's stroke
I'll not despair, but render praise,
Because it happens I am broke.

Though hard to bear my present state,
And fortune sleeps, nor seems to care,
That she awaken soon or late,
And smile on me, my constant prayer;
I don't despair with sad regrets,
They will be heard who God invoke;
I do not think that God forgets
Because it happens I am broke.

L'Envoi.

To all men, Prince, a warning cry—
Who lacks of gold a just supply,
No dreams of beauty may evoke;
For all things rule my roving eye,
Because it happens I am broke.

NO; THANKS FOR THE INFORMATION.

Sir: Has it ever occurred to you that—
Too many articles which, the salesman say, will pay for themselves, are distributed where later "there's the devil to pay"?
It is a lamentable fact and an economic waste that all the free air cannot be harnessed and utilized by the filling stations?
In the good old days we had teeth pulled for 50 cents. Now we go to a specialist, have them X-rayed, take gas, and have them extracted at $5 a throw?
With hen fruit selling at 60 cents per, we should pride ourselves on our ability to "take it or let it alone"?

WASHINGTON U. GLEE CLUB TO GIVE CONCERT

Program at Odeon Thursday Night Includes Two Original Songs.

The annual concert of the Washington University Quadrangle Club will be held Thursday at the Odeon.

This year's concert holds special interest for alumni and friends of the university, as Washington will participate in the Missouri Valley Intercollegiate Glee Club contest in St. Louis Feb. 4. Others in the contest will be the University of Arkansas, Iowa State College, University of Kansas, Kansas State Agricultural College, University of Missouri, University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma Agricultural and Mechanical College and Westminster College.

The Washington Glee Club is led by William Parson, director of the Garden Theater orchestra. The annual program includes two songs presented to the public for the first time—"Fight, Washington, Fight," by Ted Williams, a medical student, and "Alma Mater" by Dorothy Gaynor Blake.

The full program is as follows:

The Builder..C. Wakefield Cadman
Oh Peaceful Night..Edward Derman
The Vagabonds .....Friml
When Yo' Head Am Bowed—
.....Carpenter
Soon I'm Goin' Home..Wm. Lester
The Lotus Flower.....Schumann
Keep Agoin' .....Jacobsen
Fight, Washington, Fight (arr. by William Parson).Ted Williams
Alma Mater..Dorothy Gaynor Blake

Lecturer to Show Pictures.

Dr. Cora Johnstone Best of Minneapolis will lecture at the Town Club at 8 p. m. Tuesday, showing her new three-reel picture, "Tales of Trails," in which several St. Louis women may be recognized. Her main picture is "The Kingdom of the Clouds," taken from the top of Mount Victoria and the Hermit range, and colored in the natural tints. Miss L. R. Ernst will introduce Dr. Best.

Youth and Age Combine in Shaw

remarked that most men owe their eminence to the flatness of the surrounding country. The theory finds no application in the present instance. In choosing Shaw for supreme honor, the Swedish Academy deliberately passed over such famous and popular writers as John Galsworthy, John Masefield, Sir Hall Caine, H. G. Wells, Sir James Matthew Barrie, Arnold Bennett and that Grand Old Man of fiction, the octogenarian, Thomas Hardy. Bernard Shaw in no sense owes his eminence to the flatness of the sourrounding country.

Nor does Shaw hold in high regard the practice of rewarding literary men with money prizes. When the news of the award reached him, unofficially, he disclaimed any competition on his part for the prize. Years ago, when a prize of $1000 was awarded him for a story in Collier's Magazine, entitled "Aerial Football," he instantly returned the $1000 check to the editor, with the astounding query: "What do you mean by this unspeakable outrage? How do Messrs. P. F. Collier & Son know that my story was the best they received during the quarter? Are they posterity? Are they the verdict of history?—I return the cheque. If you should see fit to use it for the purpose of erecting a tombstone to Messrs. P. F. Collier & Son, I shall be happy to contribute the epitaph, in which I shall do my best to do justice to their monstrous presumption."

Genius and Prizes for Literature.

Animated by the conviction that Bernard Shaw should receive the Nobel prize for literature, I asked him in 1923 to give me his views on the subject of the Nobel Prize, as concerned Great Britain and the United States. Shaw made to me the following reply: "I have never studied the list. The committee cannot recognize genius; it can only accept an established reputation, and a very safe one—that is to say, an uncontroverted one. As the reputation of the greatest geniuses in literature are always matters of fierce controversy until they are dead, or at least very old and harmless, the greatest geniuses in literature are out of the running. The prize-winners are like the modest hotels in Baedeker 'well spoken of.'" Occasionally a man whose art is of international interest, while the controversies in which he has compromised himself are local and transitory, bags the coveted $40,000 and does credit to it. William Butler Yeats for example! But in most cases, as in Rudyard Kipling's, the committee must accept a reasonably dignified popularity as the safest qualification. But, of course, the whole conception of prize-giving as applied to the fine arts is absurd. The Nobel business is a lottery open to all who have achieved a minimum of celebrity. As such it is useful as bringing an occasional windfall to an unpaid worker, but that is all that can be said for it!"

How time brings round its revenges. Shaw is refuted out of his own mouth, for it is the greatest genius who, in the present instance, is not out of the running, but has swept past the winning post ahead of all competition. After the death of Anatole France, I pointed out in essays published in the United States, England, and on the continent of Europe, that Bernard Shaw was now the Grand Old Man of world letters, without even a close rival or competitor. I said this, too, knowing that, had a plebiscite of leading British men of letters been taken at the time, Shaw would have received few if any votes. All would have gone to Thomas Hardy, for whom a definite campaign of propaganda, surely without his knowledge and consent, in obviously bad taste, had been launched.

Bernard Shaw never publicly claimed that he was a genius. He admitted that he was a genius; but he refused to claim the title. Twenty-odd years ago, in one of the very first communications I ever had from him, as yet unpublished, Shaw forthrightly said: "I advise you in anything you write to insist on this training of mine, as otherwise you will greatly exaggerate my natural capacity. It has enabled me to produce an impression of being an extraordinarily clever, original and brilliant writer, deficient only in feeling, whereas the truth is that though I am in a way a man of genius, otherwise I suppose I would not have sought out and enjoyed my experience, and been simply bored by holidays, luxury and money—yet I am not in the least naturally 'brilliant' and not at all ready or clever. If literary men generally were put through the mill I went through, and kept out of their stuffy little coteries where works of art breed in and in until the intellectual and spiritual product becomes hopelessly degenerate, I should have a thousand rivals more brilliant than myself. There is nothing more mischievous than the notion that my works are the mere play of a delightfully clever and whimsical hero of the salons; they are the result of perfectly straightforward drudgery, beginning in the ineptest novel-writing juvenility, and persevered in every day for 25 years. Anybody can get my skill for the same price; and a good many people could probably get it cheaper."

Thomas Edison has asserted that genius is nine-tenths perspiration, one-tenth inspiration. Mr. Shaw himself once remarked to me, "Ninety-nine per cent of me is just like everybody else." It is that precious one per cent—the saving remnant of personality, temperament, individuality, what you will—which marks the difference between the genius and the drudge.

LOWDEN'S PERSISTENT RACE FOR NOMINATION TO PRESIDENCY

is wearing out his old overcoat. He tells a meeting at Chicago University that there are too many taxleveing agencies. He addresses a credit men's convention at Atlanta. He attacks bureaucracy before the Kentucky Bar Association at Louisville. He tells the National Tax Association at White Sulphur Springs, Va., that executive departments should be consolidated.

No Subject Out of His Reach.

Students at an Arkansas college hear him on obedience to law. He denounces excessive use of the pardoning power at Springfield. We find him before the Kentucky Tobacco Growers' Association. He buries the "bloody shirt" in an address to the United Daughters of the Confederacy at Savannah. He tells the American Newspaper Publishers' Association at Washington that the decay of agriculture is the beginning of national decline.

The Kansas State Fair hears his views of co-operative marketing. The American Lumber Dealers' convention listens to his warning against soil depletion and waste of natural forests. He speaks to the Mississippi Delta farmers on farm financing, and a few days later the Audit Bureau of Circulation at Philadelphia is told by him that population growth demands that each nation prepare to feed itself. The American Meat Packers' Institute at Chicago receives a similar message.

Successively the news dispatches show him at the corn conference at Des Moines, the National Education Association at Washington, the Union League at Philadelphia, and the Farm School Conference at New York. He urges the strengthening of the country schools, better salaries for teachers and college professors, and then he sails for Denmark, Sweden and Germany, to study co-operative marketing.

There is a space of a few weeks, and he turns up in the presence of the Illinois State Bankers' Association. He addresses the Illinois Public School Teachers' Association, the Mississippi State Fair, is chosen chairman of American Forest Week, and keynotes the farm conference at St. Louis.

When last I saw him he was addressing, on succcssive evenings, the American Economic Association (on agriculture's place in national economics), and the American Political Science Association (on reorganization of governmental departments) at St. Louis. A few days earlier he had delivered a refreshingly vigorous opinion of those American business men who eulogize Mussolini and the Fascist tyranny in Italy.

"What is the explanation of your interest in agriculture, and why have you been so busy trying to help those who engage in it?" I asked him. "Oh, I'm a farmer myself, and have just made a few speeches here and there for the purpose of stimulating interest in agriculture," was the indulgent reply.

Before the next question was half finished he held up a silencing hand.

"Not a word about politics," he warned. "Not a word. I'm through with politics."

He's through with politics like Peggy Hopkins Joyce is through with matrimony. Watch the Republican primaries next year.

BEAUTY CONTEST IN BALKANS

American Motion Picture Concern Offers Prize in 10 Countries.

By the Associated Press.

SOFIA, Jan. 8.—Balkan girls are all a-flutter over a motion picture beauty contest. It is a new wrinkle to the women of Bulgaria and other Central European states and there are many thousands competing for the ultimate prize of being declared the "Beauty of the Balkans" and going into the movies.

An American company is conducting the contest along time-honored lines in 10 countries. In this part of the world, however, nothing like it has been seen and girls who never had their pictures village camera man, who often is taken before are patronizing the many miles away.

ST. LOUIS PRESBYTERIANS TO HELP $15,000,000 FUND

Meeting Tomorrow Will Start Campaign for $379,791 Toward Ministers' Pensions.

Leaders of the St. Louis Presbytery will meet tomorrow to start preliminary work for a campaign to raise $379,791 in Missouri as this State's quota of $15,000,000 being raised throughout the country to provide pensions for retired Presbyterian ministers.

Plans for the campaign, which will be held the latter part of April, will be outlined by the Rev. Reid S. Dickson of Philadelphia, associate secretary of the Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustenation. From St. Louis he will go to Kansas City for a similar conference Tuesday.

The national campaign is being directed by the Laymen's Committee of the Presbyterian Church, of which Will Hays, former Postmaster-General, is chairman and Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon is treasurer. Eastern campaigns have been completed and more than half of the $15,000,000 has been pledged.

The $15,000,000 pension fund is intended to solve a problem which has confronted the Presbyterian Church for 210 years—the problem of relief for ministers and employes who have devoted their lives to Presbyterian church work and are no longer able to support themselves.

The fund will provide minimum pensions of $600.

Church Club to Hear About Twain.

The life of Mark Twain will be discussed by the Rev. C. J. Armstrong, pastor of the First Christian Church of Hannibal, Mo., and an authority on the great American humorist, at a dinner of the Brotherhood Club of the First Presbyterian Church, at that church next Thursday evening. Members of the club have been invited to bring their sons or other youths to the meeting. L. O. Honig is president of the club.

REED FIGHTS MATERNITY BILL

Missourian Threatens to Continue Filibuster If It Is Pressed.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Senator Reed of Missouri who opposes further Federal appropriations for the Maternity Act, said yesterday he was prepared to keep the Senate "talking until Spring" on a bill making such provision. Aided by Senator Bingham (Rep.), Connecticut, he kept up a debate with Senator Copeland (Dem.), New York, that prevented the Senate from carrying out its intention to consider the Lausanne Treaty with Turkey in executive session.

Painter to Exhibit Sketches.

Albert Hirschfield, a 23-year-old painter, born in St. Louis, will present an exhibit at the Newhouse Galleries, 484 North Kingshighway boulevard, the last two weeks in January. In the exhibit are 27 water colors and black and white sketches, many of them scenes in Morocco, Tunis and other places painted during a four months' trip through North Africa.

G. O. P. Women to Install Officers

The Republican Women's Club will meet at 2 p. m. Thursday at the Chamber of Commerce Building to hear the annual reports and install officers.

DEDICATION WEEK AT HEBREW "Y" TO OPEN NEXT SUNDAY

NEW STRUCTURE COST $500,000

Membership Campaign to Add 500 to Enrollment Will Be Conducted by Special Committee..

The week's program for the formal dedication of the new $500,000 building of the Young Men's Hebrew Association and the Young Women's Hebrew Association, at 724 North Union boulevard, will begin a week from tonight in the main auditorium.

The first evening's activities will be devoted largely to addresses and religious exercises. Throughout the remainder of the week, however, the program will be varied with special features to emphasize the plan to make the "Y" building the cultural and recreational center of the Jewish young people of St. Louis. Basketball games, interpretative dancing, wrestling, boxing, an Old Timers' reception, music and amateur dramatics are some of the special features scheduled.

Most of the athletic events will be held on Monday, which has been designated as "Athletic Night." There will be a basketball game between the Leacock and Roxana teams, girl and boy scout troops will give demonstrations and there will be exhibitions of billiards, handball, swimming and diving, besides a wrestling match, boxing match, archery, an acrobatic dance and interpretative dancing.

College Night, Tuesday.

"College Night" will be observed Tuesday, Jan. 18, with Dr. Isidor Loeb of Washington University presiding and other educational institutions of St. Louis represented. Dr. David Reiss will deliver an address on behalf of the Associated Hebrew Schools; Mrs. R. S. Michael on behalf of the St. Louis Board of Education; Miss Rosalie Kaufman for Cleveland High School; Prof. Gustav Klausner for St. Louis University; Miss Leah Yoffie for Soldan High School, and Prof. A. S. Langdorf for Washington University. Mark C. Steinberg will present the "Y" football team, and there will be music by the "Y" orchestra and Washington University Glee Club and a sketch by the "Y" Dramatic Club.

Walter S. Marx, chairman of the educational committee, will preside Wednesday designated as "Educational Night." Addresses will be delivered by Rabbi A. E. Halpern and Joseph J. Senturia. The "Y" Dramatic Club will present another sketch and Arthur Baron and the Rev. J. Gowselow and choir will provide musical numbers.

Thursday afternoon there will be a reception for communal workers of St. Louis and an inspection of the building from 3 to 5 o'clock. This will be followed by "Old Timers' Night," an occasion for reunion of former members of the Y. M. H. A. Walter L. Freund will preside and Rabbi Samuel T. Thurman will deliver an address.

"Old Timers" to Foregather.

Among the "old timers" who will speak are Judge A. B. Frey, Elkan Glauber, Bernard Greensfelder, Judge M. N. Hartmann, Dr. Alexander Horwitz, Dr. Max Jacobs, George Laski, Col. I. H. Lesem, Emil Mayer, Albert Nathan, Henry Oppenheimer, Judge H. P. Rosecan, T. L. Rubenstein, Judge M. N. Sale, Martin Schweig, Harry Simon, Louis Strauss and Karl Vetsburg.

Saturday evening will close the dedication program with the unveiling of a memorial tablet to David Sommers, who was president of the Y. M. H. A. in 1923 when the building fund was raised. A bust of Emile Zola, the novelist, also will be unveiled and a reception and dance will follow in the auditorium.

The new Y. M. H. A., which occupies nearly a quarter of a block at Union boulevard and Enright avenue, has been pronounced by experts to be one of the most complete and best equipped institutions of its kind in the country. Will Levy is the architect.

A membership campaign in which it is planned to increase the enrollment to 5000 will be carried on during the week under a special membership committee of which Judge Samuel Rosenfeld is chairman.

On Smoke Abatement Committee.

Mrs. Marion C. Blossom, chairman of the Civics Committee of the League of Women Voters; Mrs. George E. Chamberlin, chairman of the Civics Committee of the Wednesday Club, and William C. Groff, president of the Kleen Heat Sales Co. and of the Missouri Oil Heating Association, were added to membership of the Executive Committee of the Citizens' Smoke Abatement League yesterday.

The Largest Assortments of Newest Spring and Summer Needs and Best Values Ever Offered in One of These Extraordinary Events

¶ This is widely known as the outstanding Infants'-Wear Event of St. Louis! It is unrivaled and gathers "momentum" each year from the appreciation and eager participation of mothers who look forward to it long in advance, knowing how remarkable are its offerings. With more space devoted to the large, extremely varied and greatly underpriced assortments, selections will be made with more ease and even more interest than before. Selling will start at 9 o'clock.

NOTE: Please make your selections just as carefully and accurately as possible, for assortments on the second day will be so broken that replacements may not be possible. No mail, phone or C. O. D. orders accepted.

Eastman's Millions Back Plan to Use Slow-Motion Pictures In Colors To Give Expert Instruction in Surgery

Science and Invention Join Hands

By HENRY F. PRINGLE.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.

THE focus of the picture is a white table under a cluster of lights. It stands out of the surrounding darkness like the prize ring at a championship heavyweight bout. The air is heavy, but with anesthetic instead of cigar smoke. And the men in the rows of seats that rise abruptly are silent as they lean eagerly forward. Instead of two men, their bodies magnificent with strength, there is only one man under the lights. He is unconscious, and around him figures in white robes, their faces almost hidden by masks, step swiftly.

It is a picture in chiaroscuro, its black and white occasionally shattered by a gleam of scarlet, that every surgical student knows. "Dr. Ferguson will operate at 10 o'clock in Amphitheater A"—the notice is one that is posted almost daily in every medical college in the world. The established surgeon has always recognized his debt to generations that are developing. He has been willing to operate in the view of medical students.

Without these demonstrations it would be impossible to train surgeons. But at best they have been imperfect. It has not always been possible to obtain the most skilled surgeons. Few of the students in the amphitheater can be seated close enough so that they can see clearly the swift and sometimes almost imperceptible movements of the surgeon's hands.

To Provide Perfect Records.

A few weeks ago, at a meeting at Montreal, plans were made and committees appointed to formulate plans to adapt the motion picture to the requirements of surgery and medicine.

The meeting was of the Board of Regents of the American College of Surgeons, the outstanding organization of its kind in the United States. At a long session, addressed by Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributers of America, Inc., it was determined that the motion picture could be made a most important servant of the medical and surgical professions. It could be used, among other things, to teach surgery. It could be made the means of teaching preventive medicine to the public. The movements of the magic hands of world-famous surgeons can be recorded and preserved forever.

Eastman Backs the Plan.

Already surgical and motion picture experts are at work. It is announced that George Eastman of the Eastman Kodak Co. has pledged the full resources of his plant at Rochester, as well as the facilities of the Medical School at the University of Rochester, which he recently built. Work on the plan is already under way there.

If the plan succeeds as its promoters hope it will the old operating amphitheater, with its limited seating capacity, will give way in all the medical colleges to motion picture exhibition rooms. Here will be shown reels of famous surgeons performing operations both simple and complicated. An excellent view will be available to every student, instead of to the few who sit in the front rows of the amphitheater. The slow motion camera will show things that the eye misses. The operations can be viewed again and again by the students. One of the plans is to have the films in color, because of the importance of color in distinguishing various tissues.

Spreading Knowledge Far and Wide.

As the films are completed it is hoped that copies will be purchased by county medical societies throughout the country. "It is the dream of those in charge that libraries of these films will be built up. Thus when a country doctor feels that he is a trifle rusty on appendicitis he can go to his county medical society and see the most prominent and skilled appendicitis man in the country perform this operation. In the outposts of civilization, where medical conferences are impossible and where doctors cannot take post-graduate courses, the films will make known the discoveries of science and the new methods of operating.

The sessions at Montreal were followed by conferences with Eastman at Rochester. Among those who attended were Dr. Charles H. Mayo of the Mayo Clinic, Dr. Walter W. Chipman of Montreal, president of the American College of Surgeons; Dean George H. Whipple of the School of Medicine at the University of Rochester; Dr. George David Stewart of New York, president-elect of the College of Surgeons; Dr. J. Bentley Squier of New York, Dr. Franklin Martin of Chicago, Director-General of the College of Surgeons; Dr. George W. Crile of Cleveland, and Mr. Hays.

Dr. Charles Mayo to Co-operate.

Dr. Mayo has pledged his full co-operation and has promised that operations performed by him will be filmed for the benefit of students.

"Intricate problems of physiology can be visualized for the student of medicine in detail by showing the pictures," he said. "Surgical operations that are difficult to describe and are poorly described in words can be appreciated in a few moments' view of the film. It will not be necessary for the medical student to travel to Europe or thousands of miles to see an operation, for the moving picture will make it possible for him to see these operations in his own school."

Dr. Chipman said that the use of the motion picture would mark the beginning of a new era in medicine. He said that the value of the screen had "long been recognized as a means for teaching medicine and surgery," and that, in fact, some pictures had already been made. There has, however, been no central body in charge of the work, no means of separating the bad films from he good, and no central headquarters for distribution. These are details, Dr. Chipman felt, that must immediately be worked out.

"If the plan is carried through," he said, "more than 80 medical colleges will have the advantage of seeing operations on the screen that have been performed by the greatest surgeons. That should be of tremendous value in adding to their knowledge."

Probably the most interesting thing about the whole plan is the fact that the technical experts of the motion picture field have few obstacles to overcome. Hays has promised that all of the big producers will give assistance in every way that they can. Lighting will, of course, be the most important single factor. The lights must be so arranged that they will in no way injure the patient on the operating table. They must also be guarded in some manner so that the operating surgeon will not be inconvenienced.

GEORGE EASTMAN. DR. CHARLES H. MAYO.

Text of the Report.

The report at the Montreal meeting which was unanimously adopted explains in detail the purpose of the movement. It follows in full:

"We feel assured, first, that motion picture films can and will occupy a large place in the teaching of medicine; second, that steps should be taken to stimulate the development, production and use of proper films for purposes of medical teaching; thirdly, that, while there are distributers and producers handling such films, there has been no definite centralization of supply and no definite standard of reliability.

"On further consideration, your committee begs to recommend the appointment by the Board of Regents of a special board or committee consisting of the president, the director-general, the associate directors and three members of the college to take this whole matter under consideration, that Mr. Will H. Hays be honorary chairman of this committee and that among the duties of the committee shall be the following:

"1. To arrange and carry out a survey of the existing field of medical films. (A list of producers and distributers of these films has already been obtained, as well as a catalogue of the films handled by the various distributers. It will be more difficult to determine what films are in the hands of individual private owners, but much of this information will no doubt come to light when the movement is under way.)

Voice and Pictures Together.

"2. To decide upon subjects suitable for motion picture illustration for both professional and lay use, and to develop the proper production and distribution of such films.

"3. To determine and develop the demand for such films by communication with universities, medical schools, public health organizations and various medical or surgical bodies throughout the country, and otherwise.

"4. To develop the application of medical moving pictures to the extent of using the vitaphone, phonofilm or other method of synchronization, so that the voice of the surgeon, physician or teacher may be heard in explanation of the subject matter.

"5. It may be found advisable to establish at the College of Surgeons' headquarters in Chicago and bureau of information as to what films are available for boy lay and

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons from stomach and bowels

Give "California Fig Syrup" at once if bilious or constipated

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless, "fruity laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

"Operation? No! I treated it myself, at home. The swelling receded at once; in three or four weeks there wasn't a sign of the ugly old thing! That awful nervousness and the stifled feeling are gone, too. I'm getting strong again, and doctor says there isn't a trace of goitre now. Oh, but I'm happy and full of pep—look like a new person, don't I?"

What joy and happiness this scientifically successful new medical treatment is bringing to goitre sufferers! Everywhere, hope is expressed that here at last is the one sure remedy for every type and degree of this dread disease. It's so simple and safe that anyone may successfully use it at home. Its results are immediate and lasting, as countless such medical testimonies prove.

A valuable and authoritative book recently published tells all about it—the causes and prevention of goitre, the symptoms and treatment of its various forms, the experiences of men and women joyously freed and restored to abundant health once more. This book will gladly be sent, free, without obligation of any kind, to anyone interested in this increasingly vital subject. It may come in time to save you from the consequences of this horrible affliction. Its advice followed will relieve suffering from all kinds of goitre; will entirely remove most of them.

You who have goitre, or loved ones threatened with this all too common affliction, send your name and address to the W. F. R. Laboratory, 219 Sanborn Building, Battle Creek, Michigan, and receive your copy of this invaluable book immediately. Send today.

SNEAK THIEF SAYS 'MOTHER' RUNYAN GAINED HIS PAROLE

CONFESSES HE STOLE $8000 DIAMOND RING

Intervention of St. Louisan, Friend of Prisoners, Brought Him Liberty, He Asserts.

Another of "Mother" Runyan's boys ,out on parole, has gone wrong, it was disclosed yesterday when Frank Duncan, two-term former convict, now in jail for stealing an $8000 diamond ring, made a written statement to Chief of Police Gerk, telling how he happened to be paroled to St. Louisans from the Illinois State Reformatory at Pontiac.

When Duncan was arrested last week and admitted stealing the ring from the home of Harry A. Sodini, 5 Washington terrace, while employed there as a window washer, Gerk wanted to know how Illinois prisoners can be paroled to persons in Missouri.

"Mother" Runyan—Mrs. E. S. Runyan of 4279 Olive street—has for several years attracted considerable attention in St. Louis and elsewhere by her labors to assist prisoners and former prisoners to become "better citizens."

Paroled to Minister.

Often she has appeared before the Board of Pardons and Paroles at Jefferson City to argue cases and hundreds of former convicts have obtained food, clothing and lodging at her home—known among them as "Mother Runyan's flop"—while looking for jobs. It was her intervention in his case, according to Duncan, which brought about his parole last October to a St. Louisan, the Rev. Theodore Bacon of 5083A Kensington avenue.

Duncan, who boasts that one of his numerous aliases is Eugene Field, says he formerly lived in Montreal, Canada, and was sent to prison first for forgery, serving 33 months in the Minnesota State Penitentiary at St. Cloud. This term ended in 1916.

Later, in the spring of 1921, he served a short term in the St. Louis Workhouse for petty larceny, and, two months after her release, was arrested in Chicago on a charge of grand larceny. That resulted in an indeterminate sentence of from one to 20 years in the Illinois State Reformatory at Pontiac.

Got $80 for $8000 Ring.

While there, he related, he became acquainted with "Mother" Runyan through the prison magazine. Last August he applied for a parole and mailed the application to her, but it was rejected and returned to him by the Illinois Parole Board.

He then made another application at "Mother" Runyan's suggestion, he said, and later she wrote to him saying it would be taken care of by the Rev. Mr. Bacon. A short time later the parole was granted, and he reported to Bacon.

He said he had been making monthly written reports to the Rev. Mr. Bacon since that time, but had seen him only once. That was on Dec. 24, when he was looking for work.

The $8000 ring was found in a pawnshop on Franklin avenue. Duncan had sold it for $60.

USE SULPHUR TO HEAL YOUR SKIN

Broken Out Skin and Itching Eczema Helped Over Night.

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist.

Home-made Supply of Fine Cough Syrup

Better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this home-made syrup, easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup, or clarified honey, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the throat tickle and heals the irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and it is splendid for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract and guaiacol, which has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

PINEX for Coughs

$1113 TAKEN IN TWO GROCERY HOLDUPS

Burglars Take Away 400-Pound Safe After Hammering Lock; Warehouse Robbed of $50.

Proprietors, customers and others were forced to stand submissively by robbers in two South St. Louis stores yesterday morning. A total of $1113 was taken from the two places.

At the grocery of Eugene Joly, 5056 Alaska avenue, two masked robbers made Joly and the driver of a delivery wagon who was present stand against a wall, while they forced a clerk to open the safe. They took $963 and ran out.

A short time before, Charles and Richard Scott and a dozen customers in the Scott's grocery at 2823 South Eighteenth street, were forced to huddle together by two robbers, who took $150 from the cash registers.

Burglars, apparently despaired of opening the safe in a Piggly-Wiggly grocery at 2603 Woodson road, Overland, Friday night, so they carted it away. It weighed 450 pounds and contained $250. There was evidence that the outer combination was hammered off in the store and an automobile driven to the back door to carry the safe away.

Cracksmen, at the warehouse office of the Kohn Grocery Co., 4417 Manchester avenue, Friday night, opened a safe with nitroglycerine and took $50 from it.

NONPARTISAN ELECTION TOPIC

Former Judge to Tell Women Voters About System.

Nonpartisan election of Judges, as recommended by the American Bar Association and applied in California and elsewhere, will be discussed by Irvin Y. Barth before the League of Women Voters, at luncheon at the Town Club on Jan. 17. Barth, a former Circuit Judge here, is chairman of a committee of the American Bar Association dealing with this subject. His address topic will be: "American Bar Recommendations for Judicial Selection."

Later in the meeting Mrs. Marion C. Blossom and Mrs. E. T. Senseney will report on the recent conference in Washington concerning the cause and cure of war.

AUTO THIEF, 19, GIVEN 2-YEAR SENTENCE ON FEDERAL CHARGE

Youth Admits He Stole 10 Cars and Sold Them in Illinois.

Robert Herschel Elrod, 19 years old, of 1114 Hebert street, was sentenced to two years in the Federal penitentiary by Federal Judge Davis yesterday after he pleaded guilty of the interstate transportation of a stolen automobile. Sentence was passed after a confession, in which Elrod admitted stealing 10 or 12 machines in a year and selling them in Illinois, was submitted to the Court.

Elrod was arrested Nov. 2 in East St. Louis in a machine stolen in St. Louis, with Sterling Proffer, 19, 1927 Destrehan street. Proffer also pleaded guilty, representing that he unwillingly accompanied Elrod in two thefts, and was given six months in jail.

POWER OF ENGINES IS INCREASED

Customs Effects, Elaboration of Appointments, Wide Range of Colors, Sculptured Radiator Ornaments, Features in New Models.

By JAMES H. CAULFIELD.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.—Set in long and orderly rows, the motor cars of 1927 made their debut today at the twenty-seventh annual national automobile show in this city. This proved a brilliant and beflowered inaugural to a season that promises to achieve a high degree of prosperity for the industry. As in previous automobile shows, New York and nearby cities responded by sending a great and interested throng that walked through the aisles and the hundreds of spaces from the opening to the closing hour, apparently extending unqualified approval to the display of about 300 cars and chassis, and thousands of accessories.

The Really New Cars.

Really new cars at the show—that is, those which either are new makes or are completely redesigned in body lines as well as chassis include:

Reo "Flying Cloud," a powerful, speedy, very good looking car that has nothing about it to remind one of former Reos:

The 8-cylinder "Little" Marmon, which is to be a companion to the well known big 6-cylinder Marmon;

The Erskine six, which was built by Studebaker for export, but now is to be sold in this country as a low-priced car with custom built European lines and fitments;

The 8-cylinder Chandler, which is to supplement the already extensive line of Chandler 6-cylinder cars;

The Hudson six, which appears in a new dress and with redesigned engine and chassis;

The Essex six, which looks as much like the new Hudson, only in a smaler size, as the "Little" Marmon looks like the big Marmon;

The Whippet six, which came as one of the surprises and is expected to be a companion to the Whippet four.

The new Auburn 8-77 which is the lowest priced straight-eight car yet produced.

Few Radical Changes.

The new passenger cars are low, sleek and gleaming. Every line of every model shows an ability for high speed and every interior seems an invitation to restful comfort. The engines are compact and powerful, and rival a fine watch in finish and operation. Some engines are in operation, where one may study the generation of energy from internal combustion, and chassis to demonstrate how this energy is transferred and placed at work through the rear axle.

Radical developments are absent to a great extent in the 1927 car. In their place have come trends toward certain body styles. Engineers have developed chassis of very low centers of gravity and bodies have been hung proportionately low. These cars seem built to hug the ground and give a feeling that they are solid and safe.

Closed Cars Predominate.

This show demonstrates that the once dominant type of open car is still produced by all makers. However, a large majority of the models shown are of the closed type. Three out of every four cars produced in America during 1926 were closed cars. If the trend continues, it is possible that the time will come when the few open models that are desired will be built to order.

In the lines of all the cars can

Because it is so sensible, and clarifies the automobile atmosphere, we the undersigned invite you to read the following frank letter from E. L. Cord, President of the Auburn Automobile Company

Announcing New Straight Eight

Gentlemen:—

"Now that you have the new Auburn Straight Eight to show to the public—and in view of the epidemic of rash statements and exaggerated claims being made for so-called 'new types' of cars—

It seems proper that we remind you that Auburn's substantial growth built upon public confidence is the result of our conservative policy.

In heralding the advent of our new Straight Eight we have purposely 'leaned backwards' in our statements and claims.

Some of you who have witnessed amazing demonstrations of this new car at our factories, have said our advanced announcements were too modest. Frankly, we believe there is too much bombast in automobile advertising and selling. Words never have been and never will be a substitute for value. Therefore, in contrast we have understated the merits of our new Straight Eight. This attitude has attracted the interest of thousands of substantial people.

Now that they can see, compare, drive and test the car itself we see no need for having 'a fit of adjectives.' We know how well the car is built, what it will do, and the way it will do it.

It is sufficient for any one who knows motor cars to let this Straight Eight do its own selling. There is nothing you can say that can make it better than it is. And nothing any competitor can say that can make it less than it is.

The reasons we have doubled our factory production capacity in anticipation of the tremendous public demand for this new Straight Eight are expressed in the accompanying extract from our advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post of December 25th.

In closing let me remind you of the most important thing about any automobile, and that is its fundamentals. No matter what 'niceties' or knick-knacks it may have, primarily a motor car is a vehicle for transportation service.

Auburn designed, built, tested and priced, this new Straight 8-77 with the aim of making it the most extraordinary and talked about car in the world; to be so conclusively outstanding and overwhelming in value as to make all competitive comparision an absolute impossibility for a long time to come.

Our experience and phenomenal success with Straight Eights the past two years qualified Auburn to undertake this, a most ambitious program for any automobile manufacturer. Ordinary methods could not achieve it. New factories, greater production capacity, new machinery, new equipment, new engineering and production methods were necessary. Auburn felt it was the only company in the industry in a position to make the preparations necessary to produce the Eight that everybody, everywhere would be glad to acknowledge of undisputed leadership in value.

From Saturday Evening Post December 25th

And a truly serviceable, comfortable, enduring car can not be built by skimping or shrinking. It must be of long wheelbase, of generous room and of rugged construction. Those things are basic—and are of greater importance than mere 'talking points.'

Motor wise as the public is today, it cares far more for results than for arguments. An inferior or old-style car can not be whitewashed with 'features.'

Our policy is to build so that Auburn cars will always run satisfactorily, and stand up in the hardest of service with a minimum of attention and also protect the owners investment by an extremely high resale value."

WHOLLY NEW REO LINE SHOWN IN ST. LOUIS

"Flying Cloud" Models Prove to Be Speedy, Finely Built and Very Good Looking.

Reo's wholly new line of six-cylinder cars.—"The Flying Cloud"—are being shown in St. Louis today by Reo St. Louis, Inc., distributer, and the Steiner-Fahrenkrog Co., and will be shown evenings throughout the week.

"The Flying Cloud" Reos have been developed after several years of research and testing by the Reo engineering department to provide an entirely new car of high speed, comfort and ease of handling, that will at the same time live up to the Reo reputation for long life and economical operation and maintenance. The new models are named after the swiftest, most graceful of the famous American clipper ships.

New Body Lines and 4-Wheel Brakes.

Outstanding details of the "Flying Cloud" standard equipment are hydraulic shock absorbers front and rear; balanced crank shaft with vibration dampener to smooth out motor impulses; cam and lever steering control; single disc clutch; thermostatic control of water circulation; rubber insulated motor suspension and internal expanding hydraulic brakes on all four wheels. The body is especially designed and all-steel.

Among other items of equipment and construction are new model oil filter; single piece windshield opening outward, air cleaner functioning freely at all speeds, integral sun visor, automatic windshield cleaner, double filament headlights, front and rear bumpers, cowl ventilator, full balloon tires and adjustable front seat.

New Engine; 121-Inch Wheelbase.

The powerful six-cylinder engine is one of the "Flying Cloud" outstanding features. This engine, of the L-head type, develops 65 horsepower. It operates smoothly at all speeds from 5 to 65 miles an hour, and its excess power and quick acceleration give it great flexibility in traffic and on hills. Piston displacement is 249 cubic inches; bore, 3¼ inches, and stroke 5 inches. In the new model, the engine is mounted on a 121-inch wheelbase—longer than in previous Reo models.

The cylinders are honed to glass-like finish, providing perfect piston fit and smoothness of operation.

Four large-sized bearings hold the cam shaft in perfect alignment. A spiral bevel gear, forged integral with the shaft, revolves both the oil pump drive shaft and the shaft leading to the distributor.

An air cleaner, functioning at all speeds, is located above the air valve of the carburetor, which is of Schebler make.

The engine is supported within the frame by four rubber-insulated supporting brackets to prevent transmission of engine vibration.

Seven-Bearing Crankshaft.

The seven-bearing crankshaft is balanced dynamically as well as statically, and has a vibration dampener. The shaft is forged from a single piece of steel, heat treated to increase resistance to torsional strains. The bearings are ground to minute specifications and are honed to glasslike smoothness.

Pressure feed lubrication is used on the "Flying Cloud." An oil pressure indicating gauge located on the instrument panel gives a visible oil pressure reading. An oil filter removes carbon, water and foreign matter.

A thermostatic regulator of water circulation makes motor warming easy and lessens dilution of oil in the crankcase by making the use of the choke less frequent. The clutch is of the single disc type, giving easy engagement and freedom from slipping. This exceptionally quiet clutch is positive in engagement and is easily disengaged by a light pedal pressure which makes it very popular with feminine drivers.

Cam and Lever Steering.

The Reo steering gear is of the cam and lever type, with variable pitch—which is much more easily operated than the average, according to Reo tests. The cam and lever construction prevents transmission of road jolts through the steering wheel.

The rear springs are underslung to lower the car's center of gravity and to provide for comfort and safety. Lovejoy hydraulic shock absrbers, front and rear, check spring rebound and add to comfort of motoring.

Lockheed hydraulic four-wheel brakes place car deceleration under absolute control. These are of internal expanding type and are protected by virtually waterproof housings.

New All-Steel Body.

The beautiful, all-steel body of the new "Fyling Cloudy" has a number of unusual features. The roof side-quarters are of all-steel construction, instead of the usual built-up fabric roof over slats. These steel-side quarters leave no break in the body top line, giving a finished appearance. The

The ceiling gives greater headroom with no sacrifice of the low lines of the top. Instead of being covered with a head lining, the roof bows are exposed and finished with an attractive steel moulding of walnut finish, giving a "beamed effect."

Iowa Town Has Lighted Road.

Ten 250-candlepower lights illuminate the principal highway into Missouri Valley, Ia. The lights are 400 feet apart.

Two New Reo "Flying Cloud" Models

Reo "Flying Cloud" 2-passenger coupe.

TWO NEW MODELS ANNOUNCED BY PAIGE

Price Cuts, Up to $100, Made on Seven Types in Three Series of Cars.

With the opening of the New York Automobile Show, announcement was made by the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Co. of a price cut, in most cases amounting to $100, affecting seven models in the three series of Paige six-cylinder cars.

Prices of four models of the 6-45 Paige were reduced, as also of two models of the 6-65 Paige. In the line of big six Paiges, only the limousine was reduced in price.

Two wholly new Paige models are announced—the 6-45 four-passenger cabriolet roadster, which takes its place as the lowest priced car of this type, listing at $1295, and a 6-45 two-passenger coupe at $1095.

The Wilson Motor Car Co., Paige-Jewett distributer in St. Louis, expects to receive a shipment of the new cabriolet roadsters and coupes soon.

There are five models in the 6-45 series. Besides the two new models just presented, there are the five-passenger touring car, the five-passenger brougham and the five-passenger sedan.

Both the new coupe and the new cabriolet roadster present many interesting features. The cabriolet, on a smaller chassis, is virtually a miniature of the larger Paige.

Features of the cabriolet include plate glass windows that disappear into the door and a top that may be folded back, converting the car to roadster type; remote control for the rear deck, so that the rumble seat may be made available for additional passengers by turning a handle in the front compartment; stream-lined headlamps and cowl lights, and heavy tubular bumpers finished in color to harmonize with the body, which is lacquered in sampan gray and Pemaquid blue. The driving compartment is upholstered in Spanish leather, over seat cushions built on comfort-type springs. Steel disc wheels and shock absorbers are standard.

The top of the new 6-45 coupe is in black, semi-soft type, embodying the latest features of design, such as ball-back, built-in visor, landau arms, French wings and narrow corner posts. The upholstery is optional, either patterned corduroy or buffed leather. The body colors are plain gray and dust-proof gray, in lacquer finish.

The coupe doors are fitted with remote control handles, and the plate glass windows are operated by quick-acting regulators.

INNOVATIONS IN NEW CHRYSLER '70' CARS

Style in Their Body Design Cause of Much Comment at New York Show.

With their new appearance, smartness, comfort, richness of upholstery and fittings, the Chrysler "70" cars on display at the annual automobile show in New York apparently will set up new vogues in automobile body designing, the Chrysler organization declares.

Innovations are evident in all body types shown in this model. Even the Chrysler "70" roadster has for one novelty long grained leather upholstery in color combinations to harmonize with body colors. Leather hinged seat backs, which move with the occupants' bodies and add to riding ease, offer still another novelty in the roadster.

The brougham, with its trunk and two-door roominess; the fleet new coupe and the two sedans—the Royal and the Crown, "the Finest of the Line"—all the closed cars of the new Chrysler "70" model this year present snappy alertness conferred by the new military front and cadet visor which has attracted general admiration.

dustry. They include cigar lighters, mirrors, vanity cases, ash trays, cologne bottles, heaters, lights, horns and tools. The importance of these parts and accessories may be learned from the official figures for 1926, showing their wholesale value amounted to $800,000,000.

An entirely harmonious scheme of decoration has been adopted. A Latin-American background has been selected largely by reason of the welcome extended by South and Central American countries to the delegation of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce on the occasion of its visit a few months ago.

LOW, SLEEK LINES RULE IN CARS AT NEW YORK SHOW

be discerned an effort to avoid resistance, that motion may be accelerated. The surfaces are curved from the radiator back and the hood meets the windshield smoothly to reduce friction.

In the matter of colors, wheelbase and over-all length the manufacturers have expressed their own preferences which they consider will be their customers' preference. The average wheel base of the 1927 car is about 115 to 120 inches. There are some cars barely over 100 inches in wheelbase and on the other hand there are cars with a wheelbase over 140 inches.

Some Cars in Vivid Colors.

There are some vivid colors but in general the makers have confined themselves to the single colors and combinations of not more than two tones. There are some beautiful tints in the popular colors, greens and blues and reds, while some of the glistening black models have touches of gay coloration. The outer metals such as brass, copper and aluminum are burnished.

The interior metal fittings have reached artistic heights. Handles, locks, window lifts and indicators are chased or engraved, nearly all are silver plated, though gold plating is by no means unusual in the more expensive cars.

In the interior of most of the closed cars are dark-toned rich, thick upholstery and low, resilient seats. There are many little conveniences such as vanity and writing cases and pockets. In the long wheelbase models is plenty of room but in the smaller models the designers have made room so that one is not cramped.

Carbureters More Efficient.

Carbureters have been made more efficient, there are new attachments for filtering and preheating the air, and for removing any impurities in the gasoline and oil.

Engines have been made more powerful by an increase of revolutions, they weigh less because of the use of light alloys or aluminum pistons, they run more smoothly and are longer-lived and need less attention because the crankshafts have greater diameter and turn on six or seven bearings.

An outstanding feature of the show is that some manufacturers have brought out new sculptured radiator cap ornaments. In some cases the car designers have combined an emblem or cap figure with the motometer, while others mount a figure on the cap and install a dash type heat indicator. A wide range of art, including a female figure, wings, birds and dogs is offered.

Parts and Accessories.

On the main and second floors of the show only complete cars are exhibited. On the third and fourth floors are the incidentals of the in-

NEW YELLOW TRUCKS HAVE 6-CYLINDER BUICK ENGINES

One and Two-Ton, Low Priced Vehicles to Be on Market Early This Year.

Announcement has been made by John Hertz, chairman of the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing Co., that early in 1927 it will market trucks of one and two-ton capacity, with the overhead valve, six-cylinder Buick engines, to sell at low prices.

A complete line of these trucks is being exhibited, for the first time, at the New York automobile show.

These new one and two-ton trucks have had hard tests at the General Motors proving grounds. They are capable of operating at unusually high speeds and the braking equipment insures quick stops. The two-ton truck has four-wheel brakes.

These new Buick engine trucks have self-starters, improved electric lights, commodious seating and leg room and especially convenient steering gear and dash arrangements for driver.

FEATURES OF KNOWN VALUE

L-Head Engine The L-Head Oldsmobile engine is of the reliable and time-tested poppet valve type. The bore of the cylinders is 2 7/8 inches, stroke 4¾ inches, 185 cubic inches displacement.

The gear ratio is such that maximum power is developed within the average driving range.

Ground Cylinders The cylinders of the Oldsmobile engine are finished to a hard, glass surface by honing with fine abrasive stones. This operation is indicative of the care and precision that is evident in the quality that extends to the smallest hidden part.

Crankcase Ventilation In all internal combustion engines water is formed by condensation. Cold engines do not burn all of the fuel on starting. This water and liquid fuel pass into the crankcase and form dilution.

Excessive dilution is eliminated by crankcase ventilation. One-third of the air that passes through the carburetor is drawn through a breather port in the left side of the engine. This air, cleaned of dust and injurious material by a second air cleaner on the breather port, passes through the crankcase before entering the carburetor. It draws off with it water vapor and unburned fuel that may have passed into the crankcase—thereby eliminating excessive dilution. This air also carries with it a small amount of the oil vapor created in the crankcase, which aids in more efficient lubrication of pistons, upper cylinder walls, and valves. Crankcase ventilation improves performance and gives longer life to the engine and longer useful life to the oil. This system is simple and efficient and has no moving parts.

Dual Air Cleaning Dust and dirt from the road form an abrasive or cutting element in the working parts of an engine. In Oldsmobile a primary air cleaner eliminates the injurious particles from two-thirds of the air before it enters the carburetor direct—while the second cleaner in connection with the feature of crankcase ventilation cleans the balance of the air.

Oil Filter An oil filter prolongs still more the life of the engine and the useful life of the oil. Sediment and foreign substances are removed as the oil passes through the filter and filter bag from the rear camshaft bearing.

Only 3 to 4 Oil Changes A Year Threefold security against wear; threefold protection in the trials of miles;—crankcase ventilation, dual air cleaning and oil filter bring new thrift—only 3 to 4 oil changes in an average driving year.

Harmonic Balancer The Harmonic Balancer, developed by General Motors engineers, counteracts vibration. The large, drop-forged crankshaft is dynamic and static balanced. The grain flow of metal in the forging is held at right angles to the lines of stress. Crankshaft and large pressure-cast main bearings are rigidly mounted in crankcase in strong webs integrally cast with case.

Four-Wheel Brakes Now Oldsmobile adds—at no increase in price—four-wheel brakes to further promote assurance of safety and driving peace of mind. The front wheel brakes are self-energizing, internal, three-shoe, expanding type. The brake is entirely enclosed as protection against water, dirt and oil. The action is positive and the braking efficient. The rear wheel brakes are the efficient split-band, two-piece type in which the action is mechanical and the bands clamp the drums like jaws, assuring maximum contact and braking. The hand or parking brake acts on the rear wheels. As a safe guard against driving with the parking brake applied, the foot pedal depresses with application of the parking brake.

Larger Balloon Tires In addition to four-wheel brakes at no increase in price Oldsmobile also adds larger, 30 by 5.25, balloon tires. These tires promote even greater riding comfort.

Balloon-Geared Steering The worm, split nut type steering mechanism is specially geared for safe and easy steering control. The ratio of the balloon-geared mechanism permits easy steering even in congested traffic.

Easy-Shift Transmission The transmission is built as a unit with the clutch and engine. The shifting lever is long and shifting is easy. Here is a feature of control that can be appreciated only after you have taken the wheel and enjoyed its advantages.

Three-Way Lubrication Thorough lubrication is assured by the use of "three-way" oil delivery. The accessible gear pump, operated by the forward end of the camshaft, delivers oil at equal pressure and camshaft to the main bearings. Efficient lubrication is assured, because oil is delivered through the oil filter and the oil tubes to the main bearings, and also flows through the full length of the drilled crankshaft oil passage. Passages from the main bearings deliver oil to camshaft bearings. Other parts of the engine are bathed in an oil spray from the bearings. Pressure is automatically regulated by an accessible control. There is an oil-pressure indicator on the dash and a depth gauge on the left side of the engine.

FEATURES OF KNOWN VALUE

You Gain By The Benefits of Success

Oldsmobile point by point—are

All these features of value, and all those others that will impress you as you go over this yours at Oldsmobile's low prices. In these features Oldsmobile returns to you the benefits of manufacturing advantages and economies, created by the greatest year in Oldsmobile history. The economies of General Motors are passed back to you. And if you please you may drive an Oldsmobile Series "E" as you pay for it from your income—on the G.M.A.C. plan of deferred payments.

Gratify Every Taste Satisfy Every Need

The Oldsmobile may be had in ten body styles: the Standard Touring, $875; the DeLuxe Touring, $980; the DeLuxe Roadster, $975; the Standard Coupe, $925; the DeLuxe Coupe, $990; the Standard Coach, $950; the DeLuxe Coach, $1050; the Standard Sedan, $1025; the DeLuxe Sedan, $1125; and the Landau, $1190; all prices f. o. b. Lansing. Standard and De Luxe types are the same, except that the latter include as steel bumpers, front and rear; snubbers all around; genuine motometer with lock bar cap; rear signal lamp and other added luxuries.

The gear ratio is such that maximum power is developed within the average driving range.

...ed Cylinders The cylinders of the Oldsmobile engine are finished to a hard, glass surface by honing with fine abrasive stones. This operation is indicative of the care and precision that is evident in the quality that extends to the smallest hidden part.

Crankcase Ventilation In all internal combustion engines water is formed by condensation. Cold engines do not burn all of the fuel on starting. This water and liquid fuel pass into the crankcase and form dilution.

Excessive dilution is eliminated by crankcase ventilation. One-third of the air that passes through the carburetor is drawn through a breather port in the left side of the engine. This air, cleaned of dust and injurious material by a second air cleaner on the breather port, passes through the crankcase before entering the carburetor. It draws off with it water vapor and unburned fuel that may have passed into the crankcase—thereby eliminating excessive dilution. This air also carries with it a small amount of the oil vapor created in the crankcase, which aids in more efficient lubrication of pistons, upper cylinder walls, and valves. Crankcase ventilation improves performance and gives longer life in the engine and longer useful life to the oil. This system is simple and efficient and has no moving parts.

Dual Air Cleaning Dust and dirt from the road form an abrasive or cutting element in the working parts of an engine. In Oldsmobile a primary air cleaner eliminates the injurious particles from two-thirds of the air before it enters the carburetor direct—while the second cleaner in connection with the feature of crankcase ventilation cleans the balance of the air.

Oil Filter An oil filter prolongs still more the life of the engine and the useful life of the oil. Sediment and foreign substances are removed as the oil passes through the filter and filter bag from the rear camshaft bearing.

Only 3 to 4 Oil Changes A Year Threefold security against wear; threefold protection in the trials of miles;—crankcase ventilation, dual air cleaning and oil filter bring new thrift—only 3 to 4 oil changes in an average driving year.

Harmonic Balancer The Harmonic Balancer, developed by General Motors engineers, counteracts vibration. The large, drop-forged crankshaft is dynamic and static balanced. The grain flow of metal in the forging is held at right angles to the lines of stress. Crankshaft and large pressure-cast main bearings are rigidly mounted in crankcase in strong webs integrally cast with case.

Four-Wheel Brakes Now Oldsmobile adds—at no increase in price—four-wheel brakes to further promote assurance of safety and driving peace of mind. The front wheel brakes are self-energizing, internal, three-shoe, expanding type. The brake is entirely enclosed as protection against water, dirt and oil. The action is positive and the braking efficient. The rear wheel brakes are the efficient split-band, two-piece type in which the action is mechanical and the bands clamp the drums like jaws, assuring maximum contact and braking. The hand or parking brake acts on the rear wheels. As a safe guard against driving with the parking brake applied, the foot pedal depresses with application of the parking brake.

Larger Balloon Tires In addition to four-wheel brakes at no increase in price Oldsmobile also adds larger, 30 by 5.25, balloon tires. These tires promote even greater riding comfort.

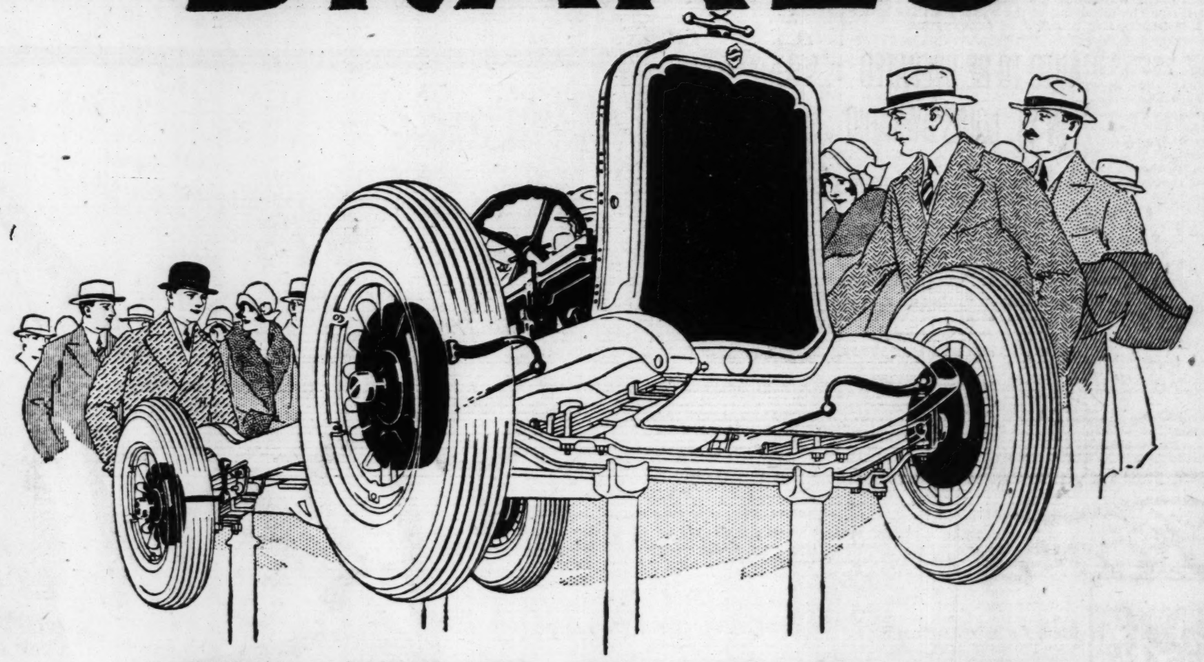
Balloon-Geared Steering The worm, split nut type steering mechanism is specially geared for safe and easy steering control. The ratio of the balloon-geared mechanism permits easy steering even in congested traffic

Easy-Shift Transmission The transmission is built as a unit with the clutch and engine. The shifting lever is long and shifting is easy. Here is a feature of control that can be appreciated only after you have taken the wheel and enjoyed its advantages.

Three-Way Lubrication Thorough lubrication is assured by the use of "three-way" oil delivery. The accessible gear pump, operated by the forward end of the camshaft, delivers oil at equal pressure and camshaft to the main bearings. Efficient lubrication is assured, because oil is delivered through the oil filter and the oil tubes to the main bearings, and also flows through the full length of the drilled crankshaft oil passage. Passages from the main bearings deliver oil to camshaft bearings. Other parts of the engine are bathed in an oil spray from the bearings. Pressure is automatically regulated by an accessible control. There is an oil-pressure indicator on the dash and a depth gauge on the left side of the engine.

Clutch Features The single-plate, dry-disc clutch engages positively, yet gently. The design is simple, adjustment seldom required. Pedal pressure is very light. The housing is ventilated. The patented self-lubricating clutch release bearing, mounted in a self-aligning trumion throw-out yoke is of compressed baked carbon-graphite and normally lasts the life of the car.

OLDSMOBILE ANNOUNCES FOUR-WHEEL BRAKES



AND LARGER BALLOON TIRES

NO PRICE INCREASE

Crankcase Ventilation, Oil Filter, Dual Air Cleaning, Two-Way Cooling, Harmonic Balancer, item after item described in the marginal notes. . . and now—larger (30x5.25) Balloon Tires and Four-Wheel Brakes!

Thus Oldsmobile adds to its imposing array of features of known value and demonstrated worth in the car that asks no favors, fears no road.

Thus Oldsmobile keeps faith with its policy pledged to progress. Today, more than ever before . . . no matter what car you favor or what price you are willing to pay . . . you owe it to yourself, your pocketbook and your sense of satisfaction to know Oldsmobile Six. See it, drive it, go over it, point by point, study every feature. Then and only then, can you realize what a remarkable value this Oldsmobile is.

PRODUCT of GENERAL MOTORS

Thermostatic Charging Control When on the road there is a sense of security in knowing that your electrical system is functioning properly and your generator giving an adequate charge. Oldsmobile has thermostatic control on the generator that automatically increases charging when the engine is cold and decreases it as the temperature rises. Spark control is full automatic.

FACTORS OF PROVEN WORTH

Special Design Combustion Chambers This shape gives greater turbulence to incoming gases, producing smooth and spirited performance and is a modern development of General Motors Research Laboratories.

Two-Way Cooling Oldsmobile offers "two-way" cooling which incorporates the best features of the two accepted types—pressure and thermo-siphon cooling. At the points where greatest heat is generated—around the valves, valve seats, spark plugs and combustion chambers — pressure-circulated water is driven through a manifold type passage. Cylinder walls do not heat so rapidly. A full flow of cooling water would cool them too much. Therefore the circulation is restricted and retarded. In other words, parts at the points of greatest heat are cooled by the pressure method of circulation, while the slower thermo-siphon type of action, in which the rate of circulation is largely governed by the reaction of heat upon the water, maintains about the cylinders sufficient warmth for efficient operation. This also aids in eliminating crankcase dilution. All deluxe types are equipped with thermostat cooling control.

High Velocity Hot Section Manifold The manifold retains the high velocity given the incoming gases as they leave the carburetor and pass on into the combustion chambers. To further promote complete vaporization of the incoming fuel, jacketing of the intake manifold by the heated exhaust manifold is effected in the vertical section of the intake passage above the carburetor. The intake manifold being above the exhaust manifold, and heated by it, retains the highly explosive state of incoming gases.

Double Valve Springs The double valve springs, similar to those employed in aircraft and racing car engines, together with the "quieting-curve" contour of cams, result in positive valve action. Valve lifters rotate while in action, minimizing noise and wear.

Silent Timing Chain Camshaft and generator are driven off crankshaft by a silent chain, operating in a constant flow of oil.

Double-Offset Low Gravity Frame This design provides parallel mounting of springs for greatest roadability. The frame is 28 inches wide in front, providing short turning radius, and 42 inches wide at rear for proper mounting. There are four strong cross-members, the front member tubular for extra strength and best engine mounting, the rear 14 inches wide for strength at point of greatest stress. Cross-members are strongly webbed and gusseted to frame side rails. The frame is "kicked-up" over rear axle to provide low gravity, easy riding and ability to hold the road.

Interior Features The mohair upholstery of a taupe shade in all closed body types has exceptional lustre and wearing quality. The satin nickel fittings are of rich, period design. Their beauty is but one feature, their utility another. The quick-acting window lifts, large interior door handles, ash receptacle in five-passenger closed types, VV windshield, automatic windshield cleaners on closed cars, instruments unit-grouped in walnut panel centered on instrument board, walnut steering wheel, heavy rug and rubber mat, genuine feather upholstery in open cars, deep spring-cushioned seats at angles of greatest ease and many other features.

Fisher Two-Tone Duco Bodies . . . Chromium Plating The Fisher bodies are finished in lustrous two-tone Duco, polished to a finish distinctively beautiful yet in conservative good taste. They are of the reliable composite construction of steel sheathing on a strong hardwood frame with joints that are mortise-wedged, glued, screwed, bolted and given extra strength at principal points by steel braces. The radiator is finished in the new permanent-lustre chromium, exclusively Oldsmobile's.

Twin-Beam Lights Controlled from Steering Wheel Head lamps have double filament bulbs, one for "bright," one for "dim." On "dim" the light is bright and projects at a downward angle that gives ample vision to the Oldsmobile driver yet protects oncoming drivers and conforms to all state laws. Headlights are operated by a neat lever, like the hand throttle, on the steering wheel. It may be operated without removing hands from wheel, slowing down or taking eyes from road.

Instruments Indirectly Illuminated Soft indirect lighting individually illuminates each instrument without glare or reflection in driver's eyes.

Instrument Panel Fuel Gauge A reliable instrument board fuel gauge is standard on all Oldsmobiles.

Thief-Proof Car Lock A new thief-proof car lock is a feature. The engine cannot be started with key left in lock. Turning off ignition positively locks the car. This is an entirely new and exclusive method of positive locking. Thieves cannot "cut over" as on other locks, for switch and coil are built integral in a vault-like steel housing. A non-locking "temporary stop" position is provided.

THREE NEW AUBURN LINES ARE EXHIBITED

An 8-Cylinder Sedan at $1495 and Low-Priced 6-Cylinder Models Reach St. Louis.

The new Auburn models—including an eight-cylinder line in which the sport sedan lists at only $1495; a six-cylinder line with 120-inch wheelbase which has a sport sedan at $1195, and a standard sedan at $1295, and a big eight, priced at $1995 to $2595—are arriving at the Mound City Automobile Co., St. Louis district distributer, and are to be shown today and evenings throughout the week. The $1495 eight sport sedan is the lowest priced straight eight car yet introduced.

Joseph A. Schlecht, president of the Mound City Auto Co., said yesterday that acceptance of the new Auburns at private showings all over the country had far surpassed the factory's expectations. Thousands of letters of praise had been received at the Auburn factory, he said.

Speedy, Powerful Car.

The low-priced Auburn eight is known as the 8-77. The big eight is the 8-88. The former's engine has 2¾-inch bore and 4¾-inch stroke and a Lanchester dampener to prevent crankshaft vibration. The bore and the stroke of the engine of the 8-88 are 3¼ and 4½ inches. This car also has the Lanchester dampener. The Auburn six engine has 2¾-inch bore and 4¾-inch stroke and Lanchester dampener.

The 8-77 engine develops 77-horsepower, and the car is said to have a speed range up to fully 75 miles per hour.

The big eight's brake horsepower is 88, and the sport sedan is good for 80 miles per hour and faster. While the general designs of these cars has undergone no drastic change, such as would cause previous models to be classed as obsolete, they are distinctive in color treatment and design.

Auburn has lowered its models, both open and closed. It has met the change in the trend of motor car design which made itself felt more than three years ago.

In so doing, the engineering has increased road stability, riding comfort and appearance.

Auburn engineers have not sacrificed head clearance. Instead, the new models have ample head space and leg room and the over-all measurements of the interiors of the bodies have been increased.

The 8-88 and 8-77 sport sedans and four-door body styles are luxurious.

The 8-77 in Rolls Royce blue, with black fenders and jet black lacquer top above the double-beading. The belt line between the molding is blended with the body blue, enhancing the smart appearance of the car. The interior is in mohair and is cushioned with the finest type of springs. The spacious door windows are crank regulated, the handles being in engraved frosted silver finish. The instrument panel has been designed in keeping with the other graceful appointments. All instruments are grouped under oval concave glass in the center of the panel. This is illuminated with the indirect dash lighting system which prevents glare in the eyes to front seat occupants.

The wheel base of the 8-77 is 125 inches, that of the 8-88 sport sedan is 130 inches.

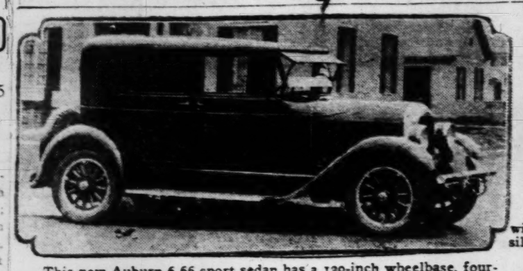
Every appointment in Auburn's new cars has been designed to make for elegance.

Auburn offers four of the new 8-77 models—a roadster, at $1295; a sport sedan, $1495; Royal sedan, $1695; Wanderer, or bed model, sedan, $1745.

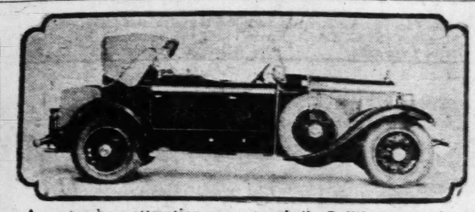
There are four models in the new 6-66 series—a roadster, at $1045; sport sedan, $1195; Royal sedan, $1295; Wanderer sedan, $1345.

Five models are offered in the 8-88 series—roadster, $1895; sport sedan, $2095; Royal sedan, $2195; Wanderer sedan, $2245, and seven-passenger sedan, with 147-inch base, $2595. These prices are all f. o. b. factory.

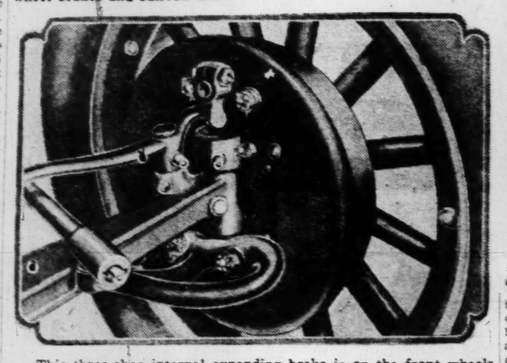
New Things in Autos Seen at New York Show



This new Auburn 6-66 sport sedan has a 120-inch wheelbase, four-wheel brakes and balloon tires.



An auto show attraction—a custom-built Cadillac sport phaeton with Victoria style top over rear seat, polished steel hood, black and silver leaf color scheme, double cowl and tonneau windshield.



This three-shoe internal expanding brake is on the front wheels of new Oldsmobile cars. The revolving of the wheel adds the breaking force through a self-energizing principle of construction.

AUTO TO BE OPERATED IN ST. LOUIS BY RADIO

Control Car to Direct Chandler Sedan's Movements Through Streets.

A driverless Chandler sedan is scheduled to be operated through the streets of St. Louis by radio the first three days of this week. It will be accompanied by a control car which follows or stands 10 to 150 yards behind it. The sedan will be equipped with three receiving sets connected to three motors; one, reversible, on the steering wheel; another attached to the clutch and brake, and the starting motor.

The control board on the rear car has three telegraph keys attached to three transmitters which will broadcast impulses to the receivers on the driverless car. The wave lengths to be used are 109 and 120 meters.

Through the control car, it is possible to turn five sets of lights on the driverless car "on" or "off," blow the horn, ring a bell, start and stop the engine, advance and retard the spark, shift gears, operate the clutch and gears, and steer the car.

The Chandler sedan is to be furnished by the Lewis Automobile Co., St. Louis distributor. A representative of the Francis P. Houlihan Co., New York, is to operate the control car.

The time and places where the driverless car is to be operated are as follows:

Monday, 10 a. m., from South Jefferson avenue over Broadway to Chouteau avenue. At 12 o'clock, from Twelfth boulevard down Washington avenue to Broadway, thence to Olive street and west to Twelfth; 1:30, fro mNatural Bridge avenue over Grand boulevard to Laclede avenue; 2:30, from Lindell boulevard and Kingshighway to Delmar boulevard, west to the Wabash tracks; 3:15, from Wellston down Easton to Grand; 4:15, west on Delmar from Grand to Kingshighway.

Tuesday, 10 a. m., from McPherson and Walton avenues to Lindell, east over Locus to Twelfth; 12, from Twelfth down Locust to Fourth, thence to Market and west to Twelfth; 1, from Twelfth down Chestnut to Seventh, thence to Locust, west to Eighth and south to Market; 2:15, from Twelfth on Chestnut to Grand, and south to Lafayette; 3, from Grand and Shaw south to Chippewa; 4, east on Chippewa to Jefferson, north to Cherokee and west to Grand.

Wednesday's schedule has not been announced.

NEW GASOLINE BROUGHT OUT BY ROXANA PETROLEUM CORP.

"Super-Shell" Said to Stop Engine Knocks and Start Quickly in Cold Weather.

The Roxana Petroleum Corp. announces the perfecting of a new and improved gasoline which is said to do three things which motorists demand — stop engine knocks, start quickly in cold weather and give increasing power.

This new product, Super-Shell, is refined by a new process from specially selected napthenebase crudes containing elements that give it its peculiar properties. It is a natural product, free from all added chemicals or other foreign ingredients and is perfectly safe for anyone to use.

It is claimed that Super-Shell is different from other gasoline as it not only has the property of stopping motor knocks but at the same time assures instant starting, accelerates quickly, burns clearly and gives noticeable increased power the full length of every piston stroke.

It is announced that Super-Shell is offered at only a slight advance over the regular price and can be had at Shell service stations and at the stations of nearly all Shell dealers.

Automotive Engineers to Dine.

The Society of Automotive Engineers will hold its annual dinner on Jan. 13 in New York during auto show week.

FOUR-WHEEL BRAKES ON NEW OLDSMOBILES

Larger Balloon Tires Also Added—No Increase in Prices.

Oldsmobile announces addition of four-wheel brakes and larger balloon tires at no increase in prices. The new Olds six cars are being shown today by the De Luxe Automobile Co., distributer. This was the surprise Oldsmobile officials made public at the New York automobile show.

The four-wheel brakes are of improved design. The new full balloon tires are 30x5.25 size. These additional points of value without increase in prices have been made possible, the officials say, by economies in manufacture due to constantly increasing sales.

The type of four-wheel brakes used were decided on after extensive experiments to determine the style best suited to the Oldsmobile chassis. The front wheel brakes are light in weight, thus aiding easy steering, are self energizing and enclosed and fully protected against dirt, water or oil.

A three-shoe, internal expanding brake is on the front wheels. When the pedal is depressed a cam inside the brake operates the shoes against the drum. The revolving of the wheels adds to the braking force through the self-energizing principle of the brake construction. The front wheel brake drums are 12 inches in diameter and the brake lining is 1¾ inches wide by 3-16 of an inch thick. Only two adjustments are required to keep the brakes at their highest efficiency.

The rear brakes are the standard external contracting brakes. The hookup of the front and rear brakes operates through equalizers which gives even pressure to each wheel.

A new front axle has been installed. It is of the conventional reverse Elliot type with the king pin inclined at an angle to relieve brake pressure on the inner front wheel when a turn is being made.

The hand, or parking brake, functions on the rear wheels. When this brake is applied the service brake pedal is partly depressed so that the driver, before he starts his car, is warned that his parking brake is engaged.

The larger 5.25 balloon tires provide more comfortable riding qualities and enhance the appearance of the Oldsmobile.

'COLLEGIATE' ROADSTER ADDED TO WHIPPET LINE

The new addition to the Whippet line, the "Collegiate" roadster which is being shown in St. Louis for the first time by Willys-Overland dealers. The colors are champagne green above the belt and Corson green below. The belt line is in black lacquer with the stripe edged in white, and the wheels are red. The mohair top is silver gray. The upholstering is Spanish leather, grained in gray.

A comfortable seat is in the rear deck where there is ample leg room.

This roadster has an automatic windshield cleaner and rear vision mirror. It is on a standard Whippet chassis, and has four-wheel brakes. Price is $695 f. o. b. Toledo.

Celebrating the Most Significant Record in Motor Car History

When public opinion takes hold of a product like the Chrysler and in three years' time lifts it over the heads of twenty-three other long established cars — from twenty-seventh place in volume in the industry to fourth place—the significance of the act is almost too plain to require analysis.

It can only mean, of course, that people have found in the Chrysler qualities and values they did not find elsewhere. No other explanation is even remotely possible.

Had this award of public preference come because Chrysler catered to one large volume, low-priced market, it would still have been remarkable enough.

In the four great quality car fields, they have preferred Chrysler to long established cars of both lower and higher price, sensing in Chrysler engineering, design, beauty, performance and long life, elements of progressiveness which inspired them to invest in Chrysler products the staggering total of five hundred and thirty millions of dollars ($530,000,000) in three years' time.

It is an inspiring tribute of public confidence—one which fills Walter P. Chrysler and his organization with a deep and serious sense of responsibility for the future.

It is their determination so rigidly to apply the Chrysler principle of Standardized Quality that fourth place in the industry will be merely a temporary stopping place—a momentary pause on the way to the higher place they will earnestly try to deserve in public esteem.

New and Marvelously Beautiful Fisher Bodies —a host of Mechanical Improvements—New Features found only on the costliest cars —plus an Amazing Reduction in Prices!

America has always expected great things from its greatest industry. But the announcement of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet has been the automotive sensation of all time!

Here is a car which in beauty, luxury, quality and modern design challenges the costliest creations of the day. Here, in a price class where average standards have been the rule, is now offered a car so far beyond all expectation that comparisons cease to exist.

Seven superb models styled as low priced cars were never styled before and offering such marks of fine-car distinction as: full crown one-piece fenders, bullet type lamps and "fish tail" rear deck modeling! New and supremely beautiful bodies by Fisher! And above all, infinitely finer quality—the result of a host of additional improvements such as: AC oil filter, AC air cleaner, coincidental steering and ignition lock, larger 17" steering wheel, gasoline gauge and many, many others!

All this is combined to a supreme degree in the long famous leader of the Chevrolet line—the Coach. It would be a brilliant achievement for any manufacturer merely to design such a splendid car to sell at any reasonably low price. But to sell it at the amazing price of $595 is a feat of history making proportions. This one price reduction alone would suffice to center world-wide attention on Chevrolet. But due to economies of tremendous production plus the vast resources of General Motors, Chevrolet also announces striking price reductions on other models.

For years Chevrolet has led the world in providing Quality at Low Cost. But now with a new and more beautiful car—with a car infinitely finer in quality and greatly lower in price, Chevrolet stands supreme and unchallenged in dollar-for-dollar value!

No matter in what price class you intend to buy or whether you plan to spend more or less than the price of a Chevrolet, come in today and see the most beautiful low-priced Coach ever designed. Admire its marvelous style and grace! Mark its many new fine-car features! Learn for yourself by personal inspection why, at its new low price, it is the greatest sensation of America's greatest industry!

SURVEY ORDERED FOR CONCRETING ROUTE 61 SOUTH

Paving of 68 Miles of Gravel Highway in Southeast Missouri in 1927 Planned by State Engineers.

Preliminary work toward making Federal Route No. 61—the St. Louis-Memphis highway—entirely of concrete is to start soon with a survey for a permanent route southward from the concrete at Ancel, Cape Girardeau County, for 28 miles in Scott County and 40 miles in New Madrid County, to the concrete at Portageville.

This 68 miles of No. 61 is now gravel. Concreting of it will give a paved highway from St. Louis to Memphis via Flat River, Cape Girardeau, Sikeston, Portageville, Mo., Blytheville and Marion, Ark. As is generally known, No. 61 south from St. Louis is all-weather.

Route 61 now follows the old Kingshighway between Ancel and Portageville. It is 16 feet wide.

The heavy traffic, this being the main thoroughfare from the North to Florida and Texas, as well as the direct road from St. Louis to Memphis, has been too great for the gravel surface, so the State Highway Department decided to complete the concrete pavement this year.

The exact route the highway will follow is, of course, to be determined by the survey. But while in general it is believed it will adhere closely to the Kingshighway, probably several towns now on the highway will be passed by, as an effort is being made to make the highway as nearly airline as possible.

The survey will be under the direction of Assistant Engineer Sayers and Engineer Laughlin. After it is completed, it must be approved by the State Highway Commission before right of way can be purchased and construction begun.

CUTS IN PRICES OF WHIPPET CARS RANGE FROM $10 TO $50

Price reductions on Whippet cars ranging from $10 to $50, have been made by the Willys-Overland Co.

The reductions are as follows: Coupe, $675 to $625; coach, $675 to $625; sedan, $740 to $725; landau, $765 to $755; touring car, 645 to $625. The roadster, a new model, is listed at $695.

FORD DEALER TO ENTERTAIN AT RADIO PARTY IN ST. LOUIS

The Carondelet Motor Co. will keep open house Tuesday and Friday evenings for friends and Ford owners to hear the old fashioned dance music which will be broadcast through KSD from New York City when Henry Ford's Orchestra plays at a special exhibit in the showrooms of the Ford Motor Co. FORD TO REBUILD ANY 1925 CAR DEALER SENDS TO PLANT

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 8.—The Ford Motor Co. has inaugurated rebuilding service. For $60 it will completely rebuild any 1925 Ford car sent to the factory by a dealer, the job including new paint, complete motor overhaul, and new upholstery. Tire equipment is not replaced under this offer.

The plan, which was announced this week, is expected to prove a decided boon to Ford dealers. Cars taken in trade may be shipped to the factory and rejuvenated at the minimum cost. Accordingly, greater allowances may be made in trading and a higher used-car value placed on the car. The latter is heightened by the fact that all cars thus rebuilt carry a three-month factory guarantee.

Continental Motors Net Earnings.

The annual statement just issued by Continental Motors Corp. shows net earnings for the year of $2,026,327, or approximately $1.15 a share on 1,760,845 shares of common stock outstanding.

385 Grade Crossings Eliminated.

Three hundred and eighty-two grade crossings in Minnesota have been eliminated since the State took control of main highways in 1921.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS IN NEW FRANKLIN CARS

Model Said to Have Increased Power, Speed, Smoothness and More Room.

With new performance in power, speed, smoothness and enhanced riding ease and roominess, the Series 11 Franklin reaches its climax in the twenty-fifth anniversary car now on display at the automobile show in New York. The new Franklins are being shown by the Franklin Motor Car Co., St. Louis distributors.

In the sedan two inches have been added to the width of the rear seat and two inches to the length of the rear compartment. The pitch of the front seats has been slightly changed to give added comfort, and the instrument board has been moved forward two inches. Front and rear doors have been widened 1½ inches and now open at the angle of 78 degrees, giving ease of entrance to both compartments. A widening of the distance between the gear shift lever and the seat makes access to the driver's position easier from the right-hand door.

A notable improvement is the new six-inch tires, which need only 28 pounds inflation. Driving fatigue is also minimized by the snubbing of road shocks before reaching the steering apparatus.

Clear Vision a Feature.

Another feature which characterizes this Franklin is the clear vision designed by Franklin and now incorporated in every closed body in the line. The narrow pillars not only add to appearance, but also make driving more safe by preventing the "blind spots."

The Series 11 engine has been made more smooth by the use of a new and larger crankshaft 2⅝ inches in diameter at the main bearings and 2¼ inches at the pins. Even when the car is driven with wide open throttle, the same freedom from vibration is apparent as at lower speeds.

The advance in power of the twenty-fifth anniversity Franklin is shown in increased "pick-up," due to a new design of intake manifold and enlargement of the intake line including the fuel transformer and carburetor. Acceleration in the touring range between 35 and 50 miles an hour has been quickened. Rapid acceleration at city traffic speeds, from 5 to 25 miles per hour, is one of the salient characteristics of the Series 11. In the latest design, a maximum of 10 per cent has been added to developed horsepower with no change in the size of the engine.

The new Franklin has counterweighted wheels, which give more steadiness at high speeds. Ease of steering also has been promoted by ball bearings in thefront axle steering yoke, which provide free turning when in parking positions and prevents stiff steering on wet roads.

Ten Types of Bodies.

Cold weather operation is made easier by a new manifold design which secures an even distribution of the gasoline mixture. A choke is provided for emergency use. Quick warming is further assisted by hood grille shutters.

Among other improvements in the twenty-fifth anniversary Franklin are new light-colored shadow stripe broadcloth upholstery, twin beam lenses, imported stabilator attachment, a rubber battery box, combination cigar lighter and inspection lamp, a crankcase ventilator and various changes in bearing surfaces and dimensions calculated to produce long life.

The new Franklin affords a wide choice of bodies in regular production including sedan in three types, coupe in two types, touring, runabout, victoria, enclosed-drive limousine and the new tandem sport. A full line of custom bodies built by De Causse is also offered.

PRINCIPLES OF LEADING AUTO MAKERS SHOWN IN NEW BOOK

Close-ups of the principles and policies of some of the leading producers in the automotive industry, extending over a period of 20 years, and his intimate association with those companies as adviser and advertising counsellor, are given by Theodore F. MacManus in a book called "The Sword-Arm of Business," which is just coming off the press of the Devin-Adair Co., of New York.

MacManus has enjoyed a broader experience and a closer contact with the leading personalities and the leading companies of the automotive industry than perhaps any other single individual. These associations have made him known to tens of thousands of motor car men throughout the country, though he has seldom been seen or heard by the general public.

A story similar to this, indicating why the principles and policies of such great organizations as Hupmobile, Cadillac, Dodge Brothers, Maxwell and Chrysler, and the Fisher Body Corporation, were deliberately and definitely laid down and developed as they have been, has never been told.

URGES PUBLISHING OF USED CAR FACTS

R. C. Frampton Would Have Buyers Know Real Value of Old Autos.

R. C. Frampton, president of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., spoke at a meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association at Hotel Claridge, Wednesday, on "Buying, Handling and Selling of Used Cars."

Frampton expressed the opinion that a plan should be worked out for the automblie dealers to unite in publishing in the newspapers weekly the present resale value of automobiles of standard makes for the different models and years manufactured. First, persons who buy new cars may have correct information regarding the cash credit they can fairly expect for their old cars in trade for new cars. Secondly, buyers of used cars would have a guide to protect them in purchasing.

The average new car buyer would know what to expect in trade for his used car, Frampton said, because under the present methods he has no way of knowing what it is actually worth, and when this information is made available to him by reputable dealers through this newspaper advertisement at regular intervals, it will bring about a condition that will eliminate a great amount of "trading" and "bartering" that so often takes place during the purchase of a new car.

He also asserted that any transaction on the purchase of a new car that was not profitable to both buyer and seller could not work for the good of either, and that many new car buyers realize that they cannot afford to do business with a firm that does not make a fair profit on the sale of new cars. Frampton pointed out that those engaged in the automobile business were about the only merchants who were required to pay cash in advance for the merchandise they sell, and that the gross profit on the standard makes of new cars was so limited, and the cost of reconditioning, advertising and reselling the used car was so high, that any dealer who tried to create a volume of new car business by wild speculative trading would soon accumulate a large stock of used cars with consequent frozen assets and be a poor dealer for the customer to do business with. Any new car buyer who feels that he gained a temporary advantage when he made a long trade would usually find out that the car he had bought was to be superseded by a new model or else the dealer did not count on giving him proper service and often times would not be in business to take care of the cars he had sold.

Frampton also suggested that some plan be worked out in which a salesman of new cars would be financially interested in the deal, through the amount of profit that he earned on each sale, in handling the deal in a manner which would protect the best interests of both the customer and the firm he was working for, it being essential that he be recompensed in a manner that would insure his full interest, and the amount of his earnings to be in direct ratio with his ability to make a profitable deal. Frampton likened the purchase of automobiles, at present, to the purchase of women's hats and gowns, saying that the automobile business would becomes a great deal like the millinery business, in that automobiles would be devised in the latest fashions, the most beautiful shapes and colors evolved. The tastes of the women of the family is becoming a larger factor in the influencing of the sale of automobiles, and he predicted that their influence would be dominant in about 90 per cent of the purchases made by the average family, and that the woman's idea of what constitutes a home automobile in lines, appointments, comfort, would be important.

More than 1,500,000 square feet of floor space are being added to the present plants of the Oakland Motor Car Company at Pontiac, Michigan, which will be devoted exclusively to the manufacture of Oakland and Pontiac Sixes.

$15,000,000 more

to meet the demand for Oakland and Pontiac Sixes

Scarcely twelve months ago Oakland was only one of many manufacturers striving for pre-eminence. Today it ranks among the largest builders of motor cars in the world. Responsible for this tremendous growth have been a continuous series of triumphs resulting in a record-breaking 212% increase in business over 1925.

With the advent of the past year, came the introduction of the Pontiac Six. So great was the demand it created, that in six months Pontiac Six production had exceeded the greatest full year record previously scored by a new make of car. And by the end of the year, with Pontiac production reaching 76,523 cars that record had been surpassed by more than 100%! In July came the Greater Oakland Six with 77 refinements, featured by that epochal engineering development—the Rubber-Silenced Chassis. Again America paid a wholehearted tribute to Oakland engineering vision.

1925 Production 43,018

1926 Production 134,089

Oakland and Pontiac Sixes

And again, in every section of the land, Oakland sales leaped upward, necessitating the unprecedented production of 57,566 Oakland Sixes—nearly 15,000 more than in 1925—and surpassing any previous record in Oakland's twenty year history.

Now, with its position securely established, Oakland-Pontiac bids for new and greater heights—for over fifteen millions of dollars are being invested to provide for greater production.

This staggering sum—the combined cost of a new Pontiac Six plant, with a capacity of 1,000 cars a day and of important expansions in the facilities devoted to the manufacture of Oakland Sixes—definitely assures Oakland-Pontiac buyers of even greater value in the future. For it makes possible the employment of even more efficient methods of production—even greater precision in construction—even more exacting standards in the never-ending inspections which govern every phase of Oakland-Pontiac manufacture and which have been so instrumental in achieving worldwide good will for these two quality Sixes.

In the strictest sense, this huge investment represents more than an expression of confidence by General Motors in Oakland principles of design, manufacture and distribution.

It stands as a tangible pledge to the public at large that in fundamental goodness and fundamental value Oakland Six and Pontiac Six will continue supreme in their fields!

Pontiac Six, $825 to $975. Oakland Six, companion to Pontiac Six, $1025 to $1295. All prices at factory. Bodies by Fisher. Easy to pay on the liberal General Motors Time Payment Plan.

A STATEMENT

By the President of Dodge Brothers, Inc.

Within a few months, Dodge Brothers, Inc., will introduce a new line of motor cars, in no way conflicting with the market for Dodge Brothers present types, but occupying a considerably higher price field and produced in limited quantities.

Combining Dodge Brothers well known dependability with exceptional performance and striking beauty of appointment and design, these distinguished vehicles, we believe, will instantly set a new and higher standard in fine car practice.

Dodge Brothers will continue to produce their present line in maximum quantities to meet a demand which, during the year just ended, was very much the largest in their history, reaching the record total of 330,000 cars.

The FLYING CLOUD

The Reo Flying Cloud Sedan

In Port Today!

- the finest, fastest model of America's longest lasting car

Four hydraulic shock absorbers

As indication of the completeness and expensiveness of the equipment furnished, the Reo FLYING CLOUD is regularly equipped with four hydraulic shock absorbers, of a type heretofore found only on the most expensive cars.

Finger Tip Control simple, single disc clutch, engaging easily, quietly and without jerking.

Torsion Vibration Absorber. Seven-bearing Crankshaft.

Adjustable front seat. Increased power.

Dynamically balanced wheels. Front and rear bumpers.

Finger Tip Steering, modern cam and lever type.

Double filament controlled beam lights, non-glare lenses.

Motor, full rubber floated at four suspension points.

Automatic, positive action, crankcase ventilator.

Thermostatic heat control insuring Summer heat under all conditions.

It's new—new from stem to stern—this entirely different model of America's Longest Lasting Car.

For it Reo has chosen the name and image of the Flying Cloud—most famous of American clipper ships, the world's most beautiful means of travel.

Today, the NEW Reo Flying Cloud is on display. Today, you can see this startling new Reo, whose appearance is so distinctive, whose performance is so phenomenal, that it sets the mark toward which other cars must trend—whose construction is so sturdy that Flying Clouds, after running 100,000 miles, have in every part set a new standard of durability for America's Longest Lasting Car.

See it, ride in it, drive it—let the hushed sweep of its floating, swift travel tell its own story of what automobile ownership can mean in 1927, and for years to come.

Among many other items of equipment and features of construction are: Single piece windshield opening outward, vanity case and smoking set, rear traffic signal, transmission lock, automatic windshield cleaner, cowl ventilator, parking lights, genuine full balloon tires, integral sun visor, rear-view mirror.

Newly designed hydraulic four-wheel brakes

Internal, not external—providing: Equally effective braking under all weather conditions, wet or dry, hot or cold. As effective braking in reverse as in going forward. These brakes are an exclusive feature of the Reo FLYING CLOUD.

Bodies, in the Continental manner, exclusive Flying Cloud design, clear vision, lowered height.

Interiors tailored in an entirely new treatment!

Speed like a storm cloud before a hurricane.

Tornado-like acceleration. Air cleaner functioning freely at all speeds.

Longer wheelbase. New model oil filter.

Shoalwater Blue exterior. Cellini pattern fittings.

Gasoline gauge on the instrument board. Parking Brake, on transmission shaft.

Thermostatically controlled generator preventing battery overcharging.

A Cartoonist's Idea of "The Jazz Singer"

Second Thoughts on First Nights

By Alexander Woollcott.

NEW YORK, Jan. 8.

IT HAS remained for a young woman from Kentucky, after contemplating that faintly fabulous phenomenon of American life known as a murder trial, to decide that no medium of dramatic expression would be equal to it except farce. The mood and manner of the new play so ungraciously called "Chicago" (and, as now performed at the Music Box, its resident impression) is extravagant burlesque. Yet there is not an incident, not a word, not an accent in all its derisive account of the crime, arrest, trial and triumphant acquittal of Roxy Hart, "the prettiest woman ever tried for murder in Cook County," which the young author of the play might not have heard with her own ears or witnessed with her own wide eyes during the days when she was writing up murder cases from "the woman's angle" for one of the great Chicago dailies.

Or so at least I gather from the anecdote let fall by Chicago reporters when, on occasions, they pay our awestruck town a visit. Then, in the manner of a cowboy among tenderfeet, they sit with hat tilted and legs outstretched among the more humdrum lads from Times Square and Park Row, telling tall tales interminable of the Midland city where (according to my now somewhat confused recollection of their testimony) every reporter carries his own machine gun and no cub gets his first raise until he has slapped some impertinent policeman in the face before witnesses.

"CHICAGO" is the study of a merry, devil-take-the-hindmost defeat of justice through the use of every winsome little murderess as a circulation getter and the crisis of the drama is not the threat that the fair Roxy will go to the electric chair or (in case you happen to feel that way about it) not even the threat that the fair Roxy will escape the electric chair. The climax of "Chicago"—its moment of agonized suspense—turns on the question whether or not the fair Roxy will be driven ingloriously from her place on the front page by the arrest of Go-to-Hell Kitty.

Just as, during the war, the wondering Britons did rather get the impression that, whereas the French were fighting for Alsace-Loraine, the Americans were fighting for souvenirs so I would not blame any man from Mars who, after seeing "Chicago," went back home under the impression that in America women commit murder and judges try them for the sake of the publicity.

OF course the relish which indicted murderers take in their own notoriety is an old complication of the psychology of crime. Dr. Neill Cream, whose injurious fad it was to feed deadly poison to obscure women of the streets and then go home to bed snug in his knowledge that they were somewhere in London dying in agony, would never have been suspected of his capricious murders if his own desolation at thus performing without an audience had not led to his writing letters to the press about his cases. Then there was no one who so enjoyed the trial of Henri Desire Landru so much as Henri Desire Landru himself and when the Rev. Dr. Hall was found slain beside the corpse of his favorite choir singer on that quite abandoned farm in New Jersey one night four years ago, it was Mrs. Hall's extraordinary distaste for the ensuing publicity which, first bred in some old hands the suspicion that she really could

W. U. Glee Club and Symphony In 'Pop Concert' This Afternoon

WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY'S Glee Club leaves the atmosphere of the campus today to participate in music in a civic way, when it appears with the St. Louis Symphony on the program of the "Pop" concert of that orchestra at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. The Glee Club will offer four numbers, two with orchestra and two to piano accompaniment. Incidentally, the numbers to be sung are among those in which the chorus is being specially trained for its appearance next month in the sectional Glee Club tournament to be held at Field House on the university campus and in which leading Midwestern schools will participate. The winners are to go on to New York to participate in an intersectional Glee Club contest later on.

For the last two years the Glee Club, which has 30 voices, has been under the direction or William A. Parson, former musical director for Margaret Anglin, later chorus master and assistant conductor of the Municipal Opera, and more recently musical director for the Garden Theater.

Charles Cadman, the American operatic composer, is represented in the club selections by "The Builder," and Rudolph Friml, whose light operas have been heard on Municipal Opera stage, by "The Vagabond." Those two offerings have orchestral accompaniment. The others are German's "O Peaceful Night" and William's "Soon I'm Goin' Home" to piano.

The orchestral program consists largely in light and popular melodic numbers, among them a novelty in Alfred Pochon's arrangement of the air of "Old Black Joe," for strings.

Almost $200,000,000 Will Be Spent Making Movies Out West This Year

Will Be $25,000,000 More Than Films Cost Last Season According to Survey by Banking Interests—Big Business in St. Louis.

By NIE.

ACCORDING to figures furnished after a survey by the Guarantee Building and Loan Association of Los Angeles the motion picture producers—big and little—have made budgets for 1927 which call for total expenditures of $197,000,000 for the making of pictures during the present year in California.

This amount does not include what will be expended by the film makers in their New York studios or by smaller work shops in Florida and other parts of the country. Neither does it take into consideration the vast sums which will be used in making pictures by foreign producers of films for American showing.

According to the same survey, $156,000,000 was expended in California in 1923, $168,000,000 in 1924, $170,000,000 in 1925, and $172,000,000 in 1926. The weekly payroll to actors and all other studio workers in the industry on the coast this year is estimated at $1,750,000 on the average.

When you think of picture making, you must think of big figures.

AND when you think of big figures, it is well to remember that the money comes from the public, of course, as customers of the movie houses. Attention has already been called to the fact that the new Paramount Theater in New York took in more than $80,000 in its first week and has been doing about $60,000 weekly since.

Closer to home a line on what St. Louisans pay is furnished in the "open letter to Paul Whiteman," published by the Ambassador Theater. In this the Skouras Brothers announced that week before last the Ambassador, where Whiteman and his band were in their opening week, played to more people and took in more money than any other theater had ever done in St. Louis. Elsewhere it was said that Whiteman had played to 113,000 people who paid more than $57,000 during the week.

Now these figures are a trifle exaggerated. The seating capacity of the Ambassador is 2675. Presume that every seat was occupied four times a day, which it was not, and that the maximum price of 65 cents was paid, which was not, for each seat. Add to this $2675 taken in New Year's eve when the customers paid a dollar each, and you can figure out that the most the theater could have done in the first eight—not seven—days of the Whiteman engagement was $58,315. Nearer the figure actually taken in for the eight days would be probably $10,000 less, or about $46,000 for the first week of seven days.

This is not an attempt to belittle Whiteman as a drawing card. He is right now the best attraction by all odds playing the picture theaters, and $40,000 in a week is a lot of money—more money than was ever played to by any show, the Ziegfeld Follies included—in any St. Louis theater at any time. "The Cocoanuts," in its nine performances, with a $4.40 top and $6.60 schedule on New Year's eve, did almost, but not quite as much. What "The Cocoanuts," for instance, with four shows a day and with a 65 cents scale might do in a week is something else again.

So, as said before, when you think of the movies, think of big money.

IT HAS been a long time since Pola Negri has showed a flash of the tremendous screen power she displayed in her first picture displayed in this country when, some years ago, she was seen in the

How Variety Has Been Served Up to Presidents

TINY DAPHNE POLLARD, who was the headliner at the Orpheum last week, and who began her stage career in this country as the star of the Pollard Juvenile Opera company, for which she was paid $1.75 a week "and cakes," which is stage English for living expenses, has risen considerably in the world since those days. Between last week and her previous appearance in St. Louis some years ago she has been playing in Europe, appearing before some of the heads whose crowns fitted rather loosely, as well as those which were more secure of their place.

Playing before Kings and Queens is a pretty serious business in Europe. In this country Presidents have had a way of dropping into vaudeville houses unexpectedly and enjoying themselves. Of all of them the late Woodrow Wilson stood out as the most inveterate vaudeville fan. It was his favorite and most frequently visited form of amusement, and he did not hesitate to say so. But his predecessors in the White House—most of them—were also given to the delights of "variety" or had some favorite "specialty actor" outside of opera or the drama whom they could see perform during the intermissions of regular plays. That was the old way of the theater, regular dramatic performances were punctuated and diversified with "between the acts" specialty turns, what later came to be known as vaudeville "acts."

GEORGE WASHINGTON himself was a devotee of the theater and attended in great state and dignity. Thus in 1792 the father of our country had presidential box at the old John Street Theater, New York, whither he would come to the play in black satin court dress, kneebreeches, silk hose, powdered wig, pumps, shoe-buckles and all. Thomas Wignell, manager of the theater, would receive Washington similarly attired in black "shorts" and wig, but bearing two candlesticks with lighted wax candles with which he preceded the President and party to the decorated box. It is said that President Washington attended three performances of "The School for Scandal" at the John Street Theater in 1792 and, says an old chronicler of that day: "His Excellency seemed greatly charmed with Mlle. Placide, the lovely tight-rope dancer from Paris who, with M. Placide and a ballet, appeared in most gracious diversions between the acts of the play." Maybe, after all, it was the nimble Mlle. Placide rather than the play which caused President Washington to repeat his visits to the theater when he was in New York. Anyhow, the entracte diversions of those days were essentially vaudeville, although neither "variety shows" nor subsequent vaudeville were known or so-called until nearly 50 years later.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN got his first experience in the "theater" by attending the variety performances of the river thespians who roved the Mississippi, the Ohio and the Kentucky Rivers in the days before the Civil War. These "show boats" provided variety shows, burlesques, melodramas and even concerts which delighted the young lawyer whenever he had time (and the price) to visit them.

When he was practicing law at Springfield, Lincoln was an inveterate theatergoer, and if he took "a night off" he would spend it at some show. John T. Raymond, farceur and comedian in the early days of variety and later a national stage celebrity, is said to have been Lincoln's favorite actor. It is said that Lincoln first saw the play, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in 1860 at Barnum's Museum, New York City, where it—like many other plays—was produced in "The Moral Lecture Room." It is related that

Behind the Screens in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 8.

THE latest bit of gossip out here concerns the breaking of the contract between Famous Players and Lya de Putti, the imported German screen vamp, of whom much was expected. Miss de Putti was brought over by Famous following her great success in "Variety," and it was widely advertised that she would be starred here. The Paramount book of coming releases, in fact, carried a page advertisement announcing Miss de Putti in a picture to be called "Champagne." She has played in several pictures, but some weeks ago it was announced that Lois Moran would be the star of "Champagne," and now comes the word that the German actress and Famous have parted company. The breaking of the contract is said to have been by mutual agreement, and it is intimated that Miss de Putti may work in some more Paramount pictures as a free lance, but it is quite unlikely that she will soon be seen as a star with some rival organization.

Love clinches for the final fadeout will be fewer in next year's crop of motion picture films.

What's more, the sheiks and shebas are going to have a hard tussle to hold their place through the season, while the comedy crowd works at premium figures and war and costume pictures are given the right of way.

That is how John McCormick, West Coast production chief, lines up the program at First National studios. Natural endings, he says, are the new rule.

"Perhaps last year's generous importation of foreign-made pictures had something to do with it," McCormick explains. "Europeans have been accustomed to logical development—whether happy or tragic—in their literature for hundreds of years, and naturally demand it on the screen. Americans, however, like the lighter, less natural, trend of stories, but now they are getting the Old World idea. It means more natural pictures for this year."

William C. DeMille has returned to the Cecil B. DeMille studios from New York to direct Vera Reynolds in "The Little Adventuress." This is an adaptation of A. A. Milne's stage play, "The Dover Road," and will be Miss Reynold's fourth starring feature.

Alan Hale has completed camera work on "Rubber Tires," a humorous picture of the "tin can tourists," and he is now supervising the cutting and editing of this feature. Harrison Ford, Bessie Love, May Robson, Junior Coghlan, John Patrick and Irwin Connelly have the leading roles.

Motion picture studios assert they employ more trades and professions than any other industry. A census in one of the large studios showed that 79 different occupations are followed by the employes, while a comedy producing organization listed the number represented among its workers at more than 100. Blacksmiths, florists and oil station attendants are typical of the variety.

Gary Cooper, newest Paramount star, has been given the leading male role in Frank Lloyd's new production "Children of Divorce," featuring Clara Bow and Esther Ralston.

Pola Negri is now preparing for her next picture, "Confession," from the story by Ernest Vajda. She left for a vacation immediately after filming "Barbed Wire."

August Tollaire, who scored in "What Price Glory," has been cast in "Looie the Fourteenth."

Eulalie Jenson has been added to the cast of "A Kiss in a Taxi," Bebe Daniels' next starring comedy. Rose Burdick and Elwyn Raffeto also have been assigned parts in the picture which is being directed by Clarence Badger. Douglas Gilmore and Chester Conklin head the supporting cast for Miss Daniels.

Universal is pleased to announce a long list of "spring films." No less than 39 pictures are included, by far the largest number ever rushed through the Universal City studios in time for the spring season. In addition to various and sundry Denny farce comedies, Laura La Plante will be seen in "Butterflies in the Rain," "The Love Thrill" and "Beware of Widows," the latter a screen version of the Owen Davis play in which Madge Kennedy appeared last season. Mary Philbin has "The Bargain Bride;" Norman Kerry is featured in Cynthia Stockley's "The Claw," while Jean Hersholt is intrusted with the title role in the George Broadhurst farce, "The Wrong Mr. Wright." Listed among the many "all-star" productions is Gertrude Atherton's "Perch of the Devil," with Pat O'Malley and Mae Busch.

So successful is the run of "Ben Hur" in Berlin that nearly 100,000 persons have seen it. To celebrate the event, the house management has advertised that 250 marks will be handed to the 100,000th person who passes through the door. Somewhat smaller prizes will go to the two persons immediately preceding and the two immediately following.

That much part of Kathie, the sweetheart of the student Prince in "Old Heidelberg," has been bestowed on Norma Shearer. She will play opposite Ramon Navarro and be under the directorship of Ernest Lubitsch.

In the accumulating cast for "Afraid to Love," Famous Players has put Clive Brook as male lead for Florence Vidor. Lya de Putti has a highly featured part, and the direction has been handed over to E. H. Griffith.

After all the discussions about the next leading woman for Richard Dix, the choice has centered on Mary Brian, who will play with him in "Knockout Reilly," which Malcolm St. Clair is to direct. Since "Peter Pan," in which she was Wendy, Miss Brian has been in, among others, "The Little French Girl," "Beau Geste," "The Street of Forgotten Men" and "The Enchanted Hill."

Once again the Government will help to make a movie. Having aided "Tell It to the Marines," "Old Ironsides" and "Wings," it will cooperate with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for "Red, White and Blue." This is an original comedy by Byron Morgan, whose purpose it is to show the life and humors of a citizens' national defense camp.

Charles Ray will be the star of the first natural vision screen play, "The American," based on a story by Jewell Spencer, "The Flag Maker." It will be produced by George K. Spoor and J. Stuart Blackton. New stereoscopic cameras will be used, which, it is promised, will bring to the movies the present lacking third-dimension depth.

Tiffany productions will begin soon on "The Broken Gate," a piece suggested by the novel by Emerson Hough, who was the author of "The Covered Wagon."

Two new plays have been purchased by Universal for their white-haired boy, Reginald Denny. They are "The Third Party," in which Taylor Holmes appeared several seasons ago, and "Completely at Sea," by Gladys Lehman. As soon as he finishes with "Slow Down," the automobile story written by himself, Denny will probably begin on "The Third Party."

Del Lord will direct a war-time comedy, "Bayou-Nuts." In it will be featured Charlie Murray and George Sidney.

In "The Song of the Dragon," which deals with the navy's participation in the World War, are Dorothy Mackaill, Lowell Sherman, Lawrence Gray, Buster Collier, Ian Keith and Jack Ackroyd.

After completing his work of injecting "comedy slants" into Ed Wynn's first and, as yet, untitled screen play, now in preparation, Tom Crizer, has returned to Hollywood to resume work with the Harold Lloyd company. Crizer went East several months ago at the instigation of Richard Dix's picture, "The Quarterback," the football scenes of which Crizer direct-

Fischer to Conduct Week's Symphony Bill With Ganz Soloist

Assistant Will Celebrate His 40 Years of Service With St. Louis Organization at Odeon Friday and Saturday.

TO commemorate Frederick Fischer's 40 years of service with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Conductor Rudolph Ganz will hand over the baton to his assistant for the orchestra's concerts at the Odeon Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week, and will himself be soloist of the program.

According to the original plan, Rudolph Laubenthal, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Co., was announced as soloist this week, but because of his inability to fulfil the engagement at this time, Mr. Ganz volunteered to "pinch hit" for the orchestra and will play the Tschaikowsky B flat minor concerto for Fischer's concert.

Fischer's service with the St. Louis Orchestra is one rarely equaled anywhere and in appreciation of his devotion to music in St. Louis the Symphony Society at the beginning of the present season invited him to conduct a mid-season concert. He was educated in Munich at the Royal Academy of Music, and in 1887 came to St. Louis and joined the Choral Symphony Society Orchestra as it was then known. In 1895 he became assistant conductor of that organization and after it became the Symphony Society he became assistant conductor and orchestra manager. When the death of Max Zach left the orchestra without a conductor six years ago, Mr. Fischer continued the season in that capacity and presented a series of concerts notable for clear and intelligent readings of masterworks and for a scholarly musicianship.

He, when the Pageant-Choral Society was organized in 1914 became its conductor and continued in that capacity during its long and useful service in the cause of choral music here, making a series of presentations of masterworks, both classic and more modern, one of them being Rachmaninoff's Choral Symphony "The Bell." He has served since 1915 as conductor of the Concordia Seminary Student's Chorus, the largest choir of male voices in America." Outside this city his work is widely recognized and this past summer he was chosen as conductor of the chorus and incidental music for "Freedom" the big pageant spectacle at the Philadelphia Sesquicentennial.

Mr. Fischer for his program has chosen as finale "The Mystic Trumpeter," an orchestral fantasy by F. S. Converse, the Boston composer who provided incidental music for the St. Louis pageant and masque. It is based upon Walt Whitman's poem of that name. The other works are the "Rhenish Symphony" of Schumann, in which the last movement celebrates the high ceremonies with which a Cardinal was invested in the Cathedral of Cologne, the rarely heard, but beautiful, "Roma" overture of Jules Massenet, and the Tschaikowsky concerto in which Mr. Ganz will make his appearance as soloist, in detail it is:

Overture to the opera Roma ..... Massenet
Symphony No. 3 in E flat major, Op. 97 ..... Schumann
Rhenish Symphony.
Vivace.
Moderato assai.
Allegro non troppo.
Maestoso.
Vivace.
Concerto for pianoforte No. 1 in B flat minor ..... Tschaikowsky
Andante non troppo e molto maestoso.
Allegro con spirito.
Andante semplice.
Allegro con fuoco.
Orchestral fantasy, The Mystic Trumpeter, Op. 19 ..... Converse not have had anything to do with the case.

SECOND THOUGHTS ON FIRST NIGHTS

NOR is the immense public interest in such cases new or odd. In his brilliant "Murder for Profit," William Bolitho makes this keen analysis of it:

"A murder trial is the celebration of a human sacrifice by suffocation, to which modern men are excited in a crowd by the recital of some bloody deed, whose details awake hate and fear to which the coming execution is the foreshadowed, foretasted complementary. Everything there, prayers, codes, robes and bars, is devised to create that hoarse atmosphere in which alone modern men, in a state of peace, can work themselves up to a corporate killing, and to whose terrible reality the witnesses respond so that they speak truthfully and unlock themselves. It is the closeness of this reality, so close that all can feel her breath, in a trial for murder....that gives the subject its main value.....Here, in the center of the strangest and most artificial of all circumstances, the presence is close; its odor and its glitter draws the dull-sensed crowd in swarms. This is the reason for the crowd-tails outside the Old Bailey in session. This is the sensible reason for the thick-topped columns in all newspapers when a great murder trial is in progress .....It is its reality, not its drama, wherein lies the core of the interest of murder. We have a need for the sight of life and death as for salt."

AND any layman who thinks that the monstrous, disproportionate newspaper space given to such trials is peculiar to the era of the tabloids, have only to glance back through the files of the New York Herald as the elder Bennett published it in the forties and fifties to see what a newspaper looked like in the days when an editor really dedicated some considerable fraction of each issue to the reporting of a murder.

Of course the villain of "Chicago" is not the preening murderess nor the gushing sub-sister nor the embattled self seeking lawyers nor even the peacock Judge. The villain of "Chicago" is the great fat-headed public from which are drawn both the 12 who acquit the pretty gunwoman and the million readers to whom all that is cheap in every newspaper is addressed.

Grieved members of the haute noblesse of Lake Shore Drive, who hear with indignation that a New York theater is making snoots at their fair city will be consoled on learning that the villain of "Chicago,"—as in the case of all good comedies—is that considerably overrated institution known as the human race.

THE text of "Chicago" is so full of devastating detail that the most casual inspection would reveal it as what the police call an "inside job." And it is so packed with knowledge and seasoned irony that any one could picture for himself the kind of toughened oil buzzard of a sob-sister who would have knocked about enough to know how to write it.

The first glimpse of Maurine Watkins must have been the more startling to Sam Harris when she called on him one day last Spring in response to a note saying he had read her play and would be interested to talk with her about it. For she is fair and gentle and, as far as meets the eye, not a day over 25. I now see her referred to as a veteran Chicago newspaper woman. Miss Watkins is really Kentucky born, but she grew up (and not long ago, either) in Crawfordsville, Ind.

This play was written last year while she was studying under Prof. Baker at Yale—from whose classes she is playing hookey this very moment. Her career as a journalist was limited to an eight months' hitch on the staff of the Chicago Tribune, when she was assigned, as hereinbefore stated, to writing up murder cases from a woman's angle. Her first important job, as a matter of fact, was presenting the Chicago citizenry with the woman's angle of an eccentric butchery committed by two bright boys named respectively, Leopold and Loeb.

"Chicago" was presented at the Music Box last week, with Francine Larrimore rather rattling around in the shoes kicked off by Jeanne Eagels, who had an attack of the vapors during rehearsals and was among the missing when the piece opened for repairs in Atlantic City the week before Christmas.

Delmonte to Reopen.

A permit to remodel the Delmonte Theater, 5624 Delmar boulevard, to the extent of $300, was issued yesterday to S. G. Hoffman, who announced that he would reopen the theater as a second-run motion picture house with an admission charge of 25 cents.

Facing the Music

THE St. Louis Symphony Orchestra plays its first concert of the year for pupils of the St. Louis Public Schools at Beaumont High School Auditorium at 2 p. m. Wednesday. Conductor Ganz has arranged a program devoted to a study of Rhythms and Moods and Emotions in Music. The first movement from Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" will be played and after the melodious "Skater's Waltz" the school pupils will sing "The Star Spangled Banner," to bring the program to a close. From almost every land come the illustrative pieces which the orchestra will play and range from the time of Bach to our own, and from the Orient to the American Indian tribal melodies in their expression of rhythm, moods and emotions.

In detail the program is:

First movement from Symphony No. 8 in B Minor, "Unfinished" ..... Schubert
Rhythm in Music—
(a) Beethoven ..... Minuet in G
(b) Thomas ..... Gavotte from "Mignon"
(c) Chopin ..... Polonaise in A Major
(d) Skilton ..... Indian Dance
(e) Berlioz ..... Rakoczy March
Moods and Emotions in Music—
(a) Chopin ..... Funeral March
(b) Kreisler ..... Liebesfreud
(c) Bach ..... Chorale (Brass Instruments)
(d) Grieg, "Hall of the Mountain King"
(e) Cui ..... Orientale
Waltz, "The Skaters" ..... Waldteufel
"Star Spangled Banner" ..... Key
(Sung by the audience).

The announcement that Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, is to give a concert at the Odeon on Tuesday evening, Jan. 25, is one of the most interesting in the musical calendar for the new year. Kreisler's gifts as an artist, a cosmopolitanism which comes from a Czech ancestry, a Viennese birth and education and residence in every center of Europe, as well as his repeated tours of America, have made him one of the best-liked artists before the public.

The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, Conductor Henri Verbrugghen, gives its concert at the Odeon on Thursday evening, Jan. 27, just two days after the Kreisler concert. The program for the Minneapolis Symphony concert is now complete and includes

Overture to "Oberon" ..... Weber
Symphony No. 5 C minor Op. 67 ..... Beethoven
Rondo, "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," ..... Richard Strauss
Adagio for strings from Divertimento No. 15 ..... Mozart
Scherzo, "Flight of the Bumble Bee" ..... Rimsky Korsakow
Overture to Tannhauser ..... Wagner

Henri Verbrugghen stands among the foremost Beethoven conductors of the day, and the inclusion of the Beethoven Symphony No. 5 was by request of many members of the Civic Music League, under whose auspices the concert will be given.

Samuel Kippel, assistant director of Loew's Orchestra, will serve as violin soloist today at the Sunday concert by the State Theater Orchestra. The concert, at 1:30 o'clock, is in connection with Loew's usual program. Kippel's programmed number is Pablo de Sarasate's "Zigeunerweisen" ("Gypsy Airs"), widely used as a concert number. The program, which Don Albert has chosen for his orchestra, will include:

"March of the Boyars" ..... (J. Halvorsen)
"Entr'Act" Valse ..... (Hellmesberger)
"Zigeunerweisen" ..... (Pablo de Sarasate)
("Gypsy Airs") ..... (Pablo de Sarasate)
Samuel Kippel, violin soloist.
"Largo," from "The New World" ..... (A. Dvorak)
"Carmen," Suite ..... (Georges Bizet)
(a) "Habanera."
(b) "The Guard Mount."
(c) "Dance Boheme."
("Gypsy Dances").
"Tannhauser" Overture (Richard Wagner)

A feature of the free popular organ recital by Wade Fallert this afternoon, 3 o'clock, in the Scottish Rite cathedral, will be a group of songs by Miss Catherine Cherrington, soprano.

The program in full follows:

Overture, "Poet and Peasant" ..... Von Suppe
Operatic Suite, "Carmen" ..... Bizet
(a) March of the Street Boys.
(b) Habanera.
(c) Flower Song.
(d) Toreador.
Sonrabi—
(a) Slave Song ..... Del Riso
(b) Carnacina ..... Penn
(c) Just Been Wandering ..... Cannino
Miss Catherine Cherrington, Kroeger
Ezeria
(a) Barcarolle, "Tales of Hoffman" ..... Offenbach
(b) Orientale ..... Cui
(c) Cujus Animam ..... Rossini

RAYMOND KOCH, the St. Louis boy who sang the part of Gold in the St. Louis Pageant and who since then appeared as the baritone with the Cincinnati Opera Company, has gone to Germany where he is now singing in Berlin. Young Koch was a member of the choir of several St. Louis churches before he began his professional career.

HOW VAUDEVILLE HAS PLEASED PRESIDENTS

Lincoln's favorite character in the old Harriet Beecher Stowe play was Lawyer Marks, and that Simon Legree—the villain—"caused him to laugh heartily." The old Barnum Museum (formerly Scudder and Barnum) included freaks, circus acts, variety shows and regular plays in "The Moral Lecture Room" which was under the same roof.

President Franklin Pierce visited Barnum's in 1853, where, strangely enough, he witnessed a play called "The Old Plantation or the Real Uncle Tom," seven years before Lincoln saw the later version of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." There was buck-and-wing dancing, Negro song specialties and "other varieties" included in both versions of "Uncle Tom."

In the years after the Mexican War, when Ulysses S. Grant was trying (and failing) to run the Dent farm, near St. Louis, he used to drive to town with a load of cordwood twice a week, it is said that the future General and President used to spend much of the proceeds of his sales on the variety shows at such early-day places as Looney's old theater in Sixth street, where he could smoke his inevitable cigar throughout the performance. When shows came to Galena, Ill., where Grant afterwards worked in his brother's harness shop, Grant, a lonely and discouraged young man then, was always present and took particular delight in the farces, comedies and variety troupes which appeared in the village "opery house."

Grover Cleveland was a regular vaudeville patron when he was Mayor and Sheriff at Albany, and afterwards, when he was President, and with his bride, Frances Folsom, made his honeymoon and "first trip" across the Mississippi River, a special all-star vaudeville performance was staged for the presidential couple here at the old St. Louis Exposition. That was in 1888, and Grover Cleveland already knew most of the performers and called them by their first names.

President Roosevelt was a pretty constant vaudeville fan, and, as Assemblyman in Albany, Police Commissioner and Governor, took every opportunity to attend. Lew Dockstader (who mimicked him in blackface) was one of his favorites, and Tony Pastor, Lillian Russell, Weber and Fields and many of the old-timers were among his earliest and latest friends.

Presidents Taft and Harding were frequent patrons of vaudeville even in the old Ohio days, before either of them had reached the White House. McKinley was one of the few Presidents who seldom visited a theater of any kind. President Coolidge cannot be classed as a "fan," and cares little for vaudeville shows.

$200,000,000 TO BE SPENT IN MAKING MOVIES THIS YEAR

German-made film, "Passion." Poor stories, indifferent direction and other things have been offered as the reason. Now, this week, at the Missouri Theater, Miss Negri is playing in "Hotel Imperial" and the film will be viewed with interest by real screen lovers who believe that great acting and great plays can be produced through the magic lantern.

This picture, an American product, has been made entirely under the auspices Miss Negri's friends have claimed she has lacked since she came to America following her triumph in "Passion."

Erich Pommer, who produced the picture as his first in America, is pretty generally acknowledged the greatest film-maker ever developed abroad. In 1908 Pommer entered the production side of the motion picture industry, progressing until today he is a master of camera technique and the originator of those striking effects which brought international success to "Variety," "The Last Laugh" and "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," which he made.

Lajos Biro, Hungarian playwright, has had a colorful career which has brought him adventure in every corner of Europe. It was while war correspondent with the Hungarian army that he conceived "Hotel Imperial," based as it is on incidents of that compaign.

Pommer likes nothing better than to start the day off with the cold-blooded murder of a hoary tradition. Towards noon he finds considerable stimulation in clubbing some less venerable but equally obnoxious tradition, and along towards evening he likes to round up three or four more and drown them one by one.

FOR instance, the tradition of standardized length for feature motion pictures. Pommer is working on that. It's a tough one, too, because it's really an inheritance from a the legitimate stage. A stage play was written to run about two hours and a half, whether the play was worth five minutes or five hours.

This was probably so the customers could make the 11:15 train to the suburbs, or it may have been just out of respect to a tradition.

"And what do we find as a result?" asks Pommer. "The length of a film has become of almost ironclad standardization. No matter whether the story requires 20 minutes in telling or three hours, we find it squeezed or expanded into approximately 6000 feet.

"Supposing every book were written in 100,000 pages. An arbitrary rule of that sort would almost destroy literature.

"The time is coming when pictures will be screened for 'what they're worth.' In other words, no story will be given more footage than actually required."

THE foreign screen is pretty well represented in St. Louis this week. In "Pals in Paradise," which is at the St. Louis Theater, is Rudolph Schildkraut, who was born in Constantinople, educated in Berlin and Vienna, and has spent the greater part of his life on the European stage.

He has been a resident of the United States for five years. Most of this period was spent on the legitimate stage although he is now under contract to appear in De Mille-Metropolitan productions. He has done two big pictures under his present contract and he has an important role in "Pals in Paradise." Before coming to this country he also did considerable work in foreign films, produced in Berlin and Italy. He scored his first American hit in "His People."

His son, Joseph Schildkraut, is also engaged in screen work. In "Young April," they were cast together. The elder Schildkraut went on the stage when still in his 'teens, obtaining an engagement with a small German repertoire company.

Also in "Pals in Paradise," grandmother and grandson of a well known American stage family worked side by side. May Robson, who forsook the footlights to join the silent drama, introduced her 15-year-old grandson, Robert Gore, to the director and the latter found a small part for him in the picture.

The embryo thespian hails from Bayside, L. I. He is a pupil in the Port Washington High School, in the Empire State, and is planning a stage career upon his graduation. In "Paris in Paradise," he gets his first closeup of the romantic business of filming motion pictures and is ambitious to make it his life's work.

THE second generation of a screen family is represented, too, in "The Third Degree," which is at the Ambassador by Dolores Costello. In the early days of the cinema the Rudolph Valentino of the time was Maurice Costello, father of the present actress.

Known only as one of Maurice Costello's daughters, Dolores had played a few bits as a child when her father was at the height of his screen fame. Then she retired to the quiet of a Long Island home. Once she posed as a model for James Montgomery Flagg, and again she appeared with her sister, Helene, as a dancer in George White's "Scandals."

But motion pictures were in her blood and she did what thousands of girls are doing every day—took a screen test.

She was selected without having to undergo any apprenticeship. John Barrymore saw her and picked her to play opposite him in "The Sea Beast." She was given a tryout, and, as the production progressed, rumors came from the Warner Bros. studios in Hollywood that Maurice Costello's little girl was not only making good, but was giving everyone connected with the picture a thrill.

When "The Sea Beast" had its premiere in New York, Dolores Costello was "made."

ed. He later worked on W. C. Field's picture, "The Potters," and Dix's latest, "Paradise for Two." He has been collaborating on Wynn's story with Same Mintz, another comedy expert, and Victor Herman, who will direct the picture.

Ford Sterling has signed his name on the dotted line to remain with Famous Players-Lasky for an extended period. His first assignment under his new contract will be a role in "Loole the Fourteenth," second only in importance to that of Wallace Beery who will be starred in the title role. At present Sterling is playing a featured part in Beery's "Casey at the Bat."

Sally Blane, whose name is unknown to the film-going public, is going to play opposite Eddie Cantor in the comedian's second screen vehicle, "Special Delivery." Ten years ago, under the name of Betty Jane Young, she was a 6-year-old player before the camera. And for the next three years she continued to score success. But after that, as she began to outgrow child parts, the demand for her became less frequent until, about four years ago, she was too old for child roles and too young for anything else.

Norma Talmadge is wearing bobbed hair in her screen version of "Camille," now being produced for First National. The supporting cast includes Gilbert Roland as leading man, Lillyan Tashman, Rose Dione and Oscar Beregi.

John Barrymore has completed his first United Artists picture, "The Beloved Rogue," his interpretation of the character of Francois Villon, French poet and housebreaker of the fifteenth century. Now Barrymore is cruising along the South American coast on his yacht, "The Mariner," having left Los Angeels harbor Dec. 29.

Erich von Stroheim has launched work on the two closing sequences of his "road show," "The Wedding March." Work on the picture has been under way since [illegible] and it is now considered possible that it will be finished by [illegible]. Von Stroheim himself is to play the star role with Fay Wray, Zasu Pitts, Mathew Betz and [illegible] Fawcett in supporting parts.

SECRET POLICE IN RUSSIA SERVE AS JUDGE AND JURY

None of the Thousands of Prisoners at Solovetzky in Arctic, Had a Trial, Says J. C. Chevalier.

15 PER CENT OF CONVICTS ARE WOMEN

They Are Forced to Work in Peat Bogs on Borders of White Sea Just Below Arctic Circle.

BY JUNIUS B. WOOD.

By Radio to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1926.

BERLIN, Jan. 8.—Life at Solovetzky, soviet Russia's most terrible prison in the White Sea just below the Arctic circle, presents an abnormal contrast of drab, dismal monotony and dramatic gambling with life for what would be trivial stakes in the normal world, according to Julius C. Chevalier, the only native-born American ever confined there. He recently was released, having been arrested two years ago in Russia for alleged antisoviet activity.

Death always stalks that bleak polar stretch. Sometimes the slow process of ruthless nature and implacable prison discipline bring a merciful end to suffering. Again flashing, suddenly stern punishment is meted out by unfeeling guards who themselves are prisoners.

"About 15 per cent of the prisoners last year were women and probably the percentage will be the same when the number of inmates has been increased to 12,000," says Chevalier. "None of them are classified as political prisoners. The latter are removed from Solovetzky and sent to various places in Siberia. Political prisoners were never severely treated, because they stood as a unit on every issue. They were not forced to work or stand roll call twice a day like the other prisoners. Finally all the politicals, including the women, were removed.

Sentenced but Never Tried.

"Many counter revolutionaries, however, remain, the distinction being that the political prisoners retained membership in Soviet Russia in other than the Communist party, while the counter revolutionaries are charged with some offense against the Soviet state. Incidentally, there is not a prisoner at Solovetzky who admits he ever received a court trial. All are imprisoned by order of the Gaypayoo (secret police), which acted as prosecutor, judge and jury.

"A counter-revolutionary is one who has done anything from discussing economic conditions to actual revolt. A mountaineer family might give a stranger a cup of tea and a night's shelter and later discover that the visitor was a revolutionary fugitive. For this offense the mountaineer husband might be shot and the wife sent to Solovetzky.

"However the counter-revolutionaries form a small percentage of the residents of the island and are best treated among the prisoners.

Criminals in the Majority.

"Actual criminals or at least those charged with criminal offenses are in the majority among the women as well as the men. While on the island one woman chopped her husband into a dozen pieces and married a prisoner who had disposed of his wife in a similar fashion.

"Most of the women work on dairy farms or in the peat bogs. The male prisoners do the stripping of the peat bogs and the women cut and pile the peat in bricks and dry the fuel. Those needed for labor details are assigned daily to scrubbing floors, working in the laundry and doing lighter work in the various shops.

"Though segregated as much as possible all the prisoners are permitted to talk and smoke when working together, as well as when attending the theater and other entertainments. Women caught violating discipline are sent to the Rabbit Island disciplinary barracks.

Waiting for Death.

"All the prisoners outside the prison walls are able to wander pretty freely, at least until midday.

"Religious prisoners including laymen and Zionists as well as Synod dignitaries form much less than 10 per cent of the prisoners at Solovetzky. Possibly close to one-third of the prisoners were members of the communist party, who had received especially severe punishment for lapses from the party code, while non-party men received light sentences for the same offenses. Obviously these communist prisoners are the worst element of the party. Nearly all attempt to become guards who domineer over the other prisoners.

"Death is administered quickly which is more merciful than the formal route. Sometimes a man's name will be posted on the bulletin board and read at morning roll call. He knows then that some sentence has gone to Moscow from the prison collegium, prefaced with 'we beg you to approve,' and that Moscow, in order to maintain discipline almost invariably approves, though the decision will not come for many weeks. Meanwhile he continues working, knowing that death is inevitable."

STEALS PRECIOUS MANUSCRIPT TO BUY FURS FOR WOMAN

Curator in Paris Library Says He Sold Antique Trying to Win Girl.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—Love is such a wonderful thing that Amedee Boinet, a learned young bookworm, curator of the Sainte Genevieve Library, carried off a thirteenth century manuscript and sold it to buy furs for a personable young woman.

Boinet may never be prosecuted, but he had to tell his story to the police. It was the first big adventure of his life, he said. He had quickly learned that all his accumulated knowledge made little impression on mademoiselle, who, instead, liked furs.

There were no furs in the library, so the curator took a manuscript known to every competent book dealer in Europe, and sent it to a London firm. The London firm remitted a check for 10,000 francs, but stopped payment on it and notified the Paris authorities.

BUILDING A TOOTH

Nature only can build sound teeth from efficient materials. Defective teeth in mother or child are symptoms of vitamin-starvation. There is great need for cod-liver oil.

Scott's Emulsion of pure cod-liver oil abounds in the vitamins that Nature utilizes in building teeth and strong bones. It is the palatable and easy way to obtain the full benefits of this essential.

For fifty years and more Scott's Emulsion has been used by millions of mothers and children to help give the system the needed nourishment to overcome vitamin-starvation.

HEIRESS NAMED IN WILL HIDDEN IN BUTTER MUST PAY

French Court Holds That Justice Rather Than Letter of Law Compels Payment of Debt.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 8.—The romance of a fortune that was won by a will hidden in a big chunk of butter has bobbed up in the courts after 21 years, and again romance has beaten the law.

Mlle. Claudine Chavanes of St. Etienne refused to reimburse friends for 30,000 francs (approximately $1200) they advanced to help her win her will case in 1905. She had the law with her, but the courts decided she and her father must pay, because, as the proverb says, "None must enrich himself at another's expense."

When Mme. Angele Berthon died, 21 years ago, no will was found and her estate was about to be distributed among distant relatives. Someone discovered, deeply imbedded in a mass of butter in the old lady's house an oiled paper on which Mme. Berthon bequeathed her fortune to Mlle. Chavanes.

The girl's father, as she was a minor, borrowed in her name to pay legal expenses to probate the curious will. The case was won, but the father then, and the daughter later, refused to pay the debt on the definite legal ground that the father as guardian had no right to borrow without observing a certain legal procedure, which was not done. The courts decided justice was more important than the letter of the law.

Y. M. C. A. TO ENTERTAIN BOYS

Downtown Branch to Keep Open House All Week.

A series of special open house events for boys will be held this week in the boys' division of the new downtown branch of the Y. M. C. A. The division has its own equipment, a separate entrance on Sixteenth street, and is distinct from the general membership.

A dinner will be given for messenger boys tomorrow night by the Western Union Telegraph Co., in the auditorium. An all-day reception for friends and pioneer groups of the Y. M. C. A. will be given Tuesday; Thursday evening 2000 members of 50 employed boys' brotherhoods will be entertained; boys from Sunday schools will be guests Friday, and Saturday a special program will be given, during which the building will be open to boys all day.

FLONZALEY QUARTET ON KSD TUESDAY NIGHT

Noted Pianist Also in Eveready Hour—Pablo Casals, 'Cellist, in February Broadcast.

One of the musical events of the year will be the Eveready Hour next Tuesday evening, when the Flonzaley String Quartet and Ernest Hutcheson, Australian-American pianist, will broadcast from KSD.

Pablo Casals, internationally famous 'cellist, early in February will play in an Eveready Hour from KSD.

The program next Tuesday evening will open with two movements of Dvorak's "American Quartet," played by the Flonzaley Quartet. Hutcheson will follow with three piano numbers—"Valse in E Minor," by Chopin; "Nocturne in F Sharp," by Chopin, and "Campanella," by Liszt.

The second number of the Flonzaleys will be "Andante Cantabile," by Tschaikowsky. The program will conclude with the scherzo and finale movement of Schumann's quintet, played by the Flonzaley Quartet, with Hutcheson at the piano.

The Flonzaley Quartet is perhaps the best known string quartet in the world. It was assembled in 1903 in Europe by E. J. De Coppet, wealthy New York patron of music, who spent his summers in Switzerland. The organization took its name from De Coppet's Swiss home, "Flonzaley." It first played together there, privately, after which its members were brought to the United States and its real career as a musical organization began. It has been active ever since, eventually ceasing to be a purely private organization, and for a number of years has toured throughout the world.

Adolfo Betti, first violin, is director of the quartet and has been since its organization. He is an Italian and had a distinguished musical career abroad before he was placed at the head of the Flonzaley group.

Alfred Pochon, second violin, is a native of Switzerland. Iwan d'Archambeau, cellist, is a Belgian and has been with the quartet since 1903. Nicholas Moldaven, viola, was born in Odessa, Russia, and is a graduate of the Petrograd Conservatory.

Ernest Hutcheson was born in Australia, but is American by adoption. He is cosmopolitan by training and by virtue of a career which has made his name familiar throughout Europe. Hutcheson has played with every symphony orchestra of note and his New York recitals have formed an important part of each musical season.

'RADIOTRONS' GO ON THE AIR THROUGH WJZ CHAIN STATIONS

The Radio Corporation of America has started a weekly series of broadcasts and presented the "Radiotrons" in their first air performance from WJZ and the stations of the National Broadcasting Co.'s Blue Network, including KDKA and KYW, at 8 o'clock Thursday night.

Power tubes are designed to handle greater volume with less distortion than the ordinary audio frequency amplifier tube.

FAMOUS COMPOSER'S WORKS IN VIKING PERIOD FROM KSD

An orchestra of a novel instrumentation will bring the Viking half hour to the audience of KSD on Tuesday evening, at 7 o'clock. It will be composed of two flutes, two violins, a viola, bass viol and piano, and will be heard in selections from works of Sibelius. Margaret Olsen, soprano, will be heard in two solos.

The orchestra will play three movements from the "Suite Mignonne," "Valse Triste," and "King Christian Suite."

Sibelius, a Finnish composer, early displayed genius and was awarded a grant from the Finnish Government as a recognition of ability and promise. He first came to America in 1914, at which time he conducted the Norfolk, Conn., musical festival. Yale University at that time awarded him the degree of Doctor of Music.

ANOTHER DAMROSCH RECITAL SATURDAY

'Die Goetterdaemmerung' Will Be His Subject in Balkite Hour on KSD.

The concluding dramatic piano-lecture recital on Wagner's "Die Goetterdaemmerung" will be broadcast from KSD during the Balkite Hour by Walter Damrosch next Saturday at 8 p. m., central time.

The third act of Goetterdaemmerung" begins with Siegfried on a hunting trip on the banks of the Rhine, where the Rhine maidens endeavor to persuade him to give up the ring. He is charmed by their songs, but none the less laughs at their demands for the ring, and when they find that they cannot secure it, they warn him that he shall die on this very day. Hagen and Gunther appear and Hagen gives Siegfried a magic potion which restores his memory to a marked degree. Siegfried begins to tell these two of his past life and reveals his communion with the birds and then, bit by bit, the whole of his past life. In the midst of the conversation, two ravens fly overhead. Hagen inquires, "Canst read the speech of those ravens aright?" at which Siegfried starts at the memory of the birds which led him on his way to Brunnhilde. As he rises, Hagen plunges a spear into his back. As Siegfried dies, he recalls the kiss of Brunnhilde.

The second scene of this closing act begins with the body of Siegfried being borne back to the castle to the music of probably the greatest threnody ever composed, "Siegfried's Funeral March." To the musical picture of the passage of death is added one of the leading themes of the entire story of the ring. The complaint of the Rhine maidens, the motive of Brunnhilde's captivity and the curse-motive, all are heard.

Siegfried's body is taken into the hall of Gunther's castle, where Hagen demands the ring, which Gunther refuses. Once more the curse works out and Gunther in his own hall dies by Hagen's hand. When Hagen approaches the dead hero to take the ring from his finger, Siegfried's arm rises in warning, causing Hagen to recoil in horror. The last great moment comes with the appearance of Brunnhilde, who commands that a funeral pyre be set up for Siegfried's body. When the flames are at their height, Brunnhilde rides her horse into the blaze. The flames partly destroy the hall, but the Rhine rises, extinguishing the fire, and on its surface come the Rhine maidens, who seize the ring from the embers.

EDWARD JOHNSON

OPERATIC TENOR IN KSD CONCERT TONIGHT

Edward Johnson to Sing With Edith Fleischer, Soprano, in Atwater Kent Hour.

The dreamer type of operatic and concert artist is a thing of the past, according to Edward Johnson, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who will be heard with Editha Fleischer, soprano, in the Atwater Kent Hour from KSD this evening.

Edward Johnson, which is his true name, is regarded by many as America's foremost operatic tenor. He was born in Canada, but began his career in Italy as Edoardo di Giovanni. From there, he went to Chicago and appeared with the Chicago Civic Opera Association as leading tenor, gaining such a place for himself in concert, recital and oratorio that when he went to the Metropolitan Opera Co. he was warmly welcomed to New York.

The program for this evening follows:

I.

Duet: "Parlez moi de ma mere" from "Carmen" ..... Bizet
Miss Fleischer, Mr. Johnson and Orchestra.

II.

"If With All Your Hearts" from "Elijah" ..... Mendelssohn
Mr. Johnson and Orchestra.

Would you buy HALF a Piano?

Certainly not—even though you could get it at half price.

It's the same with radio. Even at half price you do not want a set that has only half the musical compass necessary to reproduce a selection propefly—a set that covers but 3 to 3½ octaves of undistorted reproduction; where twice that is needed.

The Stromberg-Carlson Receiver has a musical range of 7 full octaves—sufficient to reproduce accurately the very highest as well as the lowest notes of a full orchestra playing an elaborate symphony. That is why the Stromberg-Carlson can re-create music exactly as played—why a Stromberg-Carlson gives you the full enjoyment of radio.

This exceptional tone range is made possible through the finest precision in design, the finest precision in workmanship and the elimination by scientific "total shielding" of all tendencies toward distortion.

"Wonderful—those low notes"

"Absolutely, I've never heard such clear reproduction!"

"...I had the first radio in my town, and a lot of sets since. I've tried all the well-known speakers, but absolutely, until I got my new Acme Speaker, I never heard such clear reproduction of low notes as well as high ones..."

The wonderful new Acme Loud Speaker successfully reproduces voices and music in your own home as clearly as they were originally created in the broadcasting studio. It reproduces the voice of the singer in all its thrilling, tender beauty. It brings out the different personality in each voice, so that you can tell one voice from another. It recreates orchestral music so clearly that you can hear each instrument playing. It reproduces low notes and tones as clearly as high notes and tones. You hear the bass and treble, harmony and melody.

All this was not done in a moment. Acme engineers worked five years and made 256 experimental speakers, before they arrived at the new Acme Enclosed Free Edge Cone and Acme Reproducing Unit, which together are responsible for this great increase in radio enjoyment.

NEW KMOX SATURDAY FEATURE

The Mu Phi Epsilon, national honorary musical sorority, which includes in its St. Louis membership many young women of musical talent, will furnish a program from KMOX every second week on Saturday nights. The first of these programs will be given Saturday night, when June Weybright, Edith Welch Parker and Lucille M. Cook will appear.

17 MORE RADIO STATIONS LICENSED; 671 ON AIR IN U. S.

There were 175 new broadcasting stations licensed last year, 159 of them since July 1, while 40 ceased operation. The total at the end of 1926 stands at 671, the largest number of active at any time since broadcasting began late in 1921. On Dec. 31, 1925, there were 538 active broadcasters. Thus the gain was 133 in 1926.

Seventeen more stations went on the air during the past week and two signed off.

The higher the aerial poles are the better the results will be.

VACUUM TUBES

The best designed and constructed receiver is useless without the proper vaccum tube. Tubes can be bought for prices ranging from 59 cents to $6, but in general it can be said the prices indicate the relative values of the tubes in regard to life and performance.

The filaments in the cheap tubes are generally made of thin platinum wire which evaporates rapidly when heated to incandescence and soon lose their power of electron emission or burn out completely within a very short time. Further, the design is such that the tubes are poor radio frequency amplifiers or detectors, so that it is impossible to get distant stations or even local stations with proper volume. From the instant that the cheap tubes are first lighted, their sensitivity starts to drop off, and within a relatively few hours they are useless for distance reception.

A well-built tube employs tungsten wire for the filament and then this tungsten wire is impregnated with "thorium," which increases electron emission. Tungsten is an extremely hard and refactory metal which can be held at incandescence for hundreds of hours with but little loss by evaporation. The efficiency of the high grade tube and its length of life is still further increased by the proper degree of evacuation or vacuum within the tube, and evacuation is also an expensive process that is treated lightly by the manufacturer of the cheap tube.

Erection of Aerial Poles.

When erecting poles for the aerial, one of the guy wires should be directly behind the pole to counteract the tension of the aerial. An out-rigger should hold the guy wire away from the top of the roof and the sides, to prevent loss of the radio energy's leaking off

Answering two questions thousands are asking

1 How much must I spend to get the best in radio?

2 What may I expect of the best radio today?

Radio in your home depends on two things—on reception and reproduction. The most recent developments in both these fields are explained here simply and clearly, in answer to a host of questioners.

THE questions that thousands are asking, other thousands have answered. And this is an opportune time for a simple statement of facts, to clear up a wide confusion of claims and counterclaims.

"How much must I pay for a radio set?" Such a question is as indefinite as, "How much must I pay for an automobile?"

But "How much must I pay for a radio set—to get the best?" That question has an answer. The laboratories have proved the answer by exhaustive comparative tests, made with sharp mechanical accuracy. And thousands of buyers have found the same answer. They have made their own comparisons before buying—and repeated their own proofs daily, in their homes, for many months.

Study the Radiola 28, and the RCA Loudspeaker 104—and you have the answer. Read the facts simply given here. Then go to any RCA Authorized Dealer and check up these facts with your own hearing. Ask any questions that still remain. Then you will know what very remarkable things can be expected of the best radio today. And you will endorse with your own judgment the decision of many as to the right sum to invest in radio.

It will be an investment easily within your means—on terms of payment arranged to suit your convenience.

Why the RCA Loudspeaker 104 is the supreme musical achievement of radio today

RCA Loudspeaker 104 was the first to introduce realism in radio reception.

It was revolutionary when introduced—and it is still revolutionary.

One of the secrets of its success lies in the discovery of a new basic acoustical principle—and in the use of super-power amplifying tubes and power drive from the lighting socket.

The power apparatus necessary for the actuation of this loudspeaker also contains all of the basic elements of the battery eliminator.

Thus, when connected to Radiola 28, through the medium of an A.C. Package, the power unit in the RCA Loudspeaker 104 eliminates all batteries and provides operation direct from the lighting socket.

When the Loudspeaker 104 is operated in connection with sets other than Radiolas, the power unit in the speaker supplies "B" battery voltage: that is, it takes the place of "B" batteries.

The Loudspeaker 104 was not designed for reproduction in large halls and assembly rooms. It was intended for use in apartments and homes.

While capable of great volume, it may be operated at any volume: but it should be borne in mind that one of the chief factors contributing to its realism of reproduction is the amount of power employed to actuate the instrument. Yet it is decidedly economical in operation.

Adopted by the leading phonograph companies

It was the first to catch the notes of the entire musical scale, reproducing so faithfully that the great phonograph companies employ it for phonograph reproduction as well.

Remember RCA Loudspeaker 104 is not just a loudspeaker. It is a loudspeaker plus a power amplifier, plus rectifying apparatus for the elimination of batteries. Batteries would not provide sufficient energy to operate the Loudspeaker 104 satisfactorily. The power required must be drawn from the lighting socket. And its purpose is not mere volume, but a remarkable quality of musical reproduction.

Why the Radiola 28 is by far the most advanced in radio reception

The term "super-heterodyne" has carried an atmosphere of magic for the past ten years.

In its original form it was a complex laboratory device, not suited for manipulation and use on the part of those not technically trained. RCA engineers took this complicated device, simplified it and produced one of the most efficient broadcast receivers known to radio.

The popularity of the super-heterodyne comes from the following features:

First, its great sensitivity. It is so sensitive that radio broadcast reception can be obtained from great distances without any aerial or outdoor wire.

A coil wire, called a loop, takes the place of the aerial: or the loop may be replaced by a short length of indoor wire.

Thus, the super-heterodyne is particularly suitable for use in apartment houses where the erection of aerials is impracticable.

The super-heterodyne is supreme in selectivity

In the matter of selectivity, the super-heterodyne stands supreme. Its ability to receive from one station to the exclusion of all others is approached by no other type of receiver. The ability to do this comes from a novel feature of the super-heterodyne circuit—a feature peculiar to itself.

To simplify operation, the super-heterodyne is now provided with uni-control tuning mechanism. With the movement of one control, station after station is brought in.

Another exclusive feature of the super-heterodyne is its sealed-in construction. Lift the loop and cover, and note the business-like, clean-cut appearance of the internal mechanism. It reminds you of a multi-cylinder automobile. This sealed-in construction, known as a "catacomb," is a complete protection for all the most delicate parts, keeping out all dampness, moisture and dust.

The product of the combined research of RCA, General Electric and Westinghouse

And to assure the finest possible clarity of voice and music, this Radiola is matched to the great broadcasting stations. Its transformers, tubes and all points of design that affect tone quality are the product of the same engineers who designed the broadcasting apparatus.

Radiola 28 and RCA Loudspeaker 104 are also synchronized to one another—engineered from beginning to end in the same laboratories and by the same engineers. With this combination you have the supreme achievement of radio today.

OPERA "FAUST" FROM KSD TOMORROW NIGHT

Famous Work of Gounod to Be Given Direct From New York.

The grand opera "Faust," which has made the name of Gounod famous, will be broadcast in tabloid form from KSD tomorrow evening over the WEAF Grand Opera Company at 9 o'clock.

The story of "Faust" concerns a German philosopher who, after a life of deep meditation, becomes disgusted with the smallness of human knowledge and his own inability to unravel the mysteries of nature. He summons to his aid the spirit of evil, who appears to him in the guise of Mephistopheles. Through the power of the latter, Faust is restored to youth and endowed with beauty. Mephistopheles, in a vision, reveals Faust to the village maiden, Margaret, with whom the student falls in love. Margaret has been left by her soldier brother in care of Dame Martha, worthy but not over vigilant. The maiden at first rejects the student's advances, but Faust, influenced by Mephistopheles, urges his suit and at length succeeds in winning the hand and the heart of Margaret. Her brother, upon returning from the war, is greatly grieved when he learns what has occurred and is killed in a duel. Margaret, horror-stricken at the calamity of which she is the cause, loses her reason and in an insane frenzy murders her child. She is thrown into jail; in which she dies. Mephistopheles is triumphant at the apparent success of his scheme to destroy a human soul, but a choir of heavenly voices is heard proclaiming that there is a pardon for the repentant sinner, and the fiend one crouches in terror as the spirit of Margaret is borne heavenward by ministering angels.

The soloists of the WEAF Grand Opera Company who will take part in the production are Frances Peralta, soprano; Devora Nadworney, contralto; Guiseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Carl Rollins, baritone, and Pasquale Ruisi, basso.

BETTY CROCKER WILL OFFER RECIPES TO USE 'LEFTOVERS'

Betty Crocker, home economics specialist, who broadcasts three times a week from KSD, in her talk tomorrow morning will discuss hours in which "yesterday's roast" can be served again. She will offer recipes for preparation of leftovers and for side dishes to go with them.

In her Wednesday morning talk, Miss Crocker will offer a recipe for amber marmalade made from grapefruit, oranges, lemons and sugar, and also suggestions for several other types of preserves which can be put up easily at comparatively small cost in the winter.

Several thousand women, it is said, have made the reports required to obtain their diplomas in Betty Crocker's radio cooking school which she broadcasts each Friday morning from KSD. To win one of these diplomas, it is necessary to report on any 10 of Miss Crocker's cooking school broadcasts. For the lesson next Friday, Miss Crocker will talk on desserts.

Radio sales amounted to $500,000,000 in value in the United States during 1926, a gain of fully $100,000,000 as compared with [illegible].

Henry Ford's Orchestra To Play Twice From KSD

Hour Programs of Old-Fashioned Dance Music to Be Broadcast Next Tuesday and Friday Evenings.

KSD will broadcast next Tuesday and Friday nights, at 9:30 o'clock central time, an hour of old-fashioned dance music played by Henry Ford's Orchestra which will be playing in New York at the time.

Benjamin Lovett, Henry Ford's master of dancing, will give a short description of each dance and will call each before it is played. The program will be similar to that broadcast last year. When old-fashioned dances were held in halls throughout the country, the music being received by radio.

The same combination of instruments which furnished the music last year will be grouped before the microphone again. These are the cymbalum, the sousaphone, the dulcimer and the violin. The quartet of musicians to be heard were picked by Henry Ford himself.

Novel Musical Instruments.

The instruments, while strange to the younger generation, are familiar to those who danced the Virginia Reel, the popular plain quardrille, two-step and other "old-fashioned" dances. While the violin and sousaphone are used in many modern dance orchestras, the symbalum and dulcimer come from generations which have passed on. The cymbalum is a Hungarian string instrument resembling an open piano, and is played with padded sticks. The dulcimer is similar to the cymbalum, with a similar musical range, but much higher tonal quality. During the hour's program, the cymbalum and dulcimer will be heard in solos.

The program for Tuesday night will be as follows: Waltz, "Sing Again That Sweet Refrain;" Schottische, "Want to Go Tomorrow;" plain quadrille, "Pacific;" cymbalum solo, "Violet;" two-step medley, "Darling Nellie Gray" and "Jingle Bells;" Varsovienne, "Hungarian Medley;" Polka, "Bell Polka;" plain quadrille, "Armona;" rye waltz, dulcimer solo, Medley of hornpipes, and Gallop, "Laughing Gallop."

The plain quadrille, Lovett says, is probably most popular of the old-fashioned dances. For this reason a group of seven selections for the plain quadrille will be found in Friday night's program. As on Tuesday evening, the music will be furnished by the Henry Ford Orchestra.

The selections to be played will be as follows: Waltz, "Lad O-Kildaire Medley," The Dutchess, plain quadrille, "Buffalo Girls," "Love Is but a Lassie Yet," "My Son, Teddy;" "White Cockade," "Durang's Hornpipe," "Soldier's Joy," and "Rickets Hornpipe;" Varsovienne, Medley; cymbalum solo, "Old Refrain"—(Kreisler); Money Musk, Mazurke, "One Heart, One Mind"—(Strauss); Schottische, "Mountain Bell;" plain qaudrille, Stickneys; dulcimer solo, Medley of Jigs, and Virginia reel.

KMOX WILL PRESENT NEW STAFF ENTERTAINERS

KMOX will introduce to its listeners next week a new staff of entertainers.

William Struber, baritone, recently returned from the East, will replace Gene Enzinger. Gilbert Borreson, tenor, will replace Walter Neumann.

Marguerite Stille will be the new staff contralto, replacing Jeanne Gustavison. Mrs. Edith Hurst, soprano, will be a new member. Mrs. Hurst is a member of the Morning Choral Club and for six years was soloist at the Euclid Baptist Church.

This new policy does not mean that present KMOX entertainers will not be heard from KMOX again.

MARCH TO SEE NEW KFUO STATION ON AIR

Bids to Be Received This Week for Building — 1000-Watt Transmitter to Be Used.

Indications now are that by the middle of March Broadcasting Station KFUO of Concordia Seminary, St. Louis, will have a new 1000-watt station in operation.

This transmitter will be twice as powerful as the one which now puts KFUO, "The Gospel Voice," on the air.

Aerial towers for the new transmitter have been erected on the grounds of Concordia Seminary, near Big Bend road.

Bids for constructing the building to house the KFUO broadcasting studios and apparatus are to be received this week, according to the Rev. Herman Hohenstein, station director.

The new KFUO transmitter will continue to broadcast on the wave length, 545.1, which it shares with KSD.

The "Dyne" in Radio Usage.

The "dyne" as used in radio signifies a beat. Heterodyne is a beat produced by another force, or between two oscillation frequencies. Superheterodyne is a beat that is supersaudible—cannot be heard. Neutrodyne is a method of neutralizing a beat that is heard as a squeal.

WHAT WJZ PLANS TO BROADCAST THIS WEEK

Many of Its Programs Also May Be Heard From Stations KDKA and KYW.

A concert by Erva Giles, soprano; Walter Preston and Astride Fjelde, and an operatic concert, Tuesday night; a concert by Lucille Chalfont, coloratura soprano, and an orchestra Wednesday night; a concert by Beniamo Gigli, tenor, and Guiseppe de Luca, baritone, of the Metropolitan Opera, and Mme. Renee Chemet, French violinist, Friday night, and a concert by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, with Arturo Toscanini conducting, Saturday night, will be noteworthy features of next week's broadcasting from Station WJZ, New York (454 meters; 660 kc.).

Some of these programs, and other WJZ programs, also will be broadcast by WJZ's blue network of stations which includes KDKA, Pittsburg (309 meters, 970 kc.), and KYW, (Chicago (535 meters, 560 kc.). As has been told, WJY has been shifted ot the red network, of which KSD is a member.

Following is the week's broadcasting schedule from WJZ alone and jointly with KDKA and KYW:

At 7 o'clock tonight, WJZ, KDKA and KYW will start a new series of broadcasts of great love affairs of fact and fiction. Tonight, the romance of Paola and Francesca, as told by Stephen Phillips, the poet, will be re'old. The roles will be portrayed by actors of note on Broadway, and a large string orchestra will provide a musical setting.

At 8:30, WJZ will broadcast a radio tour to Malaga and Granada, Spain, both cities at one time centers of Moorish power.

At 9 o'clock, WJZ will broadcast a weekly recital by Godfrey Ludlow, staff violinist of the station and an artist of note.

WJZ Program for Monday.

A program of Southern melodies, Negro spirituals and plantation songs will be presented from WJZ at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow night. Vaughn de Leath, supported by an orchestra, will sing.

The Record Boys—Al Bernard, Frank Kamplain and Sammy Stept—will be heard from WJZ every Monday night at 9 o'clock.

WJZ will launch Eddie Worth's County Fair Orchestra at 9:30 tomorrow night. They play in costume, each of the organization being attired as a different type commonly found at a county fair.

Tuesday Night From WJZ.

A new feature to be broadcast by WJZ and the blue network will be a series of operatic concerts in abridged form. The next of these will be broadcast at 7 o'clock Tuesday night.

At 8 o'clock Tuesday night Erva Giles, Walter Preston and Astrid Fjelde will be heard from WJZ and its chain in a complete program supported by an orchestra. Erva Giles has been a regular broadcaster for over three years. Preston is almost as well known. Astrid Fjelde's radio debut was made over a year ago and her knowledge of Norwegian music and interpretive ability have won her a place.

In a new series being broadcast by WJZ and the Blue Network at 9 o'clock Tuesday nights, entitled "Don Amaizo, the Wizard," an interesting character, who is supposed to be mute, answers all questions and tells his story through a violin.

Wednesday Night on WJZ.

The vaudeville team, the Mitchell Brothers, will be the entertainers in a new feature from WJZ and the Blue Network at 7 o'clock Wednesday nights. The Mitchell Brothers are a leading banjo and singing unit in vaudeville.

Lucille Chalfant, coloratura soprano, will be the featured soloist with orchestra under Nathaniel Shilkret, in the program from WJZ and the Blue Network, at 8 o'clock Wednesday night.

Miss Chalfant rose from the chorus. Her remarkable range is attested by the fact that she is able to sing the highest part in all operatic repertory, the role of the "Queen of Night," in Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute," without transposition. In this role F in alt appears several times.

Shilkret's orchestra will play a complete program of classical music.

WJZ's Armchair Hour, which started during the Christmas holidays, will continue as a regular Wednesday night feature. The group is composed of a male quartet in which the Milton Cross, the singing announcer; Marley Sherris, George Tyler and Walter Preston. Solos in this broadcast will be by Keith McLeod, studio manager of WJZ, who will be heard at the piano and on the vibraphone, with Godfrey Ludlow, the well-known staff violinist of the station. Selections will feature old favorites, such as "Sweet Adeline, "Down by the Old Mill Stream," and "Sidewalks of New York."

Thursday Night From WJZ.

Col. True and his boy Fab will open a new series of radio broadcasts from WJZ and the Blue Network at 7 o'clock Thursday night. The title of this series of broadcasts will be "Bi-spun Yarns." Col. True is an adventurer and sportsman. His boy Fab is his servant of all work—his "man Friday." In each broadcast Col. True will report an adventure or a story of some great sporting event to Fab with a musical setting characteristic of the clime in which the story is laid.

Markels' Society Orchestra, which has been a regular feature of WJZ on Monday nights, has been shifted to Thursday night and henceforth will be heard at 7:30 o'clock.

Jack Denny's Frivolity Club Orchestra will be heard from WJZ at 9:30 o'clock on Thursday and Saturday nights.

WJZ's Friday Night Program.

Friday night, the Serenaders and Bonnie Laddies will be heard from WJZ at 6 o'clock instead of 7 o'clock.

"The Voice of the Silent Drama" series, which has been a regular WJZ feature, will be heard in a new dress and at a new time, starting with the next broadcast, at 7 o'clock Friday night. C. T. Davis and Malcolm La Prade, who have collaborated in writing the episodes for this series, are presenting "The To-Be-Weds," the story, in serial form, of "Dorothy" and "Jack," during their engagement. The roles will be played by Miss Irene Dawn and Allen Ward, who have starred on Broadway.

The hour of music, formerly broadcast by WJZ on Thursday nights, will henceforth be broadcast by that station and the Blue Network at 7:30 o'clock Friday nights. Franklyn Baur will continue to play the role of Hero while Virginia Rae, soprano, will be featured as Heroine. The heralds will be Joe Green, xylophonist and vibrophonist. Andy Sanella, a master of the saxophone and string instruments, and Frank Banta, pianist.

Beniamino Gigli, tenor, and Giuseppe de Luca, baritone, both of the Metropolitan Opera Co., and Renee Chemet, French violinist, will be the stars of the concert to be broadcast from WJZ and the Blue Network at 8 o'clock Friday night. These stars will be supported by the Victor Concert Orchestra, under Rosario Bourdon, in this program.

"Marche Militaire Francaise," Saint-Saens — Orchestra. "Una Furtiva Lagrima," from "L'Elisir D'Amore," Donizetti: "Serenade," Silvestri-Toselli—Beniamino Gigli (with orchestra). "Spring Song," Mendelssohn: "I Heard You Calling Me," Hartford-Marshall — Mme. Renee Chemet (with piano). "Eri Tu," from "The Masked Ball," Verdi; "Nuttata E Sentimento," Cassese-Capolongo — Giuseppe de Luca (with orchestra). "At Dawning," Cadman; "Waltzing Doll," Poldini—Orchestra. "M'Appari," from "Martha," Flotow; "Mandulinata A Napule," Murolo-Tagliaferri—Beniamino Gigle (with orchestra). "No One Knows but the Red Red Rose," Gordon; "Under the Sheltering Leaves," Thome—Mme. Renee Chemet (with piano). "Il Balen," Verdi; "Occhi di Fata," Tremacolido Denza—Giuseppe de Luca (with orchestra). Coppelia Ballet—Czardas, Delibes-Tobani—Orchestra. "Lo Forza Del Destino," Verdi—Duet—de Luca and Gigli.

The Radio Aces, G. Underhill Macy and Ed. Smalle, will return to WJZ for the first program of a series to be broadcast at 9 o'clock Friday night. These entertainers have also broadcast under the name of "The Imps," rendering light popular selections and ballads. Smalle, the pianist of the duo, is also known as "The human cello."

WJZ's Saturday Night Program.

The Criterion Male Quartet will give a version of de Koven's operetta, "Robin Hood," in their broadcast from WJZ at 7 o'clock Saturday night.

The conductor of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in the concert to be broadcast by WJZ and the Blue Network at 8 o'clock Saturday night, will be Arturo Toscanini, the famous

ADDITIONAL MERIT BADGES FOR EAGLES

Special Insignia in Form of Miniature Palm for Extra Degrees.

Special insignia to be awarded Eagle Scouts who obtain additional merit badges to the 21 required for the Eagle rank, and changes in the system of awarding the Eagle badge were announced by local Boy Scout headquarters last week. The changes, which were recently adopted by the national executive board of the organization, are to go into effect at once.

The new insignia is in the form of a miniature palm, in bronze, gold, or silver. The bronze palm will be given for earning five merit badges beyond the Eagle rank; the gold for 10, and the silver for 15 more; each badge is to replace the next lower one, but combinations may be used to indicate more than 15 badges.

No palm may be awarded, however, unless the local court of honor has received evidence that the Eagle Scout has put into practice the ideals and principles of scouting, has maintained an active relationship to the organization, and has made an effort to develop and demonstrate leadership.

Applicants for Eagle badges must also satisfy the court of honor in the above respects, and must show a satisfactory record as first-class Scout for at least one year. Eagle badges will no longer be furnished free to candidates, but must be purchased like other equipment.

Four new merit badges, in canoeing, journalism, salesmanship and weather, have been added to the list, and may be used as electives in obtaining the Eagle badge.

The new insignia have not as yet been received by local headquarters, which is therefore unprepared to meet the demand of those Eagles who have already qualified.

SIX WEEKS' COOKING COURSE TO BE GIVEN GIRL SCOUTS

Lessons to Begin Saturday Morning and Will Include Preparation of Entire Meal.

A course in cooking covering the menu from soup to pie and even to the next day's hash, will be given to Girl Scouts of St. Louis and East St. Louis during the next six weeks, under the joint auspices of the St. Louis Girl Scout Council and Miss Helen Wetherall, director of the Home Service Department of the Laclede Gas Co. Classes will begin Saturday morning at 10 o'clock in the gas company's lecture room and will be held weekly then at the same until Feb. 13.

The first lessons will be devoted to the simpler dishes, each successive preparation becoming more difficult until the next to last lesson, which will cover the preparation of an entire meal at home. Reports on the home meal are to be turned in at the last lesson, which will also deal with menus for parties and social occasions. A final examination will be given, with questions on home sanitation, the economical use of left-overs, the preparation of family dinners, and efficient methods of housekeeping.

Girls who successfully pass the examination and whose cooking during the classes has been passed by the instructor, will automatically qualify for the Girl Scout cooking badge.

A similar class was held last year by Miss Wetherall, 71 Girl Scouts attending.

News From Boy Scout Troops.

Headquarters.

A list of the Christmas "good turns" performed by St. Louis and suburban troops has been prepared by headquarters. In addition to the individual troop good turns, the organization as a whole sent toys to 500 children in the Illinois River flood area. The list follows:

Troop 130 collected children's cast-off clothing, and delivered it, together with 43 baskets of food, to poor children.

Troop 160 did their good turn for the church, which was giving an entertainment, by sweeping and mopping the floors, arranging and dusting the chairs and decorating the Christmas tree. The entire troop participated.

Troop 204 collected a basket of food and bought six woolen caps and six pairs of woolen stockings for poor families.

Troop 81 carried clothing and baskets of food to several needy families, following the custom of the troop for the last 10 years.

Troop 215 trimmed a Christmas tree for one of the older teachers of a Carondelet school.

Troop 226 of Bethany Evangelical Church delivered to a needy family two baskets of provisions and six toys. The provisions were donated by the scouts and the toys by a merchant in the neighborhood, Mr. Scharlott.

Troop 3 of Grace Hill Church gave a bushel of apples and five dozen boxes of cakes, bought out of the troop treasury for the children of the church. The scoutmaster played Santa for the children. On Christmas eve the boys helped distribute baskets to poor families.

Troop 35 obtained the names of five families, with a total of 16 children, who were in need of help, and provided each with food, toys and clothing. The baskets contained at least four jars or glasses of jelly, jam or preserves, one or more large cans of fruit, five or more cans of vegetables, milk, coffee, sugar, flour, baking powder, salt, pepper, bread, butter, potatoes, apples, oranges ½ pound sliced bacon, and a rolled beef roast large enough for the family. About 200 toys were collected and distributed, the boys of the troop repairing some that were broken. About 50 articles of clothing also were given out.

Troop 243 gathered clothing, food and toys to be sent to the orphans' home at Margaretta and Newstead avenues. The amount represented about $30. They also sent $1.50 to the Reformed Orphans' Home at Fort Wayne, Ind.

The scouts hauled coal into the church boiler room to assist the janitor to be able to finish work for Christmas eve.

Richmond Heights Troop 1 aided in carrying song books and chairs from the old church to the new church.

Troop 219 did its good turn Christmas eve by presenting a box of apples to the Missouri Home Society.

Troop 3, Webster Groves, distributed baskets of food and toys to needy families on the outskirts of Webster.

The following boys were registered as tenderfoot scouts this week:

North District.

Troop 19, of the Blair School, is the third troop in the district formally to complete item two "the formation of a Standard Committee," of the first quarter's troop objectives for 1927. The Troop Committee met Tuesday evening and each member familiarized himself with his duties and formally accepted them for the coming year.

Troop 50, of the Normandy High School, has been working for two months on a Troop museum, which is now nearing completion. The troop is planning a Parents' Night at which time all of the handiwork of the Scouts will be on display.

Troop 55, of the Cote Brilliante Presbyterian Church, is planning a special Parents' Night and investiture ceremony for Thursday, Feb. 3.

Troop 92, of the Cupples School, will hold its monthly inspection Wednesday evening. Each patrol leader has been requested to get out every member of his patrol with as many of them in uniform as possible. The patrols are also planning a special dramatization of Scout work for the inter-patrol contest.

Troop 240, of the Prospect Hill Mission, registered last week for 1927, under the leadership of the new Scoutmaster, Glenn Owens. Rev. G. W. Sanderson, chairman of the troop committee, served a banquet at his home for the troop and plans were laid for the new year.

South District.

Troop 91 entertained the Girl Scouts recently with a party given at the Compton Hill Congregational Church. After games, the boys served a luncheon, which was followed by a play. The Scouts of Troop 91 also presented the girls with a silk American flag, Charles Wettengel Jr. making the presentation address. The flag was received by the Girl Scouts' Captain, Mrs. Wiegand.

Scoutmaster Horace Grimm, who has been in the East for several months has returned. A new scout committee has been named for 1927. The members are: W. R. Premister, chairman; A. C. Blum, William Walker, Albert Fults, J. H. Castleman; scoutmaster, Horace Grimm; assistant scoutmaster, Albert C. McGue; junior assistant, Hadlye Grimm; senior patrol leader, Ralph Meyer; patrol leaders, Hugo Meyers, Charles A. Wettengel Jr., and Wiley Bischoff; treasurer, Vincent Meyer; scribe, Richard Burg.

Troop 176, of the Jewish Orphans' Home, held its regular meeting Wednesday evening. Field Executive Shippey was present to inspect the troops and talk to the boys about the troop's objectives for 1927.

West District.

The regular monthly meeting of the West District scout leaders has been scheduled for 7:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the Pilgrim Congregational Church. Troop committeemen and commissioned officers are urged to be present.

Troop 5 of the west district has published the third issue of its troop paper, "The Scribble." The staff consists of William Stephens, editor; Sidney Robnett, assistant editor, and Donald Close, assistant editor.

Troop 79 of the Union M. E. Church is working on its reregistration, which is due in January. Because of the lack of time to devote to the troop, Mr. Pestan is resigning as scoutmaster to take a place on the Troop Committee, F. F. Gourley succeeding him. Gourley has been working with the troop for several months.

Troop 98 of St. Roch's Catholic School is working on its reregistration, which is due in February. Scoutmaster Edwin L. Wahl plans to have the entire troop reregistered this month.

Troop 119 of Shaare Zedek Congregation met Tuesday night. The entire troop of 20 members was present and participated in an evening of contests and stunts. Field Executive Reaves presented three boys with their tenderfoot pins, three with second-class pins and three with service awards.

Troop 208 of St. Luke's school is scheduled to have a reorganization meeting Tuesday night, under C. S. Pollock.

Troop Committeeman LeRoy, a former army officer, put the scouts of Troop 30 through a drill Wednesday evening. While some of the boys were re-registering for 1927, several basketball games were played.

Three new patrols were organized by Troop 75 at its last meeting; the Eagle, under Patrol Leader Morris Turkin and Assistant Patrol Leader Arnold Adams; the Owl, under Patrol Leader Marvin Maldafsky and Assistant Patrol Leader Alex Gibson, and the Wolf, under Patrol Leader Edward Inglove and Assistant Patrol Leader William Urbon. Julius Greene is senior patrol leader, and Richard Osborn scribe. Scout Osborn was awarded a 100 per cent duty pin by Field Executive Reaves. An inter-patrol contest was started, to last two months.

Six scouts and three troop committeemen of Troop 137 assisted the Riddick school children during a Christmas entertainment Dec. 22. They acted as ushers, cared for the smaller children and distributed favors and candy. The Patrons' Alliance of the school has appointed a scout committee of three men to assist the troop committee.

Suburban District.

Webster Groves Troop 15 has invited all Webster Groves Scouts to its regular meeting Friday to hear Capt. J. K. Walsh, of the 388th Field Artillery, speak on Peru, where he spent two years as a mining engineer. Capt. Walsh will have with him his collection of relics, such as bows and arrows, hatchets and arrowheads, and he will also introduce a "Dead Man" which he carries with him.

St. Charles Troop 3 participated in three Christmas good turns by collecting and delivering baskets. Scout Wilfred Kaueler was elected patrol leader of the new patrol just formed.

Two needy families were assisted by Troop 1, Rock Hill, during Christmas vacation.

The first meeting of Home Heights Troop 1 with the new Scoutmaster, T. D. Moore, will be held Jan. 14, at 7:30 o'clock at the schoolhouse. Old members of this troop are urged to be present and outline their year's program with Moore.

The scouts of Troop 14, Webster Groves, attended a special scout motion picture, "A Regular Scout" at a local theater a week ago Wednesday.

An inter-patrol whittling contest is scheduled for the troop's next meeting. Hot chocolate and popcorn balls will be served.

Junior Brackbill, Luther Armstrong, and Charles Fernald of Troop 9, Webster Groves, spent the holidays at the Winter Camp at Irondale. All three were awarded the "Satisfactory Camper" emblem, and Brackbill and Fernald passed merit badge tests.

GIRL SCOUT NOTES

A series of contests has been arranged by Troop 15 as part of its season's program. The first, held last week, was to familiarize the girls with the streets and important buildings of the city. Slips of paper containing the names of buildings were given to the girls, who then went to them by street car. An inter-patrol contest, to runs six weeks, has also been started. Patrol 1 is leading at present. Three trainnig classes, for recruits, Tenderfoot, and second-class scouts, have been organized.

The girls of Troop 20 are dramatizing the scout laws.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water.

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

CONSTIPATION AND THE ILLS THAT IT CAUSES

"We have used Black-Draught in our family for ten years," says Mrs. Sallie James, Vanceburg, Ky. "It is a splendid medicine to use for constipation and the ills that go with this trouble.

"Every member of my family takes Black-Draught, and we are rarely without it on the medicine shelf.

"I have never found that it was followed by bad after-effects, such as accompany some other remedies, and because of that we have come to have great faith in it.

"Before we started using Black-Draught, some member of the family was constantly complaining of sick headache, or a dull, lifeless feeling, which accompanies constipation. Now we never have anything like that, for a pinch of Black-Draught gets rid of the trouble.

"I suffered with constipation for years, before I discovered that it could easily be avoided. Since I began using Black-Draught in my home, I have recommended it to many of my friends, and I have never heard one of them say anything but good for it."

Thousands of men and women speak highly of Thedford's Black-Draught, because they have found it of great help in relieving and warding off constipation, indigestion, biliousness and other common ailments.

Black-Draught is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs, of highest quality, carefully combined, and packaged by automatic machinery.

What Causes Stomach Gas?

INTESTINAL STASIS, say famous specialists, afflicts three people out of every four! That statement might mean little to the average man or woman if it were not for one startling fact. It is this. Recent medical discoveries show that most cases of gas bloating, sour stomach and indigestion are due to just that one cause—Intestinal Stasis.

Intestinal Stasis

IMPROPER food, lack of exercise and other faults of modern life are the cause of this insidious disease. In everyday language Intestinal Stasis means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines or bowels. By staying too long in the body, this matter ferments, gives off gas, hinders digestion and poisons the whole system.

Even if the bowels move daily, enough old matter is often left to form gas, causing bloating, gas pains, sleeplessness and nervousness. Ordinary laxatives or soda or magnesia may give temporary relief—but that is all. Intestinal Stasis and Gas can be relieved permanently only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing.

Stops Gas Quickly

DR. CARL WESCHCKE, in his private practice, first used the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other gas-expelling and detergent elements. Unlike other medicines, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

The first effect of Adlerika is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Often just ONE spoonful brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous waste matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, headache, sleeplessness.

Adlerika is not a cure-all. In cases of gastric ulcers or deep-seated organic trouble, a good physician should be consulted. But if your trouble is due to Intestinal Stasis (as many stomach and bowel disorders are), Adlerika gives surprisingly quick relief. Even if your bowels move daily, you'll be surprised at the amount of additional matter Adlerika often brings out—and how much better you'll feel after taking it. Sold by 39,000 druggists.

WATCH the bubbles coming to the top of the water along the edges of a pond. They're caused by gas given off by decaying matter at the bottom of the pond. In much the same way, waste food matter in the intestines ferments and gives off gas, causing bloating and indigestion.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble. It is the best in my entire 37 years experience."—Dr. G. Eggers.

AN OBLIGING BEAUTY DOCTOR

A Beauty Specialist Gives Home-Made Recipe to Darken Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. D. Gillespie, a well-known beauty specialist of Kansas City, recently gave out the following statement regarding gray hair:

"Anyone can prepare a mixture at home that will darken gray hair, and make it glossy. To a half pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and will not rub off."

Third Generation is Using Syrup Pepsin

No Other Laxative Can Replace Dr. Caldwell's in the Confidence of Those Who Use It

THERE are thousands of healthy, robust young men and women who have never in all their lives taken any other laxative for constipation than Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Their parents were given it by their parents; the grandparents are using it today. It is the one laxative ideally suited to all the family, safe for the little ones, effective in grown-ups, so compounded that elderly people who are constantly forced to take a laxative find increased dosage unnecessary. This wonderful constipation remedy has been used continuously for thirty years, and over ten million bottles are now sold annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world! The cost averages but a cent a dose. Every druggist sells it, and under a guarantee to do as claimed or your money will be refunded.

Millions of carefully conducted homes are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. There is scarcely a day that someone in a family does not need it for constipation, torpid liver, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, colds and other evidence of bowel obstruction.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. The formula is on the package. As the popularity of this natural vegetable laxative increases, the public discards the harsher physics like calomel, coal tar in candy form, salt waters and powders. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin empties the bowels more cleanly and without any danger.

PASSES PLENTIFUL ON TRAINS IN RUSSIA

Soviet Allows Free Transportation of Families in Return for Cheap Labor.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1927.

CHITA, Siberia, U. S. S. R.—The Government transportation system in Russia is run on anything but a business basis. About 25 per cent of the passenger's on the trains pay for their tickets, the others are riding on passes, issued at the request of some Government department and charged to that department.

The weekly Moscow-Vladivostok express, with a run of 5831 in 10 days, frequently does not carry more than $500 in cash fares.

Most of the passes go to the personnel of the transportation commissariat. Each worker, which is a lower classification than employe, is entitled to two passes annually for himself and each member of his family. If he lives in Vladivostok he can go himself or send any or all members of his family twice each year to Batum via Leningrad and return, a distance of 17,600 miles—more than 30 days of continuous riding. Not many indulge in such a long, rolling spree, but the number of wives, daughters and sweethearts who commute over the 5831 miles between Vladivostok and Moscow virtually fill the cars.

Passes Keep Trains Going.

Though the passes are unlimited, possibly they are not such a total loss as might appear on the surface. The railroad worker's wage is low, many receiving $17.50 a month in addition to quarters; therefore, the family's free rides each year and the opportunity to see the country is a compensation. The passes, charged to other branches of the Government, making an impressive showing in the transportation comissariat's total of annual receipts, may amplify the trick of taking money from one pocket and putting it in another, but the practice has an indirect advantage. If the trains were not filled up by pass-holders obviously only one-fourth as many trains would be needed for paying passengers. A train which now runs weekly could run once a month and satisfy the patronage.

The paying passenger usually fails to appreciate that trains and steamboats are not run for revenue. In Moscow he may order his ticket a week in advance but he will not receive it until the day the train leaves and it is known how many places will be left over after all the "deadheads" have been cared for. Possibly there will be none and he can wait another week. Taking a train at intermediate stations is more of a gamble. Not only the passholders who have preference are there but the station master does not know how many places will be vacant until he receives a telegram from the train conductor, a few hours before it arrives. Half an hour before the train arrives the ticket office opens, usually a round hole in the wall no larger than a saucer, and the riot starts.

The Efficient Secret Police.

The waiting crowd, some of whom may have been living, eating and sleeping on the station floor for days, rushes to the window. The harassed "natchalnik" who has been besieged by requests for tickets gives a sigh of relief, puts on his red cap and goes out on the platform to receive the train, his troubles over until the next train is due.

There may be 200 who want to go, 40 places on the train and 35 of these pre-empted by individuals who have a "pull." The first five who have stood patiently in line for hours get the surplus places and the cashier slams his window and turns down the others as coldly as a pay car passes a wayside tramp. They can take a local train which is not so crowded and more leisurely, very leisurely with many stops and changes of cars, continue across Siberia.

Strange as it may seem, the good Samaritan ready to help the stranger in a strange land at every station is the agent of the "gay-pay-oo," the often dreaded political police of soviet Russia. In the correspondent's recent 10,946-mile jaunt he did not find one, though they were approached at many stations, who was not courteous, efficient and ready patiently to listen to the traveler's tale of woe. There was always the invariable "Show me your documents, please," and then his name went down on the station master's list of those who surely would have tickets for the next train.

POLICE REPORT AN ERROR

Gives Name of Finder of Body as That of Dead Man.

On Dec. 26 St. Louis newspapers including the Post-Dispatch printed a report that Duby Heath, at 525 Wash street, had been found frozen to death in a vacant house at 523 Wash street. It develops that Heath was the person who found the body, which was that of Leo Niedermann, 40 years old, of no permanent address. Confusion in the police report apparently caused the error.

ST. LOUIS, according to her visitors one of the most hospitable of cities, has opened her doors to an unusually large number of guests for the first month of the new year, and while informal parties will be the general rule, sufficient entertaining will be done to keep an otherwise uninteresting social program from becoming monotonous.

On Jan. 20, Lady Peek and her young son, Francis, will arrive from their home in Devonshire, England, to visit her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Holliday, while Sir Wilfrid Peek is in India inspecting his tea plantations. They will be here a month, during which old friends of her ladyship will give a round of informal dinners and teas. Before returning to England they will visit Lady Peek's mother, Mrs. William C. Stribling at her winter home in Pasadena, Cal. Another former St. Louisan, Mrs. James Noah Slee of Herolett, Long Island, N. N. Bemis of the same hotel.

Miss Nancy Walker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Herbert Walker of New York, formerly of St. Louis, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Max Kotany of 4384 Westminster place. A tea to be given by Mrs. Kotany Tuesday afternoon is one of the affairs. Mrs. Gwynne Evans has with her Mrs. Theodore Proxmire of Lake Forest, Ill., who will be here until Wednesday, and within a fortnight expects Mrs. Thomas Simons of Kansas City. Mr. and Mrs. John Black of Chicago, who are spending two days with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Angert of the Kent road, were the guests of honor at a dinner given last night by their hosts, and Mr. and Mrs. Angert will have a tea for their guests from 5 to 6:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The arrival this afternoon of two young women will stimulate entertaining in debutante circles. A long promised visit from Miss Charlotte Vanderlip, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vanderlip of New York, will be realized and she will be the guest of Miss Clarissa Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chouteau Dyer of 29 Lenox place. Miss Susan Cleveland of Denver, also arriving today, will be the guest of Miss Susie Singleton, daughter of Marvin E. Singleton of Kingsbury place. Miss Singleton has planned a dinner party for her guest, the date to be announced later.

On Jan. 15 Mrs. Joseph Huey Hughes is expected from her home in Dallas, Tex., to visit her mother, Mrs. William Bagnell of the La Due road, and a few days later, Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Palms Jr. of Detroit will be the guests of Mr. Palms' uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William Maffitt. They will remain until after the wedding Jan. 20 of Miss Catherine Louise Crunden and Festus J. Wade Jr., at which Mr. Palms will be a groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Hall of Hotel Chase will entertain Mrs. Alice Acheson Sproule of Denison, Tex., who will be here Thursday, and will be soloist at the Symphony orchestra concert Sunday afternoon. The last of the month Mrs. Hamilton Gamble of Paris, France, and her daughter, Miss Eleanor, will visit Mrs. David C. Gamble of Portland place.

Imperial Ball and League Lectures to End Season

WITH the exception of the Junior League lectures for the Monday mornings in January, the Imperial ball at the St. Louis Country Club, and a few parties at the St. Louis Woman's Club, the important social activities for the formal season are almost at an end.

The Junior League schedule is as follows: Monday Jan. 10, "Current History" by Rev. Dr. William L. Sullivan; Monday, Jan. 17, "An Examination into Behavior"; Monday, Jan. 24, Edward G. Spaulding will lecture on "The New Rationalism, Reason and Realism and Other Philosophies." The lectures will be given in the club rooms in the Galeria building at 11:30 o'clock.

A conference of Junior League Chapters in the mid-western cities will be held in St. Louis, Jan. 25 and 26. Members of the local chapter will entertain the visiting delegates, and informal parties them after the meetings.

Invitations were received last week for the Imperial ball to be given Friday night. The patronesses for this year will be Mrs. Howard Benoist, Mrs. Lemuel Ray Carter, Mrs. Daniel Kayser, Catlin, Mrs. John Tilden Davis, Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran, Mrs. J. Clifford Rosengarten, Mrs. Henry Clarkson Scott, Mrs. Arthur B. Shepley, Mrs. Harry Brookings Wallace and Miss Mary Lionberger.

MISS MARIE HURLEY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Hurley. Announcement has been made of her engagement to C. Earl Giraldin. —Dieckman.

At the St. Louis Woman's Club there will be a dinner Tuesday night to be given by Mrs. James Franklin McCourtney.

Yesterday afternoon, Mrs. William N. Bemis of Hotel Chase was hostess at a luncheon complimenting her daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Battle, who is visiting her, and last night the Tennessee Society, of which Eugene Tavenner is president, gave its annual banquet. Thursday afternoon the club will have its regular table d'hote luncheon and card party.

Society Seeks Brief Respite as Formal Social Season Ends

SOCIETY will take a brief respite from its social activities with the cessation of the formal season, which has been one of the most brilliant in years. This winter an unusually large number of debutantes made their bows, many interesting visitors were entertained and a Queen and members of her royal family were guests in St. Louis. A large number have chosen this time of the year for European travel, the blue of the Mediterranean intriguing many, and scores will flock to the playgrounds of the South.

California apparently holds the most charm for St. Louisans. Among the first to depart will be Louis Werner of 36 Westmoreland Place, who will leave tomorrow for Palm Springs, Cal., accompanied by his small grandson and namesake, Louis Werner II, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner of the La Due road. Mrs. Werner will join her young son in February for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Scott, who have been in France the past two years and who returned home for the holidays, will depart this month for California for the remainder of the winter.

Among those who will go to Pasadena will be Mrs. Charles Whitelaw and Mrs. Robert Filley of Hotel Chase, who will leave Jan. 22; William Cotter of Clara avenue and his daughter, Miss Leota Cotter; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins of Portland Place, who will depart the end of the month, and Mr. and Mrs. Ewing Hill of Clara avenue, who will depart Jan. 25.

Others who have planned a mid-winter trip to California include Mr. and Mrs. Henry

Engagements And Weddings Of Interest

Miss Agnes Booth and William F. St. Clair of Columbia, Mo., Are Married at Bride's Home.

Invitations to the wedding of Yolanda Romano Avezzana, daughter of Baron Romano Avezzana, Italian ambassador at Paris, France, and Viscomte Alain Obert de Thieusies, attache at the Belgium embassy, have been received in St. Louis. The wedding will take place at noon, Jan. 12, at the Basilique de Saint Clotilde, with the Archbishop De Bois of Paris performing the ceremony. A reception will follow at the embassy. Inclosed in the invitation issued by Baron Romano Avezzana were invitations issued by the parents of the prospective bridegroom, Vicomte and Vicomtesse Amaury Obert de Thieusies.

The bride-to-be is the cousin of the Pettus, Kennerly, McRee and Glasgow families of St. Louis. Her mother was before her marriage, Miss Mae Taylor of this city. Lieut. Joseph Glasgow, U. S. A., aid to Ambassador Herrick, United States Ambassador to France, will be a member of the wedding party. Baron Romano Avezzana was ambassador from Italy at Washington several years ago and during that time his daughter came to St. Louis to visit her relatives and was entertained by them.

Miss Mary Agnes Booth, daughter of Dr. David S. Booth of 5107 Enright avenue, became the bride at noon yesterday of William Frank St. Clair of Columbia, Mo. The ceremony took place at the home of the bride's father, the Rev. Dr. William E. Crowe of the Westminster Presbyterian Church officiating. The bride was unattended, and Dr. R. H. Hill of Columbia, Mo., was best man. The bride is a graduate of the University of Missouri and is a member of Delta Gamma.

The out-of-town guests were the Rev. and Mrs. W. S. St. Clair, parents of the bridegroom; Mrs. L. W. St. Clair and Mr. and Mrs. W. Richard Clark, all of Columbia; Mrs. B. R. Tate and daughter of Fort Scott, Kan.; Miss Martha Williams of Butler, Mo., and Miss Alice Hafer of Kansas City. After a short honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. St. Clair will make their home in Columbia.

A wedding, interesting here, is that of Miss Gertrude Hoagland and Frank Gordon, both of Peoria, Ill., which took place yesterday afternoon in St. Mark's Church in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon will spend their honeymoon in Quebec.

The bride has many friends in St. Louis and has been entertained here on several occasions by Mrs. William T. Mellow of "Alysite," 5108 South Broadway, and Mrs. Clarence Howard Jr. of 5522 Chamberlain avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Mellow departed Friday night to attend the ceremony.

Miss Virginia Bergs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Bergs of 3237 Copelin avenue, became the bride of Anthony O'Neil Croak, Jan. 4, at the Immaculate Conception Church, the Rev. Father M. J. Sullivan officiating. A reception for the relatives and close friends followed at the home of the bride's parents. The bride was gowned in white satin embellished in rose point lace worn by her mother at her marriage. There were long tight sleeves and the neck line was finished with rose point outlined in pearls and flounces of the lace adorned the skirt. A court train lined with flesh-tinted chiffon and silver cloth depended from her shoulders. She wore a tulle veil caught to her hair with a cap of lace and carried valley lilies.

Mrs. Frank Rice was matron of honor for her sister, and Miss Josephine Croak, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Velda Harold Wrape were bridesmaids. They were chiffon in shaded American beauty rose tints and black felt hats and carried American beauty roses. J. Edward Croak was best man for his brother, and the groomsmen were Jerry Sheahan, Frank Rice, Jimmy Higgs and Bud Smith. Mr. and Mrs. Croak will spend their honeymoon in the East and will make their home in St. Louis.

The wedding of Mrs. Bel Bacon Thorne of Henderson Point, Miss., and Roger Generelly, son of Mrs. Roger Generelly of 5206 Waterman avenue, which took place yesterday at Pass Christian, Miss., will be of interest to St. Louis relatives and friends of Mr. Generelly. Following the ceremony Mr. Generelly and his bride went to Florida for their honeymoon. They will make their home in Pass Christian until April, when they expect to come to St. Louis to live. Mr. Generelly's mother, who is ill, was unable to attend her son's wedding.

Announcement has been made by Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Baum of Beaver, Pa., of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Erma Frances, to Charles William MacDonald of Newport News, Va., Dec. 29.

Mr. Macdonald is the son of Maj. and Mrs. J. W. Macdonald of St. Louis. He is an alumnus of Washington University and a member of Sigma Chi.

Mr. and Mrs. Macdonald will be at home after Jan. 10 at 220 Forty-eighth street, Newport News, Va.

The engagement of Miss Maud Mohler, daughter of Mrs. Harriet A. Mohler of 1359 Arlington avenue, to Eugene C. Ringler, son of [illegible] Julia F. Ringler, of 5764 Chamberlain avenue, was announced in the Jade room of the Congress Hotel, Monday, Dec. 27, at a bridge dinner given by the Phi Pi Phi sorority.

Mr. Ringler is an alumnus of Washington University and a member of Psi Delta Fraternity.

No date has been set for the wedding.

The engagement of Miss Virginia Eastin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eastin of 1015 Blendon place, to Herbert Cann, son of Mrs. Herbert L. Cann of 5833 Julian avenue, was announced at a luncheon bridge given yesterday by Miss Edith Cann at the Missouri Athletic Association. The announcement was made in the form of a silhouette of Miss Eastin and Mr. Cann placed on a calendar to which a rose was attached. These were handed out with the talley cards at the finish of the luncheon.

Miss Eastin is a student of art. Mr. Cann is an alumnus of Washington University; member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Alpha Delta Sigma. He also is a member of the Missouri Athletic Association.

Trigg-Champ Engagement.

An interesting engagement, announced today, is that of Miss Elizabeth Trigg, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Trigg of 4901 Northland drive, and Norman B. Champ, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. M. Champ of the Brown road. Miss Trigg was educated at the University of Oklahoma, and spent last year traveling abroad with her mother. Mr. Champ is a member of Bellerive and Sunset Hill Country Clubs, and the Missouri Athletic Association.

Miss Bessie Haldeman— A Bride in New York

A wedding of interest to St. Louis and Louisville society took place in New York Thursday when Miss Bessie Haldeman, daughter of Mr. John Avery Haldeman of Louisville, Ky., became the bride of Craig Culbertson of New York, formerly of Louisville. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in the presence of the immediate families.

Miss Haldeman is a sister of Mrs. George R. Wendling of 6301 Pershing avenue, who with Mr. Wendling went to New York for the wedding, and Mrs. George Leib of Burlingame, Cal., who before her marriage in Paris two years ago was Miss Isabel Haldeman.

Mr. Culbertson is a member of the Pendennis and Wynn Stay Clubs of Louisville. He is prominently identified in athletics and was in the air service during the war. Mr. Culbertson is engaged in the brokerage business in New York. As a boy he lived in Powee Valley near Louisville and was one of the original characters in Annie Fellows Johnston's children's books, the "Little Colonel" series.

Mr. Culbertson and his bride, who have frequently visited in St. Louis, sailed immediately after the ceremony for Nassau in the Bahamas for a six weeks' wedding trip. They will make their home in New York. Additional guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Culbertson, parents of the bridegroom, Mrs. Haldeman and Miss Belle Haldeman.

Mr. and Mrs. George G. Badger of 5121 Wabada avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lucille Catherine, to Dr. Robert Lyndon Holcombe of Pontiac, Ill. Miss Bessie Haldeman, A Bride in New York

A wedding of interest to St. Louis and Louisville society took place in New York Thursday when Miss Bessie Haldeman, daughter of Mrs. John Avery Haldeman of Louisville, Ky., became the bride of Craig Culbertson of New York, formerly of Louisville. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in the presence of the immediate families.

Miss Haldeman is a sister of Mrs. George R. Wendling of 4501 Pershing avenue, who with Mr. Wendling went to New York for the wedding, and Mrs. George C. Leib of Burlingame, Cal., who before her marriage in Paris two years ago was Miss Isabel Haldeman.

Mr. Culbertson is a member of the Pendennis and Wynn Stay Club of Louisville. He is prominently identified in athletics and was in the air service during the war. Mr. Culbertson is engaged in the brokerage business in New York. As a boy he lived in Pewee Valley near Louisville and was one of the original characters in Annie Fellows Johnston's children's books, the "Little Colonel" series.

Mr. Culbertson and his bride, who have frequently visited in St. Louis, sailed immediately after the ceremony for Nassau in the Bahamas for a six weeks' wedding trip. They will make their home in New York. Additional guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Culbertson, parents of the bridegroom, Mrs. Haldeman and Miss Belle Haldeman.

Mr. and Mrs. George G. Badger of 5121 Wabada avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lucille Catherine, to Dr. Robert Lyndon Holcombe of Pocahontas, Ill. Dr. Holcombe is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin, the University of Wisconsin Medical School and Rush Medical College of Chicago, and member of Phi Beta Pi Fraternity. The wedding will take place in the early spring.

Parties, Dances, Luncheons and Other Affairs

Mrs. Charles Wiggins of 17 Portland place gave a theater party followed by a supper dance Monday evening complimentary to her debutante niece, Miss Elizabeth Scudder, daughter of Charles L. Scudder of 4400 McPherson avenue. The guest list was made up of the following debutantes and their escorts: Miss Gertrude Catlin, Miss Martha Love, Miss Clarissa Dyer, Miss Ruth McElroy, Miss Mary Carter, Miss Elizabeth Allen, Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, Miss Anna Kannard Wallace and Miss Margaret Rumsey; Frederick D. Gardner Jr., Jack Gordon, William Brown Goltra, Moel Carpenter, Erwin Niedringhaus, William Weld, Rolla W. Streett, John Hadley and Gaylord Fauntleroy. The chaperons were Mr. and Mrs. Edward E. Love, Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Edmunds and Mr. and Mrs. Wiggins.

Miss Scudder will be the guest of honor at a dinner dance which her aunt, Mrs. John Fowler of 35 Westmoreland place, has planned to give immediately after Easter.

Mrs. Theron E. Catlin of Brentmoor will give a luncheon Tuesday in honor of Miss Genevieve Barrickle, a debutante of the winter, who is making her home with Mrs. John S. Lehmann of 77 Aberdeen place.

Cards were received last week for a dinner to be given Tuesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Low and Mrs. Low's sister, Mrs. Nettie Jacobs, for a dinner bridge Tuesday evening at their apartment in the Senate.

Miss Ruth McElroy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Finley McElroy of 23 Portland place, will give a dinner followed by dancing the evening of Jan. 21 at her home. Miss McElroy is planning to spend the late winter in Phoenix, Ariz.

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil A. Lewis of the Ladue road will entertain informally before the imperial ball, which will take place Jan. 14.

Miss Christine Gempp, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Gempp of the Sappington road, was hostess Monday afternoon at a luncheon. The following guests enjoyed Miss Gempp's hospitality: Miss Maude Miller Greett, Miss Anita Bowling, Miss Carolyn Smith, Miss Elizabeth Cahill Gray, Miss Carter Davis, Miss Betty Corby, Miss Laura Capen, Miss Mary Elise Lammert, Miss Dorothy Conzelman, Miss Mary Frances Fisk and Miss Ruth Curby.

A luncheon will be given tomorrow by the Service League of the Second Presbyterian Church, Taylor avenue and Westminster Place, at 1 o'clock. The organization has three lines of activity, serving school lunches, helping the blind and helping Greeley Memorial Church. Each division will report.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Block of 5575 Waterman avenue will be at home to their friends this evening from 8 to 11 in honor of their daughter, Virginia Emelle, and Simon Wolfe Eichel, whose marriage took place Dec. 23.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Frank of 5793 Westminster Place, will be at home informally this evening from 8 to 11 o'clock to celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary.

Mrs. R. L. Maupin Jr. of 7159 Alamo avenue gave a bridge party Wednesday night. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Edward McHenry, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Proetz and Mr. and Mrs. Wayman Williams.

Miss Ethel Louise Wright, star of the Rose Marie Co. at the Shubert Rialto last week, was entertained by the St. Joseph Alumnae at a luncheon at Hotel Chase Thursday noon. Miss Clare McDonald is president of the alumnae. Hostesses were Mrs. H. S. Ghio, Miss Nan McDonald, Miss Irene Daues and Miss Alma Meyer.

Following the luncheon there was an informal reception at Fontbonne College, Pennsylvania and Wydown boulevards, the new educational institution of the Sisters of St. Joseph.

Among Christmas week parties was a dance given by Mrs. Peter Viviano at her home, 6948 Washington boulevard, for her daughters, Miss Grace and Miss Vita, the evening of Dec. 30. Sixty young people made up the guest list.

A social gathering of members of the St. Louis University faculty and their wives will take place Tuesday night at the new university gymnasium on West Pine boulevard, near Grand boulevard. A short program will be followed by an informal dance. The St. Louis University band and the orchestra will play.

Mr. and Mrs. William Blumenfeld will receive their friends in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, Sunday evening, Jan. 16, at the Bevo Mill Rathskeller from 8:30 to 11:30.

The first student dance to be held in the new gymnasium of St. Louis University will be given Thursday under the auspices of the University Conclave.

The Columbian Club has announced luncheons for its women members on Jan. 20, Feb. 10, and Feb. 24. The luncheons will be served at the club at 1 p. m.

Miss Mary Grace Sherman of 2418 Cook avenue gave a bridge luncheon for a number of her friends the afternoon of Dec. 28 in the Oriental room of the Forest Park Hotel.

Crane-Crunden Church Wedding Largely Attended

St. Bartholomew's Church, New York, Decorated With Lilies — Reception at Sherry's Follows.

A wedding of interest to St. Louis and New York society took place Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock, when Miss Christine Wallace Crane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Seabury Crane of Park avenue, New York, and Cedarhurst, L. I., became the bride of Arthur Chittenden Crunden, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Crunden, of 4426 Westminster place.

The services were read in St. Bartholomew's Church, New York, in the presence of several thousand guests. The church was elaborately decorated for the occasion. Great vases of lilies and potted plants adorned the altar, and large standards of lilies were placed on either side of the chancel rail. The bride and groom knelt on white satin cushions. The pews were marked by clusters of lilies.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white satin, trimmed in flounces of rose point lace edged in pearls. Her train fell from the waist line and her tulle veil was worn with a headdress of rose point. She carried a bouquet of white orchids, orange blossoms and lilies of the valley.

Her attendants were Miss Catherine Louise Crunden of St. Louis, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Helen Murphy and Mrs. Charles Morrell Jr., both of New York. Their gowns were of green and gold silk, made bouffant, and their hats were of maline to match. They carried arm bouquets of green orchids and yellow roses.

Mr. Crunden had his brother, Walter Crunden, of St. Louis, as his best man. The groomsmen and ushers were Ethan Allen Hitchcock Shepley, Harold McMillan Bixby, both of this city; Leicester Arnold of Chicago, Maynard Ivison and Roger Mellish of New York, and Charles Morrell Jr.

A reception was held in the ball room and ballroom at Sherry's following the ceremony. The rooms were decorated to simulate a garden, and the bridal party received under a bower of smilax, laurel and lilies. The members of the wedding party were seated at a table which was decorated to give the impression of a garden party, and was embellished by parasols of pink roses and lilacs.

Mr. Crunden and his bride sailed Wednesday for Italy, to be gone until March. They will make their home in St. Louis. The bride is a member of the New York Chapter of the Junior League. She was educated at Rosemary School, Greenwich, Conn., and was presented formally to society several seasons ago. Mr. Crunden is a member of the St. Louis Country Club, the Racquet and University Clubs. He was graduated in 1918 from Yale University.

Mr. and Mrs. I. Davis of 5077 Enright avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Rose, to Sam Goldstein of East St. Louis. The announcement was made at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Davis Sunday evening.

Mrs. Croak was, until January 4, Miss Virginia Bergs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Bergs of 3237 Copelin avenue. —Kandeler.

Mrs. D'Oench was Miss Mabel Nichols, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Nichols, before her marriage December 30. —Schweig

One of the most elaborate weddings at the Columbian Club this winter was that of Miss Jean Levy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Levy of 5915 Lindell boulevard, and Mr. Harris, which took place January 3 —Kandeler

Alliance Francaise Meeting.

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Georgette Study.

Tea for Edgar Shelton, Symphony Soloist

EDGAR SHELTON, piano soloist on last Sunday's Symphony Orchestra program, was honor guest at a tea given for him after the concert by Mr. and Mrs. J. Roy Stockton at their home, 7262 Colgate avenue, University City. A short program was given by Mr. Shelton and Thelma Haymen Carroll, accompanied by Mrs. Walter Vredenburgh. Mrs. F. C. Papendick and Mrs. George Lamke served at the tea table, which was decorated in yellow chrysanthemums, and candles to match.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Griffin of Little Rock, Ark.; Mrs. W. P. Shelton, Willard Shelton, Miss Vivian Evans, Mr. and Mrs. William Friel, Mr. and Mrs. George Devereux, Dr. and Mrs. G. B. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hindle, Dr. and Mrs. Grayson Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Frei Jr., Mr. and Mrs. George Lamke, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Papendick, John Halk, Miss Elizabeth Cueny, Mrs. William E. Burton and Mrs. Pauline Dean.

Luncheon to Follow Installation.

A luncheon of the Woman's Club of Christ Church Cathedral, will be given Thursday noon, following the installation of officers for the year. The officers are: President, Miss Eleanor Schwarzer, vice president, Mrs. S. Mitchell; treasurer, Mrs. William Peters; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. J. Connors and recording secretary, Mrs. C. Rugger. The club has all day meetings every Thursday in Schuyler Memorial House. There are a number of sections: Cooking, sewing, dramatics, choral, astronomy, current events and folk dancing.

Miss Evelyn Guy, daughter of William Evans Guy of 10 Portland place, and Miss Carolyn Bailey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Bailey of 4556 West Pine boulevard, have returned to New York to continue their studies. Miss Bailey will return to Columbia University. Miss Guy will continue her art course and will be with her sister, Mrs. Henry Fenimore Cooper of New York.

Miss Edith Whittemore, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Churchill Whittemore of Hotel Chase, sailed yesterday from New York for France. She will embark on another steamer at Marseilles for Ceylon, India. Miss Whittemore will spend some time in India, going from there to Egypt and returning to Paris late in the spring. Mrs. Whittemore, who has been making her home with her daughter in Paris, may remain in St. Louis until spring. She passed the holidays in Denver, Colo.

Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Van Brunt of Bronxville, N. Y., formerly of St. Louis, who have been the guests of Mrs. Van Brunt's mother, Mrs. Henry L. Morrill of 5272 Westminster place, have returned to their home.

Mrs. Winston Churchill and her son, John Churchill, who have been visiting the former's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Louis M. Hall of Hotel Chase, departed last week for their home in Boston.

Miss Emily Westwood Lewis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Lewis of 15 Hortense place, spent the holidays in England with her cousin, Mrs. John Eaton Monins, and Mr. Monins, at their home in Kent. Miss Lewis, who is attending school in Switzerland, has resumed her studies. Mrs. Monins was Miss Margaret Carter.

Miss Isabelle Hopkinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hopkinson of Boston, Mass., who has been the holiday guest of Miss Martha Gellhorn, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George Gellhorn of 4366 McPherson avenue, has returned with Miss Gellhorn to Bryn Mawr College.

Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee I. Niedringhaus of 29 Portland place, has returned from Chicago, where she has been visiting Miss Elizabeth Drake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Drake. Miss Niedringhaus attended the debut ball of Miss Drake and her cousin, Miss Helen Farnum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Farnum of Chicago. Both Miss Drake and Miss Farnum attended Miss Niedringhaus' coming-out ball at the St. Louis Country Club in November.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. G. Meyer of 5503 Clemens avenue will return home tomorrow from New Orleans, La., where they spent the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Garrison and their daughter, Mrs. Frances Garrison McHenry, are spending January in Paris. They will go to the Riviera from Paris late this month, and from there will go to Egypt.

A DEED YOU CAN TRUST

According to recent revelations in the press, some deeds of trust appear to be decidedly untrustworthy.

Having your eyes tested at regular intervals is a decidedly good deed. It prevents many minor vision defects developing into grave complaints, because you get proper Glasses in time to correct your particular vision defect before serious consequences ensue.

For over 35 years I have specialized exclusively in the relief and prevention of eyestrain headaches and other annoying symptoms of defective vision solely by means of corrective Glasses. My charges are eminently reasonable.

Touchy Corns!

Lift Right Off with Fingers—No Pain!

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy, so simple—Why wait?

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops hurting; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers—without any pain or soreness. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to rid your feet of every hard corn, soft corn and corn between the toes and calluses—Try it!

A Charming Colonial Chair

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. For only 75 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

"A New Skin In 3 Days"

Get Rid of Your Pimples, Blackheads, Acne, Oily Skin, Wrinkles, Tan, Freckles, Unsightly Blemishes and Marks of Age This New Way.

READ THIS FREE OFFER!

Worry no more over your "terrible" skin and complexion! Forget your failures with lotions, creams, creams, powders, massage, steaming, peeling and "cover-ups." Throw away your rubber masks, plasters and beauty makeshifts. Because—here's where you get a new, true skin! Your blackheads, pimples, large pores, freckles, tan, sallow complexion, surface wrinkles, blemishes and signs of approaching age, go, definitely—"because they're OFF!"

Most astonishing German discovery in the history of beauty culture. All explained in an amazing free book called "A New Skin in 3 Days." Learn how to do at home yourself, what foreign beauty doctors have charged enormous prices for. Make your own skin and complexion the envy of all who behold it. Send your name and address only—no money!

MAKE YOUR FACE YOUR FORTUNE!

Hundreds of men and women are now doing it at home—in the quiet of their own rooms—without the knowledge of their most intimate friends, entering in a few days with a new, soft velvety clear, spotless youth-like skin on face, neck, arms, hands or any part of the body where a new skin is desired. It's astonishing—almost beyond belief! Send now—the book is absolutely free to readers of this paper. Address Marvo Beauty Laboratories, Dept. 48-J, No. 1700 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

DIAMONDS COMBINED WITH

Colored Jewels

THE beautiful harmony of Diamonds with Sapphires or Emeralds—each enhancing the other—is strikingly demonstrated in these examples from our stocks:

Splendid Oriental Sapphire, emerald-cut, centered between two square-cut diamonds. There are 34 lesser diamonds in the Platinum across-the-finger Ring. $1480

Specially cut Emerald, flanked by two Baguette diamonds, centered among 12 "rays" formed of 36 matched diamonds. All Platinum mounting. $600

A most unusual Ring, utilizing an Emerald and similarly cut diamond of same size, edged with two square-cut diamonds and two square-cut Emeralds. 24 other diamonds enrich the Platinum mounting. $900

Sapphire solitaire, beautifully facetted, centered among 14 diamonds in a graceful Platinum ring. $175

City Hospital were remembered, and also members of the Old Ladies' Home at Bethesda. A committee, of which Mrs. C. D. Toler is chairman and which acts in conjunction with the Board of Children's Guardians, provided treats and toys for 24 children.

The library committee at City Hospital, of which Mrs. John C. Sherman is chairman, distributes books weekly to the patients. Mrs. John Randle and her public school lunch committee serve luncheons to children each Monday. Two sewing units of the section, under chairmanship of Mrs. J. H. Herzog at Bethesda Home and of Mrs. J. Daniel Schierbaum at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, also are very active. Mrs. O. T. Upshaw and her automobile committee convey children of various institutions to and from clinics.

St. Louis Council National Congress of Parents and Teachers, will meet Thursday at 2 p. m. in the assembly room of the Board of Education Building. Definite plans will be announced regarding the booth which the council has taken for the Woman's National Exposition, to be held at the New Coliseum Jan. 29 to Feb. 9. All organizations in the council are asked to dispose of as many of these tickets as they possibly can, and invite their friends to visit the Parent-Teacher Association booth. Preceding the council meeting there will be a parliamentary law drill at 1:45 p. m. Presidents and delegates are urged to attend. Visitors will be welcomed.

The Carondelet Women's Club was held Monday evening at the Carondelet Branch Library. The president, Mrs. Edward A. Michel, presided. The topic was "Art." Miss Cornelia Maury's subject was "Etchings," and 20 of her own etching were displayed. Blair Ridington spoke on "The Architecture of the Orient." Dryden Carver sang a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. Alice Richeson.

The Current Topics Club met Tuesday at the Security National Bank. Mrs. L. L. Renfrow spoke in the interest of the Woman's National Exposition. Among current topics read were "Know St. Louis" by Mrs. M. Heinicke, "One Hundred and Twenty-two Women to Be in Legislatures This Year," by Mrs. W. W. Sanders, and "Improving Our River Front" by Mrs. E Weidman. A short parliamentary law drill followed. The next meeting will be Feb. 1.

The Council of Jewish Women will hold an open meeting tomorrow at Temple Israel. Syud Hossain, editor of the "New Orient," former editor, in India, of the Bombay Chronicle, will speak at 3:30 p. m. Guests will be welcomed.

The regular meeting of the Mothers' Club of Soldan High School will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow. Mrs. Elias Michael will speak on "The Charter of the Board of Education and How It Operates." David Kaplan will play a group of violin solos, and Louis Wertheimer will talk on "Current School Events." All mothers of Soldan students are invited.

Delphi Delphian Chapter met at Community Center, Monday, Mrs. Harry L. Salisbury, president, presiding. The topic was "The Louvre," under leadership of Mrs. R. G. Torrance, and the following members took part in the discussion: Mrs. S. C. Dahman, Mrs. T. B. Brown, Mrs. Harry L. Salisbury Mrs. H. W. Schmale, Mrs. L. A. Brandenburger, Mrs. P. C. Floyd, Mrs. Bertha Voit and Mrs. M. K Gillespie. The next meeting will be Jan. 17.

A special meeting of the True Kindred Conclave was called last month for the purpose of being constituted. On June 15, 1926, the St. Louis conclave was organized by Mrs. George Byrde Heck, and worked under dispensation until constituted. The True Kindred Conclave is a Mormon affiliation.

Mrs. Gertrude B. Myers, worthy supreme commander for the United States and Canada; Mrs. Molly D Lawrence, worthy grand commander for the State of Missouri; Mrs Izora Mae Lyons, acting grand marshall; Mrs. Sally Atteberry, acting grand chaplain, and other visiting officers performed the ceremony Hereafter the conclave will be known as St. Louis Conclave No. 8.

Mrs. Heck, first worthy commander and organizer, of St. Louis, Mo., was presented with flowers by Mrs. Alys Dameron Weed, Mrs. Elizabeth England and Mrs. Mary Cornelius White. She was also presented with a corsage composed of the O. E. S. colors by Mrs. Roselle Schultz.

The True Kindred dates back to the seventeenth century. George Washington and Benjamin Franklin were members. The conclave here has been very active in charity work. Among its beneficiaries are the "Shriners" Crippled Children's Hospital, Masonic Orphans' Home and Episcopal Orphans' Home.

St. Louis Conclave No. 8 will have an installation open to the public Jan. 24.

The Cultus Club will meet with Mrs. Minnie Kitchen, 3906 Castleman avenue, the afternoon of Jan. 13. Mrs. Fred Hackman will conduct the program and her subject will be "The Life of Queen Elizabeth."

Dandruff Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails at Sherman Center at 10 a. m. Wednesday. Mrs. Scott Miller will be the leader. Her subject will be "Rome."

The Bay View Reading Club met at the home of Mrs. E. B. Watson, 4224 Washington boulevard, Jan. 3. Mrs. Charlotte Buchanan spoke on "Gladstone, the Statesman."

Others contributing to the program were Mrs. W. H. Bain, Mrs. L. C. Stocking, Mrs. W. W. Farmer and Mrs. Ernest Evans. The next meeting will be held Jan. 17 at the home of Mrs. Farmer, 5802 Westminster place.

The Carpe Diem Literary Club met Jan. 3 with Mrs. L. F. Woolston, 1732 Del Norte avenue. Mrs. Frank Rodman gave a review of "Every Soul Has Its Song" by Fannie Hurst. Mrs. J. E. Martin offered a group of songs, and Mrs. Kenneth Buchanan gave soprano and piano numbers.

The St. Louis Central College Club will meet Thursday at the home of Mrs. D. A. Ruebel, 6146 Westminster place. Mrs. Charles Prescott will be the assistant hostess.

Magnolia Branch, Chapter No. 375, O. E. S., will install officers for the year 1927 tomorrow evening at 8 p. m.

Mrs. Adele Wissmath, Worthy Grand Matron, will be the installing officer. Mrs. Mamie Wise, Worthy Matron; Lloyd Thompson, Worthy Patron and Mrs. Frances Sanford, Associate Matron, are the leading officers for the year.

The St. Louis branch of L. A. P. W. held its first 1927 meeting Monday in Vandervoort's auditorium. The members gathered at luncheon in Vandervoort's luncheon room. After luncheon the business meeting was held at 1:30 p. m.

The meetings for the remainder of the year will be held in Vandervoort's auditorium, with a table reserved for "the St. Louis Owls," the first Monday in each month in the luncheon.

The election of officers resulted as follows: S. Louise Marsh, president; Mrs. Frank P. Hays, first vice president; Mrs. Katherine Clemens, second vice president; Mary C. White, secretary and treasurer; Mrs. Dotia T. Cooney, auditor; Mrs. Julia S. Bacon, librarian; Mrs. Alys D. Weed, historian.

Mrs. A. Weed gave a short review of Mrs. Earnest Seaton's (national president) book, "Yes, Lady Sahib."

Mrs. Hays was appointed chairman of the By-laws Committee.

The current topics section of the Wednesday Club, Mrs. Ivan Lee Holt, chairman, will have as its subject, "The Present Situation in China," with Mrs. Frank Y. Gladney as leader, Saturday, Jan. 15, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. The speaker of the day will be Miss Mary Elizabeth Wood of the Central China University, Wuchang, China. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m.

The Smith College students who are spending their Christmas vacation in St. Louis were entertained Jan. 4 by the Smith College Club of St. Louis at a luncheon in the Daniel Boone room of the Statler Hotel. Mr. H. A. Meyerhoff, professor of geology at Smith, and Miss Julia Hafner of 24 Windermere place, a member of the class of 1928, spoke on the recent changes in the rules and curriculum of the college.

The Cornelia Greene Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, met at Forest Park Hotel Wednesday, with Mrs. C. P. Johnson and Mrs. C. A. Wilcox as hostesses. Mrs. John Trigg Moss and Mrs. F. W. Green were elected delegates to the National D. A. R. Congress, which will meet in Washington, D. C., in April. The alternates are: Mrs. Frank Nuf, Mrs. Eugene Taylor, Mrs. Ida Miller, Mrs. J. L. Carney, Miss Essie Matlack, Mrs. L. M. Ottofy, Mrs. Ray A. Burns, Mrs. Ray Havens, Mrs. Justus M. Pfaff and Mrs. Lawrence McDaniel. Mrs. William Baer sung.

The regular monthly meeting of the Rosati-Kain Alumnae Association will be held in the Cathedral School Auditorium, Maryland and Newstead avenues, at 2:30 p. m. today. Miss Loretto Mueller, newly appointed chairman of social activities, will announce plans for the annual dance to be held the latter part of February. The president of the Rosati-Kain Alumnae Dramatic Club will present a report regarding the play to be presented by the Dramatic Club this spring. A special entertainment feature, a one-act play, will be presented by Miss Audrey MacDonald, Miss Marie Gebkin and Miss Catherine Darmady of the Dramatic Club. This will be an open meeting and members may invite guests.

The St. Louis Circle, International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, will entertain with a card party at the home of Mrs. Eugene A. Fusz, 6925 Delmar avenue, University City, Jan. 19, at 2:30 p. m. Proceeds derived from the entertainment will be used to defray expenses of the Sight Conservation Classes being conducted in the parochial schools, of which Miss Catherine Gallagher is in charge. Mrs. Joseph Darst, regent of St. Louis Circle, as well as the other officers, are in charge of arrangements. The presidents of the various alumnae associations will assist Mrs. Fusz and Mrs. Darst in acting as hostesses.

The St. Louis Browning Society, under the leadership of Dr. William Lawrence Sullivan, will resume its bimonthly meetings Thursday afternoon at 3:45 o'clock in the parlors of the Church of the Messiah, Union boulevard and Enright avenue. The subjects to be considered are "Bishop Blougram" and "Prince Hohenstiel Schwagan."

The Tuxedo Club, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, met Tuesday with Mrs. W. H. Young of 5514 Pershing avenue. Mrs. G.

Defying Tradition

The man who has the moral courage to champion a principle differing from general opinion is the man who causes the THINKING PEOPLE to THINK MORE.

The world's outstanding characters are those who were NOT the "follow" kind.

They saw the errors of others and improved by them; they did their own thinking and originating; they were for advancement and uplift.

Tradition has no terrors for such men; they are of the class who studied and acted to benefit humanity.

New York Physician Gives Great Book to Public Free!

Explains Most Probable Cause of Your Sick Spells, Stomach and Intestinal Disorders and Tells What to Do. It Reveals Truths Ignored by Doctors and Why You Continue to Suffer Needlessly.

ILLUSTRATED WITH X-RAYS

AT LAST it is here—that book that reveals the mystery of stomach troubles and their associated disorders that have kept millions of men and women in doubt, suffering and doctoring for long periods without relief. And it is free for the asking!

"The Inner Mysteries of the Stomach" comes from the pen of an authority on stomach disorders who graduated from the University Medical College of New York in 1890. Its free distribution will aid the health authorities of every city and town in the United States in checking the appallingly high death rate due to ignorance and neglect of stomach disorders that lead to serious diseases.

The book is finely illustrated with X-ray photos revealing facts on "guesswork" diagnosis in the treatment of the sick and afflicted, and why you do not get well and strong. If you value your health and life, and wish to be free from your stomach disorders and troubles arising therefrom, a copy of this valuable book, "The Inner Mysteries of the Stomach," will be mailed to you promptly, postpaid and absolutely free if you write a letter or postcard asking for it to Dr. F. R. Ward, Dept. 17-N, No. 241 West 72d Street, New York, N. Y. Readers of this paper should send without delay as the demand for this great book is enormous.

The Ensee Study Club will hold the first meeting of the new year at the home of Mrs. D. A. Nylander, 5943 De Giverville avenue, at 1 p. m. tomorrow. Instead of the usual roll call, Mrs. Virginia Kerr will give a short paper on "France," followed by a review of "In a Shantung Garden," by Mrs. Chester Reflinger and a paper on "Switzerland" by Miss Mabel Johnson.

The Welfare Committee of the Eighth District, Federation of Women's Clubs, will meet Thursday at 10:30 a. m. at the Good Will Factory, 1730 North Thirteenth street.

The Applied Education Committee of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, Eighth District, will meet with the Legislation Committee at the Town Club, at 11 a. m. Tuesday. Charles Banks, Superintendent of Public Schools of University City, will speak on the proposed educational bills before the Missouri Legislature.

Chapter O. of P. E. O. was entertained at luncheon at the home of Mrs. R. L. Carter, 6621 Pershing avenue, Monday. Mrs. H. C. Gonther and Miss Kathryne May Farmer were the assistant hostesses. The president, Mrs. John Burch, conducted the business meeting. The program was in charge of Mrs. I. R. Kelso and the Rev. B. A. Abbott, editor of the Christian Evangelist, spoke on "Miriam and Deborah." The guests for the afternoon were Mrs. B. A. Abbott and Mrs. L. C. Fralez.

The midyear open meeting of the Board of Religious Organizations will be held in the auditorium of the new Y. M. C. A. building, Sixteenth and Locust streets, Friday at 2:30 p. m. Miss Mary Elizabeth Wood, organizer of Boone Library at Central China University, will be the guest of the board and will speak on "Condition of Women in China." Tea will be served and an opportunity will be given to inspect the building, which was recently opened to the public.

The monthly meeting of the Margaret A. E. McLure Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will be held at City Club at 2 p. m. tomorrow, with Mrs. Thomas Browne as hostess, assisted by Mrs. Otto Furbinger, Mrs. M. A. Breen and Mrs. V. P. De Loome. Plans for the annual valentine ball, which will be given at Hotel Chase, Feb. 11, will be formulated and reports from the various committees will be given. Mrs. Brent Williams is made general chairman of the ball this year and Mrs. E. W. Murphy will serve as matron of honor.

The South Side Women's Study Council, at its annual Christmas party to the girls of Euclid House, presented a program, after which each girl received a useful gift. The next regular meeting of the council will be held Tuesday at 8 p. m. at Barr Branch Library.

This year the "Lives of American Women" will be the topic of study for the year and those of Jane Addams and Dolly Madison have been chosen for the next meeting.

The annual dinner and parish meeting of the Church of the Holy Communion will be held Tuesday evening in the parish house, 2809 Washington boulevard.

Mrs. W. B. Knight of 6106 Kingsbury boulevard was Book Club hostess Monday. "The Family and Its Problems in Fiction" was the subject for discussion. Mrs. J. C. Browne gave the current topic, "The Bishops' Crusade," after which Mrs. N. R. Donnell reviewed Parish's "Perennial Bachelor," and

Activities of Women's Clubs

Mrs. G. W. Hendrick reviewed Fairbank's "The Smiths."

Miss Margaret Flenniken, secretary of the educational department of the National Board, Young Women's Christian Association, was guest of honor at the dedication service of the new cafeteria building of the St. Louis "Y," at 2526 Washington boulevard, last Sunday afternoon. Miss Flenniken pronounced the building the most attractive in the country. Mrs. Robert L. Hedges, chairman of the Cafeteria Committee of the Y. W. C. A., presided at the meeting, when the principal address was given by the Rev. Karl M. Block.

Following a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Young Women's Christian Association Monday, an informal luncheon was held at the cafeteria, attended by members of the board, as follows: Mrs. J. J. Fisher, Mrs. W. K. Bixby, Mrs. J. Porter Tirrill, Mrs. Thomas C. Craig, Mrs. Hayward H. Gatch, Mrs. Robert L. Hedges, Mrs. Louis B. Woodward, Mrs. L. B. Pendleton, Mrs. James H. McCabe, Mrs. Thomas L. Anderson, Mrs. Ben F. Edwards, Miss Mary R. Lee and Miss Mary McElroy.

Mrs. Samuel C. Davis, a former member of the board, was a guest of honor at the luncheon.

The Committee of Arrangements for the annual meeting and banquet of the association, of which Mrs. J. Porter Tirrill is chairman, met at the Central Building, 1411 Locust street, Friday, and formulated plans for the meeting, to be held Jan. 29, at 6 p. m. Assisting Mrs. Tirrill on the committee will be Mrs. Ben F. Edwards, Mrs. Louis B. Woodward, Mrs. Robert L. Hedges, Mrs. W. K. Bixby and Mrs. James H. McCabe.

In observance of Foreign Missions month, the women who conduct the friendly correspondence with the foreign missionaries on the field will be at home to the Presbyterian women of St. Louis in the parlors of West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues, Friday afternoon. Presidents of auxiliaries will meet at 2:30 o'clock, and will form a Reception Committee for the social hour preceding the address of the afternoon, which will be given by C. B. Fisher of Hamadan, Persia, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. S. A. Colle, dean of foreign correspondence, will preside. Mrs. W. S. Faris is secretary of the Southern District.

The Fontbonne Mothers' Club will give a card party, at Fontbonne College, Wydown boulevard and Big Bend road, Saturday. Automobiles will meet the University and Olive cars at Big Bend avenue and the city limits car at Wydown boulevard from 2 to 3 p. m.

The Legislative Committee of the Eighth District Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs will hold its regular meeting Jan. 12 at 11 a. m. at the Town Club. Proposed educational legislation will be discussed.

The Tuesday Literary Club held its first meeting of the year Jan. 4 at the Artists' Guild. Mrs. M. S. Eames was the leader. Mrs. Fred Armstrong read a paper on, "American Art and Its Growth" and Mrs. Samuel Wiggins discussed "Early Artists." Mrs. Eames talked on "Art and Craft" and illustrated her talk by an exhibition of her work and work of Washington University students. Miss Dorothy Jacks, soprano and Miss Dorothy Davidson, pianist gave several musical numbers.

The Home Economics Club of St. Louis will meet for dinner Friday evening at 6 o'clock at the Town Club. T. J. Hohner will speak on "House Planning."

Missouri Circle No. 56, Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, held a meeting at Jefferson Memorial Thursday afternoon, Jan. 6, at which time the following newly elected officers were installed: Mrs. George Saxe, president; Mrs. Clay Platt, senior vice president; Mrs. Genevieve Pim, junior vice president; Mrs. Martin E. Carlson, treasurer; Mrs. Brydie Kersten, secretary; Mrs. George Guider, chaplain; Mrs. Stanley M. Riggs, patriotic instructor; Mrs. Mabel Hudson, registrar; Mrs. Edna Lash, conductor; Mrs. Violet Zimmersheide, assistant conductor; Mrs. Bertha Sullivan, guard; Mrs. Marie Rouk, assistant guard; Mrs. Augustan McReynolds, musician; Mrs. Glenn Turner, corresponding secretary and chairman of press. After the ceremony a program was presented at which time the circle presented Mrs. Stanley M. Riggs, the retiring president, a jewel with diamond pendant, she having been the charter president. On Friday evening, Jan. 7, the circle presented an American flag to the Woman's Benefit Association, through Mrs. Stanley M. Riggs, patriotic instructor, who was presented by Mrs. George Saxe, the newly elected president.

The Business and Professional Women's Club of St. Louis met Tuesday evening at the Town Club. Several new members were admitted. Mrs. Orra Carrol presided. The next meeting, a social one, will be held Jan. 18 at the Town Club. The program is in charge of Miss Margaret Burke.

The regular meeting of the Edward H. Long School Mothers' Circle, will be held at the school Thursday, Jan. 13, at 1:30 p. m.

TheUandi Literary Club will meet Jan. 13 at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. George N. Bishop, Richmond Heights. The roll call will be "Composers of Germany." A paper, "The Home of the Opera," will be read by Mrs. Everett Ramsey. "Famous Cities and Rivers," a paper, will conclude the program.

CONVENT GARDEN APARTMENTS SOLD TO A SYNDICATE

New 7-Story Structure at Pershing and Taylor Has Accommodations for 102 Tenants.

PURCHASE PRICE ABOUT $700,000

New Building Projected for Tenth and Market Corner as Quarters for Daily Record.

By Berry Moore.

A syndicate has concluded negotiations with the F. J. Cornwell Real Estate Co. for the purchase of the new Convent Garden apartments at the northeast corner of Pershing and Taylor avenues. The price involved is approximately $700,000, it is understood.

The building, which is now being completed, is seven stories in height, with red matt brick exterior, trimmed with terra cotta. Construction is absolutely fireproof. A lobby, accessible from both Pershing and Taylor, forms an attractive feature.

The building is divided into 102 apartments of various arrangement. Approximately 70 per cent of the apartments is rented. Annual rentals will aggregate $90,000 when the entire building is occupied.

The plan is such that it is possible to obtain a single apartment with a buffet in kitchen, an apartment with living room, kitchenette and breakfast room, or an apartment with living room, sun parlor, kitchenette and breakfast room. All apartments have a large dressing room, with either a double or twin beds, hardwood floors. Refrigeration, gas, electricity and elevator service are furnished. There is a 50-car garage in connection.

Built Other Hotels.

The identity of the purchasing syndicate is withheld, pending incoporation papers. This sale, involving about $750,000, is regarded as a notably auspicious beginning for the new years.

The building was erected by the F. J. Cornwell Real Estate Co., of 107 North Seventh street, which built the Melbourne, Forest Park Hotel, Kenrick Square apartments and other structures of this type.

The Kenrick Square apartments, occupying a commanding site at Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue, were sold to a syndicate headed by Stanley Epstein at a reported consideration of $750,000.

Market Street Site Sold.

Another noteworthy sale was that of the southeast corner of Market and Tenth streets to the St. Louis Daily Record, through the C. M. McDonald Real Estate Co. The lot measures 62 feet on Market and 135 feet on Tenth street, and is occupied by an old two and three story building.

A handsome building is planned for the Daily Record, a local publication. Ethel Dubinsky was the seller, represented by Jack Dubinsky.

Market street is receiving attention with construction of the new $5,000,000 courthouse under way, and with plans for widening the thoroughfare assuming a definite status.

As was told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the erection at the northeast corner of Sixth and Market streets of a 12-story addition to the American Hotel at Seventh and Market street, is contingent only upon the widening of the thoroughfare. Speculation is keen as to whether this project also contemplates a theater.

BELLIS COMPANY SELLS BUNGALOWS AND FLATS

Milton B. Bellis, president of the Bellis Realty Co., reports the following sales:

1217 Claytonia terrace, a five-room bungalow on a lot 40 by 155 feet, sold for Robert Rodgers; vacant property on north line of Delmar avenue in University Park sold to Dean A. Elliott; 7015 South Grand avenue, a seven-room residence on a lot 26 by 156 feet, sold for Archie Parks; 4822 Cupples place, a four-room bungalow on a lot 21 by 131 feet, sold for Carl Richardson; 4107 West Lee avenue, a three and four room flat on a lot 30 by 140 feet, purchased by George Ketelsen; 5085 Millentz avenue, a seven-room bungalow on a lot 25 by 125 feet, purchased by Delbert Conrad from William C. Pope.

MARKET STREET BUILDING LEASED TO CHEMICAL FIRM

The Eagle Chemical and Manufacturing Co. has leased through Cornet & Zelbig the four-story building at 211 Market street. The same agents reported leasing the adjoining building at 213 Market recently to the Salomo Food Products Co.

CONTINENTAL LIFE HAS MANY INVESTMENTS HERE

E. P. Melson, president of the Continental Life Insurance Co., states that the monthly payment plan of loans to home builders, which was begun by that company some months ago, continues to be popular in St. Louis. Although the Continental operates in 36 States, and its investments are widely distributed, more than 20 per cent of the total of its invested assets in real estate loans has been placed in St. Louis and its suburbs.

Other attractive plans of payment besides the monthly plan are offered to the home buyer, and payments may be completed in as short a term as three years or extended over a period of 12 years.

Melson states that while reports show 1926 was not quite so favorable for life insurance generally as 1925, a tremendous volume again was placed by all companies. The written and examined business of the Continental Life for the year totals $41,837,732. The company is establishing general agencies in many important centers.

VIN-FRANK INVESTMENT CO. BUYS MORGAN STREET SITE

The Vin-Frank Investment Co. was represented by Perles & Stone in the Central National Bank Building in the purchase of property at 620 Morgan street from a client of the Mercantile Trust Co. The former owner is now a resident of New York.

The officers of the Vin-Frank Investment Co. are Vincent Gorly, president, and Frank Gorly, treasurer. The property was purchased for the convenience of their clients as an automobile parking place until the proposed widening of Morgan street, as set out in the bond issue, is completed.

It is said that many owners of Morgan street property are anxious to change the names of this street to Delmar boulevard, as these streets will connect at Spring avenue and complete a thoroughfare that will reach from University City to Third street.

The Gorly brothers also own 712 Washington avenue.

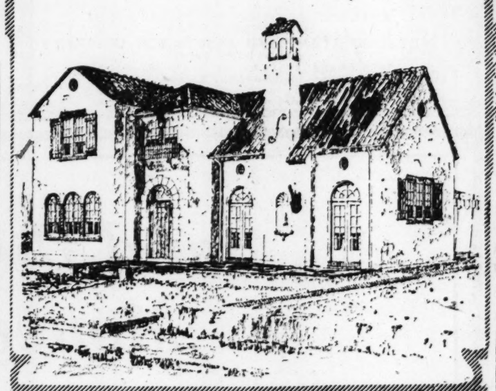
ITALIAN ARCHITECTURE FOR HOME IN COUNTY

A. B. M. Corrubia has completed the designs for a home in Hampton Park, St. Louis County, to be occupied by G. and S. Viviano. The architecture will be Italian in style. Brick, stone and tile will be used in construction.

The plan of the first floor consists of an entrance vestibule and hallway with spiral staircase, with dining room and living room to the left and right, respectively. A library opens off the hallway and this in turn opens onto a terrace in the rear. A kitchen and vaulted breakfast room are situated at the left end, while a sun room is located in the right end.

The second floor consists of a sitting room, eight bed rooms and four baths, linen rooms, etc. A large billiard room and servants' quarters are on the third floor.



New home under construction in Ellendale, just west of the Clayton road and Forest Park for A. Mayer.

ATLAS CEMENT CO., NOW HAS WESTERN HEADQUARTERS HERE

Chicago Office Records and Personnel Have Been Installed in New Quarters in Ambassador Theater Building.

The Atlas Portland Cement Co. has completed the removal to St. Louis of its main Western office, which was in Chicago. The Chicago office automatically has become a branch.

The new headquarters occupy a large section of the fourteenth floor of the Ambassador Theater Building, Seventh and Locust streets. The personnel of the Chicago office has been brought here with its records.

The company has plants at Hannibal, Mo.; Independence, Kan., and Leeds, Ala., which are under the supervision of the Western headquarters. Offices in Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha and Birmingham are operated as branches of the St. Louis headquarters.

The geographical position of St. Louis, together with the proximity of the plants mentioned, was the incentive that prompted the company to establish headquarters here. H. M. Scott is the Western sales manager.

The Eastern headquarters are in New York, with branches in Philadelphia, Boston and Buffalo, and plants at Northampton, Pa., and Hudson, N. Y.

Atlas cement is represented in the construction of many notable projects. The Panama Canal consumed 8,250,000 barrels of Atlas cement for its locks and dams. The Keokuk dam consumed 700,000 barrels. Almost a million barrels of Atlas cement wenet into the Wilson dam at Muscle Shoals.

It is estimated that the Santa Fe Railroad bridge, under construction at Fort Madison, will require 60,000 barrels of Atlas cement. Millions of barrels of Atlas cement also are being used in the construction of highways.

Paul Brown & Co., stock and bond brokers, has quarters on the first floor of the building.

SIGMA NU PHI RENTS SUITE IN APARTMENT

Unusual Venture Made by Law Fraternity of St. Louis University.

Sigma Nu Phi, law fraternity of St. Louis University, has rented a suite of rooms in the new apartment building next to the new St. Louis University gymnasium on West Pine boulevard. G. Ralph Ernst of the fraternity announced that the lease was signed last week.

The proximity of the building to the gymnasium and the St. Louis University law school makes it an ideal location for the students' purposes, he says. The high price of homes in this neighborhood has prohibited the fraternities from buying their own homes, yet the advantage of being close to the school, to the gymnasium and to the new university cafeteria has demanded that students reside in the neighborhood.

The idea of using the suite of rooms in the apartment house is unusual and if the experiment proves a success, will be followed by the other fraternities at the university.

In the matter of housing students, St. Louis University has listed practically all the residences in the neighborhood whose occupants desire to take in a roomer or two. In this way ample facilities have been provided and students have been placed only in homes of good character.

IN PRISON SIX TIMES, HEADED THERE AGAIN

Steve Robinson, 76, Convicted Each Time for Forgery, Held On That Offense.

Steve Robison, 76 years old, who doesn't remember exactly how many times he has been in and out o fprison, "guesses he is going home again," to the State penitentiary, the only home he knows now. He has served five terms at Jefferson City and one at Chester, Ill., for forgery and was arrested again yesterday on the same charge.

Slowly recovering from the effects of too much whisky, it was not exactly celar to him just what had happened. He recalled that he had gone to the Renard Linoleum and Rug Co. Friday, posing as a rug buyer, and persuaded a salesman to cash a $2 check. He spent the money for whisky and returned to the story yesterday, rather drunk, and was arrested as he was trying to cash two more checks totaling $250. The $2 check had come back marked "no account."

Robison, also known as Edward Chance, declared that 50 years ago he was a tobacco salesman in St. Louis and a "young man about town."

NEVER CONSENTED TO $100,000 BRIBE, GOULD DECLARES

Maine Senator Says Money Was Paid to Canadian Premier by Associates in Construction Firm.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—During an examination before a Senate Elections Subcommittee today, Senator Gould (Rep.), Maine, steadfastly asserted his innocence of a charge that in 1912 he bribed a Premier of New Brunswick, Canada, to obtain a railroad contract.

The new Senator reiterated that he knew his associates in the railroad construction company had agreed to pay $100,000 to Premier Flemming but that he did not know when it was paid and that it was done without his consent.

At no time did he spend any of the company's money, he said, and all checks that he drew were turned over to Ross Thompson of Vancouver, B. C., one of h's partners, who handled the finances.

Questioned About Checks.

"You might have signed the checks to pay Flemming?" suggested Senator Walsh (Dem.) of Montana, who is prosecuting the case.

"I wouldn't say I did or didn't," replied Gould.

"You never inquired who paid it or from what fund it came?" pressed the Montana Senator.

"No, I didn't," was the reply. "It came out of the railroad company's funds somehow. When I heard about it I told my associates they had made a mistake."

Recalled to the stand, E. S. Carter, a political organizer of the liberal party of New Brunswick, gave a different version of the transaction.

Testimony of Canadian.

"We hadn't any doubt but that the transaction was entirely between Mr. Gould and Mr. Flemming," he declared. "It is all news to me that his associates were supposed to have paid the money to Flemming. We understood that Mr. Gould was the whole company and controlled all of the money."

"Was it regarded as a campaign contribution or a bribe?" asked Chairman Goff (Rep.), West Virginia.

"We didn't know as to that," Carter replied.

Senator Gould stuck to his story of yesterday that his partners had either had to pay the $100,000 or lose all of their investments in the railroad.

Legitimate Business "Rarity."

"Isn't there any legitimate business in New Brunswick?" asked Senator Goff.

"Oh, some," Gould replied.

"It's a rarity, isn't it?" "I found it so."

"I want to say, as a Senator of the United States," Goff said, "that it is a strange thing that you can't go up into one of the provinces of Canada and do legitimate business without giving a Premier $100,000."

"That's the situation, isn't it?" he asked.

"It was then," Senator Gould said.

Canadian Takes Exception.

Carter took exception to the statement, declaring that legitimate business could be transacted in New Brunswick and that Gould for years had been the head of an electric power company doing business in the province and that he "had never found anything but honorable practices connected with it."

The committee concluded the testimony late today and adjourned until Jan. 24, when final arguments will be heard.

CLOTHING STORE CLOSED ON ATTACHMENT FOR RENT

Deputy, Levying on Place in Loew's Theater Building, Permits no Sales to Be Made.

A clothing and hat store at 719 Washington avenue, in Loew's State Theater Building, operated by the firm of Boxer's, Inc., was closed yesterday under an attachment suit based on a claim for rent. The amount of the claim, filed by Loew's St. Louis Realty and Amusement Co., owner of the building is for $1800, being for two months.

Robert B. Flint, chief execution deputy in the Sheriff's office, took charge of the store and placed a watchman on guard. He would not permit any sales to be made.

The suit sets forth that William D. Boxer, president of the firm, obtained the lease April 18, 1925, agreeing to pay $900 a month for the first 24 months for the store room, $950 a month for the next ensuing 36 months and $1250 a month for the balance of the term. The lease later was assigned to the defendant corporation. According to the petition, the unpaid rent is for November and December.

JENNINGS HAS "A MOON YET, AIN'T IT?"—ONLY

Electric Light Treasury Is Empty and Nobody Offers to Help Raise $1500.

"Part of a moon is better than no moon any old place and any old time." So sang the residents of Jennings, St. Louis County, who chanced to be out after dark last night. For overhead there beamed a perfect crescent, shining down on the little community and bathing its streets with a soft glow of light. And in this there was cause for jubilation, for ever since the first of the year the streets of Jennings have been lightless.

Moonlit nights will continue to be popular there for some time, as it was learned last night from a member of the board of directors of the Jennings Improvement Association that there is no immediate prospect of the electric street lights resuming competition with the lunar illumination provided by nature.

For the last 15 years funds for providing street lights have been raised by popular subscription through the efforts of the improvement association. But this year no one attends the meetings of the association, no money reposes in the treasury and no effort has been made to raise the $1500 necessary.

Each year it has become more and more difficult to raise the money, and last year there was an interval of a week during which the streets of Jennings were in darkness. In that time there were several minor accidents after dark in which St. Louis Bus Company coaches are said to have figured. An ultimatum from the bus company, "no lights, no buses," resulted in greatly increased contributions and it was not long before the lights were again lit.

We have plenty of it—ready to place at short notice—with professional attention to every detail in connection with such a transaction and at a minimum expense to you.

MANCHESTER HOME

Right now is a splendid time to build. Your home will be complete and ready to occupy before the Spring building rush. In and around St. Louis alone there are hundreds of homes put up by Manchester, and rent money has paid or is paying for all of them. Many families date their prosperity from the day they decided to build a Manchester Home.

If you own or will buy a lot we guarantee to build you an attractive home and finance it ourselves so your monthly payments will not exceed rent. The low cost of Manchester houses, considering how substantially they are built, is a surprise to many who are not familiar with our way of building and our large scale production. It's a story you ought to know in detail before you decide to build or not to build.

ENGLISH MANOR HOUSE

The traditional love of home of the English people has found expression in the architecture of their homes. The very word manor means an estate, and in Gannondale your estate is also your home.

DO YOU EVER CREATE AN ESTATE FROM RENT RECEIPTS?

Ponder this over and then investigate the style show of architecture, in Gannondale. The present display house at 7570 Cornell Avenue is an English Manor home, to which we welcome you.

The Greatest Story in the World

The Bible in Pictures

The greatest selling book the world has ever known is the Bible. The biggest seller last year was a religious book. The biggest success among all moving pictures was a religious film.

What promises to be the most popular newspaper feature ever produced will be the daily strip, "The Bible in Pictures," which will commence at the beginning of Genesis and continue through the scriptures.

This feature is not limited in interest to those having religious affiliations or even inclinations.

It is for everybody. Sacred history has a fascination wholly apart from its spiritual significance.

So well has the artist interpreted in picture form the tremendous events narrated in the Old Testament that every reader, perhaps to his surprise, will find these strips, day after day, a source of interest growing as the story unfolds. Look for it yourself on the day it starts.

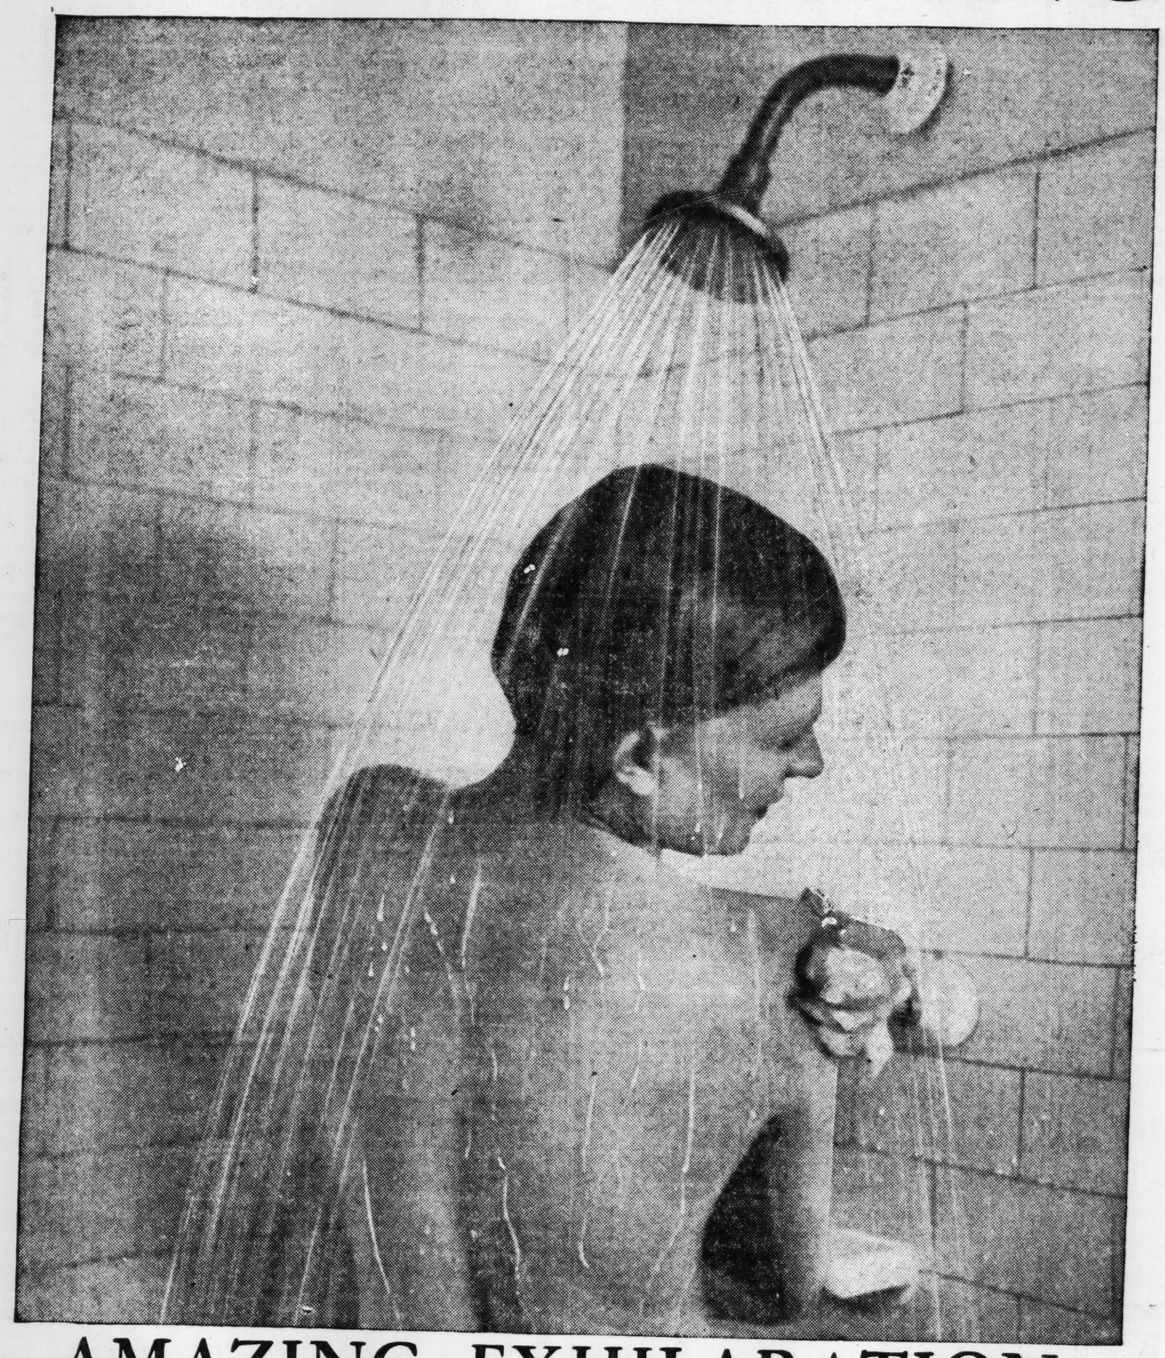
AFTER SHAVING



AMAZING EXHILARATION— LIKE A COLD SHOWER!

THE men are all talking about what a delight Listerine is after shaving.

It is impossible to describe its effect on you. All the thrill of a cold shower is there, with none of the trouble, and with a fraction of the time.

It starts you off with a bang and the whole world looks brighter. Just try it and see, and find for yourself why we are not taking a chance in risking our money to tell you.

Douse it on, full strength, after the hot water. It closes the pores and draws up the muscles. You look younger — even feel younger. And you are left with a nice feeling of safety—because Listerine insures you against possible infection. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

THEY STICK TO IT! The way we get new users for Listerine Tooth Paste is to get people to try it just once. After that they rarely switch.

Glimpses of Late John Gu MSS. Collection Sold for At New York Auction

It Contained Letters by Poe Heine, Edmund Burke, Dicke Mark Twain, Roosevelt and M

ONE of a few remarkable literary collections made by St. Louisans has passed from this city, in the sale and scattering of the treasured manuscripts owned by the late John H. Gundlach, real estate dealer and leader in civic and esthetic movements. The collection, sold in a New York gallery last week, and comprising more than 1000 items, brought a total of $15,458.

The top price, $4200, was brought by a collection of correspondence between United States Ministers to Paris and the Court of St. James at the time of the Louisiana Purchase, giving an intimate delineation of the forces underlying that epochal acquisition.

Striking in contrast to the second highest price of $1850 for a nine-line unpublished poem by Edgar Allen Poe, was a shocking picture of poverty in a letter written by his mother-in-law after his death. She was reduced to the strait of begging her correspondent for "a couple of bottles of wine, a few oranges or anything you will think proper for a poor invalid."

Even while his people starved, Poe's greatness was recognized, as Lord Bulwer-Lytton showed in a letter, sold on the first day of the auction, wherein he remarked that "The Raven" and "The Bells"

Glimpses of Late John Gundlach's MSS. Collection Sold for $45,458 At New York Auction Last Week

It Contained Letters by Poe, Nietzsche, Heine, Edmund Burke, Dickens, Fields, Mark Twain, Roosevelt and Many More.

ONE of a few remarkable literary collections made by St. Louisans has passed from this city, in the sale and scattering of the treasured manuscripts owned by the late John H. Gundlach, real estate dealer and leader in civic and aesthetic movements. The collection, sold in a New York gallery last week, and comprising more than 1000 items, brought a total of $45,458.

The top price, $4200, was brought by a collection of correspondence between United States Ministers to Paris and the Court of St. James at the time of the Louisiana Purchase, giving an intimate delineation of the forces underlying that epochal acquisition.

Striking in contrast to the second highest price of $1850 for a nine-line unpublished poem by Edgar Allen Poe, was a shocking picture of poverty in a letter written by his mother-in-law after his death. She was reduced to the extremity of begging her correspondent to buy "a couple of bottles of wine, a few oranges or anything you will think proper for a poor invalid." Even while his people starved, Poe's greatness was recognized, as Lord Bulwer-Lytton showed in a letter, sold on the first day of the auction, wherein he remarked that "The Raven" and "The Bells" should be "set to music by some great composer and should become national songs with the Americans. I am extremely glad to have seen these specimens of American genius. They confirm my belief that there is a peculiar idiosyncrasy in the American language dialect which may produce a distinct national literature, the great fault of which will be exaggeration."

Not only Poe had felt the sting of Poverty, Leigh Hunt made clear in a letter including the bitter comment, "I would rather not see many overbearing * * * booksellers about me if I could help it, when I think that there are Wordsworth, Tom Moore and I all living in cottages, and as poor as the rats that infest them."

In another Hunt remarked, "a tremendous divine has said that hell was paved with good intentions. I suppose the reverend gentleman went to heaven through a kennel of bad ones." "Kennel" means a gutter.

Difficulties such as Poe's and Hunt's may have been in Jack London's mind when he wrote in a letter sold just after Hunt's went on the block, Wednesday night, "Don't give up your job in order to write." He added, "avoid the unhappy ending, the harsh, the brutal, the tragic, the horrible—in you care to see in print the things you write. (In this connection don't do as I do, but do as I say.)"

It was Tom Moore who, in a letter sold Thursday, told of a man who "replied to the Bench of Judges, on being asked what he had to say against sentence of death being passed upon him, 'oh faith, you've settled it prettily amongst you!'"

Another piece of financial literary advice was given in one of ten letters of H. L. Mencken, editor of the "American Mercury," offered for sale Thursday, the closing day of the auction. "There is still enough verse in type in our vaults to choke a horse, but the shortage of prose was never so appalling. Verbum sap."

Shaw's Post-War Views.

Contemporary men and affairs had been drawn upon for some of the most heatedly sought-after parts of the collection. Notably there was the voluminous Roosevelt collection, which was exhibited by Mr. Gundlach's loan, by the Missouri Historical Society in St. Louis a few years ago. Several portions of them went at more than $100 each. Most interesting among the modern curios, perhaps, was a letter by Bernard Shaw, 1925 winner of the Noble prize in literature, to Perriton Maxwell, undated:

"When the order was given to cease firing in 1919, it should have been followed instantly by an order for the transportation of M.M. Clemenceau, Poincare, Lloyd George and Marshal Foch, to some pleasant island in the South Seas or the Mediterranean, and the cutting off of all communication with that favored spot for three years at least. Instead, they were left in charge of the affairs of Europe. Of course, they simply continued the war against enemies who had surrendered on President Wilson's terms, which were promptly treated as scraps of paper. As there were no more soldiers in the field to be killed, they killed children by starvation. As there were no more blockhouses and wire entanglements to be battered down, they battered down international trade. They are doing it still. The war is not over."

Another Shavianism.

Especially intriguing in view of Shaw's refusal of the $35,000 carried by the Nobel prize, on the grounds that he did not need it and other writers did, was a letter he wrote in 1897, toward the close of his job on the Saturday Review under the reign of Frank Harris.

He had written a review of the work of Ibsen, of whom he and William Archer were almost the sole champions in London, for "The Academy," and was refusing the editor's offered payment.

"For some years past," he explained, "I have insisted on a minimum of £5 for merely dipping my pen in ink, contributions of any length to be computed at £3 per 1000 words. When it doesn't run to this I get out of the difficulty—if I have special reasons for writing—by doing the job for nothing. This is perhaps a worse sort of black-legging than lowering my terms; but I only do it under peculiar circumstances."

"Sliding Scale of Modesty."

Not quite modern, but possibly of significance to the modern young person, was a somewhat argumentative letter on "modesty" written by Thomas Hood the Elder in 1844: "I do not hold that a female may necessarily be a modest one though tied up to her neck in a sack, especially if she jumps in it—her modesty may be dubious, but she is decent. If I understand your sliding scale of modesty the most delicate may dance in the shortest petticoats and the purest of all in fig leaves."

Among the moderns again, an epigrammatic definition of humor was included in an extensive collection of manuscript of Richard le Galliene, auctioned on the first day of the sale:

"Humor is that quality of the mind based on a peculiar sense of proportion * * * by which we perceive: (1) The absurdity of our fellows. (2) The absurdity of the nation to which we belong. (3) The pathetic absurdity of existence in general. (4) The absurdity of ourselves."

Eugene Fields' Anti-Climax.

A not uncommon lover's dilemma cropped out in a letter of Eugene Fields. He began with soft penmusic, "Another beautiful day has passed and with evening comes once more the really delightful task of writing you. I wish, dear Julia, you could be with me tonight and hear from my own lips my words of love." Discord crept in as he reread her last letter, and he wound up on a blue note—"Here are 21 blunders in orthography, all of the words of ordinary occurrences and you have no excuse for being so very, very careless."

A brief but witty letter of Lafcadio Hearn, which was knocked down for $70, began, "I blacked—that is, I had my boots blacked yesterday. And I gave the boy 20 cents, because of the feeling that he might never have such a chance again. That boy runs after me now everywhere, but he is mistaken; I am no longer the same. I have satisfied my conscience, and enjoy Nirvana. I went to the P. O. with the Soul of the Far East. I went to the book store, and found it closed. * * * Then I understood why the streets looked like afternoon, and the sunshine had a tinge as of evening in a cemetery. Confound Sunday."

Burke and the Colonies.

In altogether different vein was a letter of thanks by Edmund Burke, written two months before the Revolutionary War broke out:

"The fish, too, I could have eat with still greater relish, but that we are resolved that the unfortunate inhabitants of America shall neither eat of that nor of anything else. I cannot sit down quietly to a table from which I have kicked away my brethren and fellow citizens." Referring to the policy of Lord North, he wrote: "I think that a more complete scheme of senseless tyranny was never devised by the pride and folly of man."

Heine Spurns the Censor.

A refusal of Heinrich Heine to submit to Prussian censorship, was included in a letter to his publishers, which was sold for $45. Heine indignantly demanded to have his manuscript sent back, and returned his remuneration, declaring that rather than as he needed the money, he would not accept it at the cost of his honor.

Some connection might be seen with a letter of Ulysses S. Grant, which brought $200, to a subordinate officer in 1865:

"Suppress the entire press of Memphis for giving aid and comfort to the enemy by publishing in their columns every move made here by our troops and every work commenced. Arrest the editor of th Bulletin and send him here to Misiner, under guard, for his publications of present plans via New Carthage and Grand Gulf.

"I am satisfied that much has found its way into the public press through that incorragibly gassy man Col. Bissell of the Eng. Reg. I sent him to you thinking he could not do so much harm there as here. His tongue will have to be tied if there is anything going on where he is which you don't want made public. I feel a strong inclination to arrest him and trust to find evidence against him afterwards."

"Nietzsche, vir Obscurissimus."

Still another point of view was expressed in a letter signed "Dr. Nietzsche vir obscurissimus" ("most obscure man") to the editor of a newspaper which had asked him to contribute. He gave names and addresses of two other "obscure men" and suggested that the editor think of them, for they would do him honor to write for him. For himself, the philosopher refused to have anything to do with newspapers, for he thought them always partisan.

Auctorial independence was carried further than Heine by Charles Dickens, father of the journalistic public "house-cleaning," in a letter, sold the first day of the sale, explaining his refusal to attend a Lord Mayor's dinner:

"Entertaining a strong opinion on the subject of the City Corporation as it stands, and the absurdity of its pretensions in an age perfectly different, in all conceivable respects, from that to which it properly belonged as a reality, I have expressed that opinion on more than one occasion within a year or so in 'Household Words.' I do not think it consistent with my respect for myself, or for the art I profess, to blow hot and cold in the same breath and to laugh at the institution in print, and accept the hospitality of its representative while the ink is staring us all in the face."

From a little further back, a curious light was thrown on the uneasiness of the head that wears a crown, by a form letter of James I of England asking prosperous subjects for "loans" of 20 pounds each, since he did not wish to burden the poor with further taxation.

Bits by Mark Twain.

In one letter Mark Twain remarked that he had been "always tired since I struck 70." In another letter he wrote there were a half-dozen words he frequently wrote but did not know how to pronounce, "and was and am and ever shall remain too lazy to look in the dictionary and find out."

To an editor he wrote: "I get so many commonplace letters that are difficult to spell out and then don't pay after I've got them spelled out, that this present brief sparkles by contrast."

Concerning the writer of "this present brief," he advised the editor: "Make her do up that little village of hers—that lost village, that mislaid village, that village whose place on the planet God does not know and man couldn't find with a rake. They are darlings for interest, dear and unspoiled simplicities, those Rumanians. I guess—Jews, gypsies and all—judging by those I encounter at intervals in Vienna, and I don't believe they have ever been combed with a capable pen."

A Revolutionary War Colonel, John Parker of Virginia, discussing George Washington in a personal letter, lined up with some of the modern critics of Rupert Hughes' biography:

"As to his excellency, Gen. Washington, I revere him, I consider him as the first man in the World, and would abuse any person who would not do him publick justice; he has as few faults as any man, and has been so uniformly steady to serve his country, that I should consider it criminal even to think of any small error which might ever have attended him."

"Rupture Can Be Healed!" Noted Authorities Say

Former Sufferers Tell of Complete Recovery

Scientific New Device That Healed Them Sent on FREE TRIAL

"At last, rupture can be healed!" This statement, issued today by the foremost rupture authorities in the world, brings joy and new hope to thousands of sufferers throughout the world. They can now look forward to a happy, healthy life—free from rupture troubles.

For ages the healing of rupture—or hernia, as it is medically known—has been the goal of countless physicians and surgeons. Now the quest is ended. Experiments carried on for more than 30 years have resulted in the perfection of an appliance—light, safe, comfortable and clean—which supports and really heals rupture.

So sure are they of what this device will do, that the discoverers will send it on FREE trial to all who suffer. You can wear it—test it—prove to yourself that it will really heal you. They don't want a penny unless you are absolutely satisfied. If you are ruptured, write today to Brooks Appliance Co., 62 State street, Marshall, Michigan, for free trial offer of the wonderful device that has healed so many.

McCAWLEY LEADS OPPOSITION TO NUISANCE TAXES

Carthage Senator Rakes Baker's Proposals Intended to nIcrease Revenue by $7,000,000.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 8.—Gov. Baker's $7,000,000 tax increase program, outlined in his address to the Legislature yesterday, has met the anticipated opposition in the Senate. Discussions by Senators of his recommendation have disclosed virtually no support for the nuisance taxes he urged, among either Democrats or Republicans.

Senator McCawley (Dem.) of Carthage, who probably will be a member of the Ways and Means Committee, which will have control of the Governor's bills, was outspoken in his opposition to them, and Senator Mogler (Rep.) of St. Louis, likewise voiced his objection.

The Governor urged the creation of a 10 per cent tax on all tobacco and tobacco products, and a 10 per cent tax on all admissions to amusements, the revenue to go to support the public schools and educational institutions.

"The chances of the Governor's tax program passing are about equal to that af tallow-legged cat winning a foot race with an asbestos rat through the boiling fires of Mauna Loa," McCawley said today. "The people of Missouri want no more taxes. There is a general feeling that we have reached the limit of governmental costs.

Rudderless Ship of State.

"Objections to the plan proposed for raising more revenue are many. In the first place, to single out a particular subject of taxation and set a side the proceeds of the revenue arising therefrom to the support of a particular governmental activity and excluding it from participation in revenue arising from other sources, would be to launch the ship of state on the open sea, without sail, rudder or compass.

"In the good book we are warned against building our house on a foundation of sand, and to bottom the educational interests of this State upon a series of nuisance taxes would certainly be building on a sandy foundation. The smokers might turn to cubebs, the soda sippers to buttermilk and the movie fans to the comic papers, and then where would the State's educational program be?

"Another objection is that other activities of the Government would become more ravenous in their demands for revenues from sources not included in the proposed revenge measures.

"The proposed tax on cigarettes and tobacco is objectionable from the standpoint of the user as a nuisance tax, and from the standpoint of those who believe the use of tobacco wrong, in that it gives the sanction of the State for a money consideration to a thing they believe wrong.

Definite Amount Necessary.

"The Governor is correct in that definite provision should be made for the support of the elementary schools and higher institutions of learning, but such support should come from setting aside a definite proportion of the revenues for that purpose, rather than turning over to the cause of education certain objects of taxation and excluding it from all others.

"Then there are those who believe that taxes such as proposed would be unconstitutional. The General Assembly may not, we think, for any other purpose than raising necessary funds to pay the expense of administering laws enacted in the exercise of the State's police power, levy a tax or provide for the collection of any fees of one business in discrimination against any other business. And the courts have held that when the schedule of fees adopted for raising funds for the enforcement of such a law is such as to result in the accumulation of enormous surplus from that source, it is prima facie a revenue measure and therefore unconstitutional.

Unalterably Opposed.

"Another objection, and one which seems to me vital, is that the time has not yet come, and may it never come in Missouri when adequate support of our elementary schools and higher institutions of learning depends upon snatching pennies from the babies who so love the movies, and derive such sweet pleasure from the effervescent and always tempting product of the fountain.

"I am speaking only for myself. During my campaign I discussed the proposed nuisance taxes as published in the Post-Dispatch on Oct. 9, 1925, which are substantially the same as outlined in the Governor's message. Notwithstanding my district having a total vote of less than 20,000, giving an average majority in excess of 5000 for Republican candidate for United States Senator, Supreme Judge and member of Congress, they sent me here under promise to oppose any increase in the rates of taxes already provided for, or the addition of any new taxes. That was my platform and the platform was not made to 'get in on.'

"New Yorkers will skate on the lakes of Florida and Eskimos wear poinsettias in Greenland when I vote for this program."

How the Model Clerk Stole

$463,697.48

Courtney Glisson Outwitted the Bank Examiners Thirteen Times, Kept an Accurate Account of His Thefts and Finally Surrendered to Save His Employers From Paying a Reward.

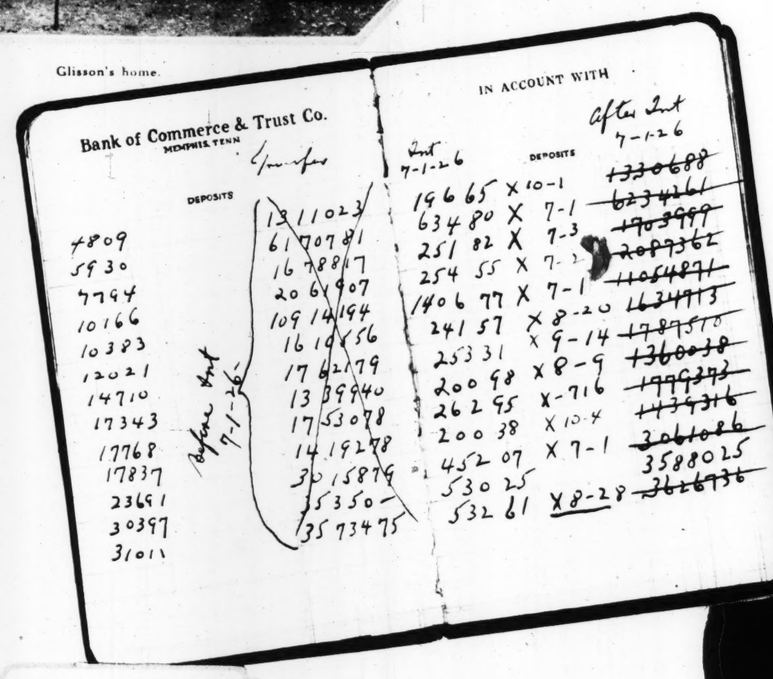
Adding machine recapitulation showing Glisson's thefts, item by item.



Pass book ledger in which he kept track of his "borrowings."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

MEMPHIS, Tennessee.

HORATIO ALGER hero who climbed from bank messenger to chief teller at 30, and who was able to steal $463,697.48 of his firm's money in 16 months, has come home to face the music. Courtney Glisson, less than three months ago one of the most trusted employes of the Bank of Commerce and Trust Company, has surrendered.

During 13 examinations by expert auditors he concealed his thefts by means of a system that was as simple as it was ingenious.

Even in flight from a prospective prison term and disgrace this model teller wrote the directors of the bank from St. Louis that his worries were all for them. He was surrendering, he said in the letter, in which he named the terms of his return, so that the bank would not have to pay the $5000 reward offered for his capture.

Glisson walked into the Memphis police station, his dreams of high finance at an end, his bail fixed at $100,000, his home covered by mortgages, and facing separation from his wife and young son.

His ambitions were too high, his young wife says in his defense. He saw himself at the head of a national industry, manufacturing an auto polish, with branches in every city, stocks listed on the market, marble and mahogany offices with his name discreetly lettered on the door above the word "President." He handled large sums of the bank's money daily. The temptation was too great, Mrs. Glisson believes.

COURTNEY GLISSON was the type of young man whom fathers pointed out to their sons. Like the hero of many "from rags to riches" epics, he came from a small town, Rutherford, in West Tennessee. He was the brightest youngster in a family, poor, but with old and proud traditions. He had no difficulty in getting a position as bank messenger with the Bank of Commerce.

His rise, too, was typical. Slowly, surely, he marched from messenger to chief teller in the savings department. It was too bad, officials of the bank agreed, that more boys weren't as industrious as Courtney Glisson. Not only did he work hard and faithfully in the bank, but he developed a business during his spare hours in the manufacture and sale of Permo, a polish for automobile bodies.

He married a girl from a nice family. They built a home, mostly on money borrowed honestly from the bank. About two years ago a son was born to them. Glisson worked, too, in the Sunday school and church. He believed in sharing one's worldly wealth with the Lord.

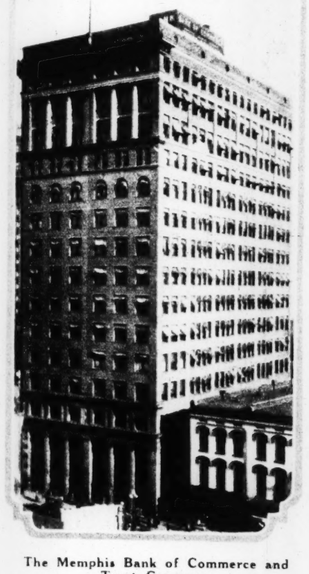
And all the time, unknown to family and friends, this sallow-faced, bespectacled young bank teller was scheming for great wealth, power, position and prestige. He was handicapped by lack of capital.

There came a time when it was imperative to have a great deal of money. Then it was that Glisson devised the system by which he was able to defeat the purpose of 13 examinations of the bank's accounts by experienced auditors.

In the savings department of the Bank of Commerce each depositor's account is listed upon a card, and these cards, not bound in ledger or book, are kept in files. Among the many thousands of savings accounts carried by the bank were a number that were dormant, from which money was seldom withdrawn. Glisson singled out 13 large accounts.

It was a comparatively easy matter to make duplicate cards for each of the 13. On the customary printed forms he filled in the names of the 13 depositors and the sums which each had on deposit. Then he was ready to begin his financial operations.

If he needed, for example, $10,000, he took the money and deducted the sum of $10,000 from one of the 13 accounts on the duplicate records that he had made, leaving the original card unchanged. These duplicates, which gave the true condition of each depositor's account, he kept, it is believed, on his person except when he had need of them. The original cards were left in the files, so that, if by rare chance one of the depositors should ask for the amount of his account it would be possible for one of Glisson's assistants to go to the file and report the sum that had been on deposit before the young teller began his thefts.



The Memphis Bank of Commerce and Trust Company.

It was when an audit was ordered that Glisson made use of the duplicates. It is the custom when State or Federal bank examiners come to inspect the condition of the bank to notify department heads so that they may prepare their books for examination. The same thing holds true when the bank makes an audit for its own purposes. This warning was sufficient for Glisson. It was the work of a moment, so completely was he trusted and so absolute was his control, to remove the original cards from the file and replace them with the duplicates that gave the true condition of the 13 accounts, as robbed of hundreds of thousands by the young teller. Naturally, the books balanced.

There was no cause for suspicion. The president trusted the young man implicitly. They heard he was making money on the side with his Permo business, but he assured them, truthfully enough, that it wasn't a great deal.

GLISSON kept a ledger, showing all his thefts. He preserved a complete record from July 1, 1926, until just before the shortage was discovered, which he has put in the hands of bank officials. On July 1 interest was credited to the 13 accounts, along with all the others of the savings department. Glisson took the interest. For example, a depositor having account "30,397" had a total interest of $530.25. Appropriating this sum, the records show, brought his total theft from this one account to $35,880.25.

He was careful not to wipe out any one account completely. When it appeared that account "30397" was running so low as to cause suspicion, he took a sum from another account to counterbalance his thefts from the first. Thus he juggled and balanced, balanced and juggled, with amazing skill.

As he balanced one account with money extracted from another he ran a pencil line through the account canceled and made a notation of the date the amount was made good. On pages one and two of his passbook ledger account "30,397" is carried as unreturned. It was one of the accounts which made up the grand total of nearly half a million dollars.

Not only was Glisson carrying on his work in the bank and as well keeping the account of his thefts straight, but in addition he kept all the books of the Permo company, the facts and figures of his schemes at his fingertips. Twice, while on vacation from his duties at the bank, he took a long chance. He left the duplicate cards in the files trusting that none of the 13 depositors would require the amount of his account during Glisson's absence. This forestalled the possibility of discovery by an audit during his vacation. He was not found out.

With thousands—hundreds of thousands even—at his disposal, the Permo industry took on imposing proportions. He worked late into the night in the office he had fitted out in his home, turning out business letters on his dictaphone, which were transcribed by a typist at the Permo plant, where he went in the morning before going to the bank. There were 10 Permo stations in operation at this time.

Permo never went over as Glisson felt it should. He put $70,000 into national advertising in one week alone. "No-Blur," a preparation to keep rain from interfering with the vision through the windshield, and "Otac," to give automobiles a fancy mud bath, were promoted to bolster the losing Permo. Despite the efforts of a capable sales manager and the other devices of big business, Permo, No-Blur and Otac continued to absorb thousands from the coffers of the Bank of Commerce.

On that fatal October morning Glisson was delayed. He was 15 minutes late to work. Coming into the bank, he saw the examiners in his cage. The game was up, he knew. There was not time to switch the cards.

As he stepped into his cage for a moment, quiet, calm and self-controlled, an examiner asked him for the card for a certain account. He went into another department "to get it," he told the examiners. Instead, he stepped into one of the vaults, picked up $5400 in $50 bills and departed. In his fast roadster he drove to a point 10 miles out of the city and there boarded a train for Nashville, not even stopping to let his wife know of the disaster that had reduced him in less than an hour from a respected citizen to a criminal. He left behind a group of amazed and bitterly disillusioned bank officials, who at once put an extensive audit under way.

EVEN in his flight the model teller thought first of the bank. He sent back a long letter, accounting for his entire shortage so accurately that auditors for the State found his computations to be off only $4.13. He assured the president and the directors that he would pay back in two years, when he succeeded in establishing Permo on a truly national scale, the entire sum he had taken.

"I, and I alone, am responsible," he wrote. "I am now on an honorable road.

"I am writing this letter to save the bank from an expensive and extensive audit. You will find listed below the books I manipulated in order to obtain the money. Through the system I used I was able to have my books inspected regularly without detection. I tell you this so that no one else can be blamed for what I did.

"I did it to make a success of a worthy business. I foresaw the possibility of such a contingency arising and accordingly made my preparations for restitution. I will be back within two years or less and restore what I have taken."

Two months on the "honorable road" proved sufficient, but he was still the dapper man of high finance when he walked into the police station here, a little weary of the pursuit, but otherwise still the strenuous promoter of Permo. It was learned that he had been in New York, Washington, Philadelphia and St. Louis, had stopped at the best hotels and had never resorted to a disguise.

"I have missed but 10 issues of the Memphis paper since I left Memphis on Oct. 27," Glisson said, "so, you see, I knew pretty well what was going on."

GLISSON'S wife has never failed her model husband. In his most dire extremity she has not faltered. Immediately after the shortage was discovered relatives wished to shield her, but she would not hear of it. Even now she is inclined to minimize his offense.

"I can't tell you how glad I am that Courtney has returned to face the music," she said on the day after her husband returned. "It was my prayer and hope all along.

"No one knows the circumstances yet. We mustn't prejudge him. No one knows what he has been through. He is my sweetheart and I will stick by him to the end. No one can imagine my mental strain while he was away. I knew that he had some money, and yet I worried for fear that he would not take care of his health."

The crash of the Permo business came soon after Glisson's departure. His organization was at once put into the hands of receivers. His newspaper advertising had been so effective in Memphis that it was found that the local Permo station was paying a profit, and as a result it was kept open. The six other stations that were in operation at the time that the shortage was discovered were closed.

Before the keys were finally turned the managers of the respective stations were asked what they would give for them. Without exception they answered: "Not as a gift!" One man did say that if the rent and other overhead costs were paid by the receiver he would continue to operate the plant and provide a market for Permo. This offer was declined. Likewise the No-Blur and Otac industries crumpled away.

Executives of the Bank of Commerce still maintain that Glisson was one of the best and most efficient employes they have ever known. He was a wizard with figures, they agree, and very clever. Too clever, as it happened.

LONDON.

ALPHONSO FRANCIS SMITH, former officer of the Dragoon Guards, veteran of the World War, twice married, several times a bankrupt and finally defendant in a murder trial, spent Christmas in Maidstone Jail. In the last decade and a half he has run through a fortune of $1,250,000 and now he will serve twelve months at hard labor for carrying a revolver with intent to endanger life. He had contemplated suicide.

Smith is thirty-seven years old and few men have lived so crowded a life. After he is liberated, it has been said for him, he will emigrate to Canada with his wife, there to begin life again. It was because of his wife's affair with John Adam Derham, internationally known hockey star, that Smith contemplated suicide. It was for the murder of Derham—killed accidentally, according to the defense—that Smith was tried recently at Kent Assizes. The jury believed his story and he was acquitted.

The "unwritten law," both Justice Avory who presided and Roland Oliver, Crown counsel, declared in the course of the trial, has no standing in England. Even if Smith had proof that Derham had stolen his wife he was not justified in taking the law into his own hands. But Smith, whose pitiful letters showing how Derham had wronged him were read into the record, did not plead the unwritten law. Instead, he declared that Derham had been killed in a scuffle with a revolver obtained for suicide.

A Canadian by birth, Smith is the grandson of Sir Frank Smith, a pioneer in the building of the Canadian National Railway and, on his mother's side, Hugh Ryan, a wealthy contractor. From their estates he received a fortune which, in a few years, he had lost. In 1912 he married Miss Ruth B. Wynne, daughter of Robert J. Wynne, Postmaster-General in Roosevelt's Cabinet. The first Mrs. Smith divorced him in 1921, naming a young London society woman.

Smith's second wife and the cause of his latest ordeal was Miss Kathleen Wight, by whom he had three children. Meantime he had earned, by his extravagances, the title of "Frank the Spender." He had run through a large part of his fortune. He had become involved with W. Cooper Hobbs and Montague N. Newton, who later figured in the "Mr. A" or Hari Singh trial in England. Between them the two men got about $30,000 from him.

Smith was sent to school in England and attended Cambridge. Soon after graduation he was commissioned in the Dragoon Guards. When only twenty-one years old he had his first financial troubles, debts of $250,000 having piled up against him. When England was swept into war, Smith was again bankrupt. He joined as a private and fought for several years.

WHATEVER his lack of stability in financial matters and in his first marriage, Smith was passionately devoted to his second wife. Derham, the hockey player, had been a classmate at Cambridge and was a fairly close friend. The friendship broke up when Smith became suspicious that the man was having an affair with his wife. He tried desperately to patch things up. He met Derham and on one occasion fought with him. Another time he went to his rival's house and tore pictures of his wife from the walls. Letters which he found convinced him that his wife had been unfaithful.

Divorce proceedings flashed through his mind, but he did not start them. Finally, by a telegram sent in the name of his wife, he brought Derham to his seaside home, Stella Maris at White stable. This, he later said, was for the purpose of persuading his wife to drop the affair. She had agreed to do so, but had not kept her promise. A conference among the members of the triangle took place on the evening of August 12. Smith, having talked wildly of suicide several times that day, was told that he was to be divorced; which he thought to be unlikely, since Derham was married, and therefore could not marry his wife.

That evening they went back after dinner to Stella Maris. Mrs. Smith and Derham, disregarding an order from Smith for Derham to leave, started to play cards. Smith then took a revolver from his pocket, there was a shot and a struggle. In the house at the time was Lillian Wight, sixteen years old, a sister of Mrs. Smith. She came running down from upstairs and saw Derham belaboring Smith with the butt of a revolver. Mrs. Smith was attempting to pull Derham away.

Derham, fatally wounded, rose and staggered to the outside doorway and into the street, where he fell, the revolver in his hand. A neighbor named Barton happened to be passing and went into the house. Smith was fearfully beaten about the head, seemed dazed and incoherently invited him to play cards. Then the police were called. Smith swore he had not killed Derham. He had pulled out the revolver to commit suicide, he said, and his rival had been killed in the scuffle. Almost with his last breath Derham had struck Smith over the head with the weapon.

Smith was arrested and charged with murder. In November he went on trial for his life. The Crown could not call Mrs. Smith, since a wife cannot testify against her husband. No one else was present when the shooting took place. Mrs. Smith, the cause of the whole affair, was present at the trial. She did what she could to help her husband, who had, while in jail, regained much of his poise.

THE prosecution began by painting a picture of his suffering and attempted to show provocation for killing Derham.

Few witnesses have made so profound an impression on a crowded court room and a jury as did Smith. One juror, a woman, collapsed as he told of the turmoil of his mind caused by the actions of his wife and of the bitter despair brought on by her refusal to give up Derham.

Smith was in the witness box for 3½ hours and kept his nerve through the ordeal of direct and cross-examination. He insisted, in the face of quotations from his letters, that he had never considered killing Derham or even physical violence against the man who had broken up his home. The killing had been accidental; the result of a scuffle which took place at Stella Maris.

Sir Edward Marshall-Hall, as counsel, began the examination. It was obvious that Smith had the sympathy of the courtroom as the questioning began. The defendant said he was born in Toronto in 1889. He had met his wife in October of 1918. The transcript follows:

Q. Were you very much attached to her? A. Very.

Q. When did you first come across Derham? A. About Christmas of last year.

Q. Did you become friends? A. Very great friends.

Q. Did he and your wife become friends? A. Yes.

Q. Did you go to "Llangollen" to stay? A. We went there to live.

Q. We have heard of a row between you and Derham while you were there? A. Well, there were two.

Q. Did you come to blows? A. We did.

I thought he was paying dishonorable attention to my wife.

Q. What happened? A. Derham was knocked out.

Q. Did his friendship with your wife continue? A. I have found out since that it did.

Sir Edward went on to question Smith about negotiations for a separation that were started between Smith and his wife.

Later he asked:

Q. You have heard the account given of your visit to Claverhouse (Derham's house), Herne Bay. Is that substantially correct? A. Yes.

Q. Did you destroy a good many things in the house? A. Yes.

Q. Did you find three long letters from Derham to your wife? A. Yes.

Q. At that time, had you any doubt as to the relationship between Derham and your wife? A. The letters left no doubt.

Q. Was it after that you wrote a letter to Derham beginning, "I have traced you here; you have attempted or accomplished stealing my wife?" A. I wrote that in Derham's room and put it on the mantelpiece.

SIR EDWARD continued his examination of the discovery of proof by Smith of the affair between his wife and Derham. The witness said he had found blotting paper (used only once) at Derham's house and had deciphered the words, "Very much in love, Jack." He had told Derham of this in a letter, he said, and had warned him that it was "indiscreet" to leave blotting paper around. It was following his return from Derham's home that he called Derham a "damned swine" and flatly charged him with seduction of Mrs. Smith.

Q. What was your frame of mind when you went to Mr. Harrower (the man from whom Smith borrowed the revolver by which Derham was killed)? A. I was very unsettled.

Q. Had you any intention at that time of shooting Derham? A. Not the slightest.

Q. Why did you procure the revolver. A. I was going to commit suicide.

Q. Did you show your wife the revolver? A. She saw me take it out to put it in the coal box unloaded.

Q. Did your wife make you a promise? A. She did. She said she would think it over that night and we would talk it over again the next morning.

Q. The next day, the tenth, did you talk it over? A. Yes.

Q. Was anything said to you about a separation deed or Derham? A. Yes, my wife agreed to give up Derham.

SMITH went on to say that in view of this hopeful development he had tried, on the tenth and eleventh, to sell the revolver, but had not been able to do so.

Q. That morning, the eleventh, you had written a letter to your wife? A. Yes.

The letter was as follows:

"My own adorable little wife.—You have made me happier than ever I hoped to be. I have been mad lately and in hell. Now you have given me glimpses of the heaven which with your help, my wife, I leave no stone unturned to reach.

"The mad, the criminal, folly I have been steeped in is a thing of the past from yesterday forever. You must forgive me as you forgave me last night, and, although you will learn of two reckless and foolish things I have done, they all belong to that nightmare of the past.

"I feel like a man who has been in a terrible fever, delirious and wandering, and am just waking from a deep refreshing and life-giving sleep. Do not throw a life belt to me and then draw it away at my last gasp. You have a great heart and courage. I need it always and I want it. Your words to me last night will never, never leave my memory. I could never love any one like you.

"God bless you, with all the love in my heart, your own husband. FRANK."

The reading of this letter was the high moment of the trial.

"That was an honest expression of your feelings toward your wife on Wednesday, August 11, 1926?" Sir Edward asked. Smith could not restrain his tears.

"It was," he replied. Just then the courtroom was startled by a scream. The tension had been too much for one of the woman jurors and a recess of five minutes was taken while her nerves were quieted. Smith continued his story. The next morning, the day of the killing, a letter arrived from Derham. It was, he said, a love letter. Smith said the letter had been immediately destroyed.

Q. You sent a telegram to Derham that day? Had you possession of the revolver before this? A. Yes.

Q. Did you have any lunch that day? A. No.

Q. What was your state of mind? A. It is impossible to describe.

Q. Did you send the telegram to Derham in your wife's name? A. Yes.

Q. For what purpose? A. To get Derham to Stella Maris.

Q. Why? A. I had been continually asking my wife to have Derham down so that the three of us could have a discussion.

Q. When you sent the telegram to Derham did you intend to get him there to kill him? A. I had had no bad intention at all.

Q. Why didn't you send the telegram in your own name? A. Because he wouldn't have come.

Q. Did your wife know Derham was a married man? A. Yes, she knew it all along.

Q. Where was your wife when Derham arrived? A. She went upstairs.

Q. Did you speak to Derham? A. I asked him to come inside and said we would try to settle the affair. I would not shake hands with him.

Q. Did you and he and your wife have a discussion? A. Yes.

Q. DID your wife agree to give Derham up? A. She would not give him up. She kept wandering from the point.

Q. (By Justice Avory) Was anything definitely settled about giving Derham up? A. I suggested that both Derham and I should go away for three months and that neither of us should see her.

Q. What happened after the suggestion? A. They suggested that I should go away. Derham suggested that I should go to Paris and they could divorce me there, as it was cheaper.

Q. What did you do? A. I took the pistol out of my pocket and said I would shoot myself.

Q. What happened. A. They snatched it from me and I made no attempt to keep it.

Q. What did she do with the revolver after she had put it under the tap? (Previous testimony showed that Mrs. Smith had attempted to ruin the weapon by wetting it.) A. She gave it back to me in the kitchen in the presence of Derham and my sister-in-law. She asked me to break it for her. I opened the breech and the cartridges fell to the floor. She picked up two and after I had dried the revolver I loaded it with the four cartridges and put it in my pocket.

SMITH said he had gone with Derham and his wife to a nearby hotel, where they had eaten dinner. He did not remember whether he had eaten anything or had drunk a great deal. He said that by this time he was "fed up" with the whole discussion. In his pocket at the time, he declared, was a letter revealing his intention to commit suicide.

Smith declared that back at his home his wife made up a spare bed for Derham. He admitted that he had protested that he did not intend to "have this lover of yours sleeping here." His wife had only laughed. Then Mrs. Smith and Derham went down to the living room and began to play cards. Again Smith told them that he was going to do away with himself.

Q. Did either of them appear distressed? A. No, they did not believe it.

Q. What was the next thing? A. It all happened in a flash. I was getting a chair and pulling out the revolver. The next thing that happened—all I know is there was a terrific struggle. I was struck on the head and the revolver went off, and the next thing I am absolutely conscious of was speaking to Inspector Rivers. I had a faint recollection of Barton. It was all very hazy.

Q. Have you any recollection of pulling the trigger? A. I swear I never touched the trigger.

Q. If the trigger was pulled, it was pulled in the struggle? A. It must have been.

Q. Had you any intention of shooting either Derham or your wife? A. My wife, never; nor Derham either. I might have shot myself.

Mr. Oliver, prosecuting, then began his cross-examination.

Q. (By Mr. Church) Do you think a man who behaved as Derham behaved deserved to be killed? A. I could not form any judgment upon that.

Q. Have you ever asked yourself whether Derham deserved to be killed? A. Well, if I had, I would naturally think of my little children.

Q. You have never formed any opinion whether Derham deserved to be killed? A. I do not think any man deserves to be killed.

After the jury found him innocent, Smith pleaded guilty to carrying a revolver with intent to endanger life. A sentence of 20 years was possible. Justice Avory pointed out, however, that the jury had found that the revolver had been obtained for suicide. Whatever the Court's personal opinion, he was bound by this. He then imposed a penalty of 12 months in jail.

The YEAR'S PROGRESS in SCIENCE

Latest Achievements Include 'Phone Conversations Across the Atlantic, Harnessing the Cathode Ray, and a New Process for Liquefying Coal.

Dr. William D. Coolidge, inventor of the Cathode ray tube.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

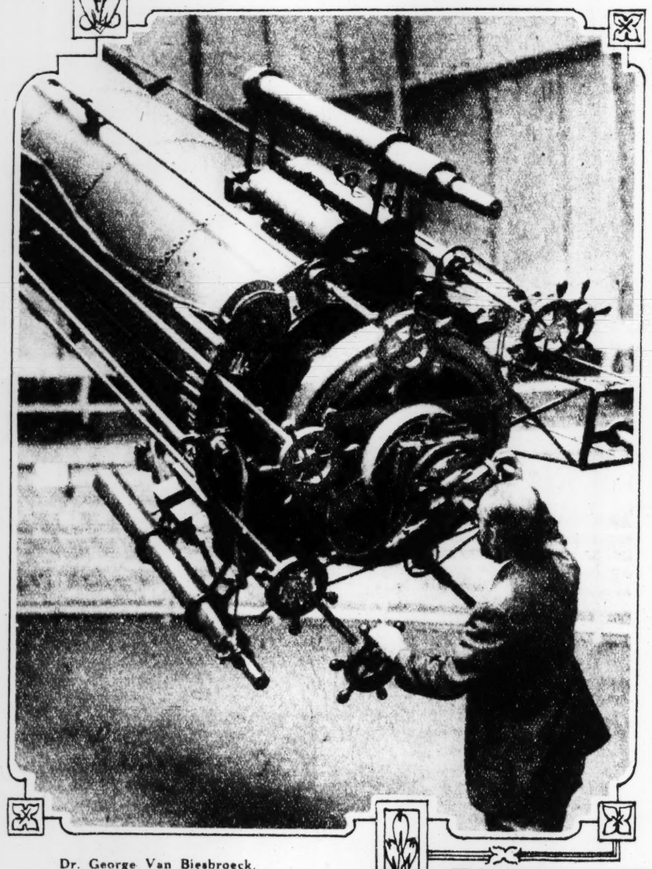
THE scientist's dreams of today are everyone's practical necessities tomorrow. At least it has happened that way in the past often enough to make the world put on its "what next?" expression as it watches scientific proceedings in laboratory and field. Fresh light on prehistoric cities that bespeak an American civilization, old when Columbus bumped into a brand new continent on his way to the Orient, missing link skulls that throw a monkey wrench into Fundamentalist conceptions of the genealogy of man, massive streams of electrons shot out of a vacuum tube through a metal plate into the air, there to perform new miracles of physics, "death whispers" of inaudible sound waves that kill, soft coal alchemized into motor fuel and alcohol, intelligence tests of world's geniuses long in the graves, and the beginning of the end of measles, are among the scientific high spots of the past year.

Many gaps in the history of man have been filled in by the spades of the archeologists and anthropologists during 1926.

The Carnegie Institution of Washington continued its study of Maya ruins in Yucatan, particularly the task of piecing together the Temple of the Warriors at Chichen Itza. In this temple the Maya artists depicted the everyday life of their time, so that the murals form an invaluable panorama of American civilization in an early age. A discovery which helps to explain the greatness of the Maya culture is that these old time Americans were strong rivals of the Romans at road building. Seven stone highways, 30 to 60 feet wide, were found, all leading to Coba, capital of a Maya empire which flourished many centuries before Columbus. At Coba itself a new ruin was discovered. This ruin is called Macanxoc, meaning "You cannot read it"—which is quite true, as writings of the Maya (except their system of recording dates) continue to puzzle science. This oldest Yucatan ruin has been described by Dr. Sylvanus Morely, director of the Maya explorations, as the outstanding discovery in Maya archaeology during the past five years. The remarkable features of Macanxoc are the eight large hieroglyphic monuments, which record dates from 354 to 413 A. D. This is evidence that Yucatan was settled by the Maya a century or a century and a half earlier than previous accounts had indicated.

ANTHROPOLOGISTS seeking remains of very ancient man probed far back into prehistory. The year's oldest relic claiming kinship with the human race was a partial cast of a skull by a Dutch physician in Java at the same place where the famous Pithecanthropus erectus bones were found in 1891. This new skull lacks the facial portion and base, so it is not a perfect specimen of head styles of 500,000 B. C. Still, the find is of great importance because if is a contemporary of Pithecanthropus, the oldest known man-like creature ever discovered.

Two mineral discoveries were reported in the United States, which will be of great importance in insuring our more complete economic independence if further investigation fulfills the indications of preliminary drillings. The first is a deposit of chromium ore near the boundary of Yellowstone National Park in Montana, said to be the greatest of its kind in the world. Chromium is of immense importance in the steel industry, and of much use also in tanning, paint-making and a number of other lines. The second important find is a series of very rich potash beds in the Panhandle region of Texas and adjacent parts of New Mexico. Indications are that a potash field exists here that may rival in size and richness the famous Strassfurt beds of Central Europe, and eventually break the foreign monopoly in this essential fertilizer material.



Dr. George Van Biesbroeck.

Perhaps the outstanding event of the year in physical science was the announcement by Dr. W. D. Coolidge, assistant director of the General Electric Company's research laboratory at Schenectady, that he had devised a new form of vacuum tube that gives off a discharge of cathode rays in the air. Cathode rays are electrons, minute electrical particles, which according to modern ideas form part of all matter. As cathode rays they move with speeds of a hundred thousand or more miles a second.

Though these rays were first investigated inside a vacuum tube over half a century ago, and were even projected into the air in small quantities by a German physicist 30 years ago, it remained for Dr. Coolidge to obtain them in such quantities that their effect on all manner of substances can be readily tested. As the cathode rays are of precisely the same nature as one of the principal radiations of radium, this suggests a possible application for the new tube. There is less than a pound of available radium in the whole world, but one of these tubes gives off as many rays as a ton of the precious stuff.

IN OPERATION, the air for perhaps a foot in front of the window glows with a bluish light. Marble and other minerals placed in the path of the rays glow brightly, though they remain stone cold. Remarkable chemical changes are produced; acetylene gas, for instance, is changed to a solid. Germs and small insects are killed by the rays almost instantly, and a brief application to the ear of a rabbit caused the hair to drop out, returning white instead of gray, and longer than the original in a few weeks. A longer exposure, however, produced a hole in the rabbit's ear, and doubtless if it had been applied to the rabbit's entire body, it would have quickly killed him. However, as the rays are limited in range to about a yard from the window with the voltage so far used, and to not more than a few yards with the highest available, the apparatus cannot possibly be used to produce a "death ray" in warfare.

Remarkable results were achieved in an entirely different portion of the fields of physics, that of sound, by Prof. R. W. Wood of the Johns Hopkins University and Alfred L. Loomis, working in the latter's private laboratory at Tuxedo Park, N. Y. Elaborating certain preliminary results that grew out of war-time experiments, they produced from electrically excited quartz crystals exceedingly short sound waves at frequencies of the order of 500,000 per second—much too short and too rapid to be audible to the human ear, whose upper limit of perception is about 20,000 sound waves per second. These waves will travel in liquids and through solids, but do not pass out into the air. Small fish and other water animals, as well as certain microscopic forms of life, are killed when exposed to the waves, which have been nicknamed the "death whisper," and blood corpuscles are destroyed, either outside the body in a test tube or in a living small animal, such as a mouse, though the latter seemed to experience no pain during the process. At a higher intensity, however, the curious investigator got an intense pain in his finger when he poked it into the water over the crystal. Experiments on the strange effects of these inaudible sound waves are still in progress.

In the field of applied physics, particularly radio, important developments were made in 1926, one of the most significant being the successful completion of two-way telephone conversation by a combination of wire and wireless between the United States and England. Telephone subscribers, as far west as Chicago, talking into their ordinary instruments, were connected in tests with a radio transmitting station at Rocky Point, Long Island. Their voices were then carried by radio to a receiving station at Wroughton, England, and were connected by wire to telephones of London subscribers. The voices of the Londoners in reply passed over wires to a transmitting station at Rugby, by radio to Houlton, Maine, and then by long distance lines back to the American speaker. This was accomplished experimentally, but it was stated that telephone communication with England was to be established before long.

ASTRONOMICALLY, the important event of the year was the close approach of the planet Mars, which, on October 27, came within 42,624,200 miles of the earth. This was closer than it had been since the summer of 1924, and closer than it will be again until 1939, and as it was farther north, it was better located for observation in northern countries, where most of the world's observatories are located, than it had been two years previously.

Switching back from celestial regions to terrestrial ones that are no less interesting because they touch nearer home, it would almost seem as if 1926 were a children's year. Almost every month, recently, psychologists at some university have set up equipment to study young children with the intent to learn the principles of early human development.

Dr. Arnold Gesell, at Yale, has shown that a normal child at the youthful age of six months can be expected to act in certain ways when confronted with a toy block, whereas a child of nine months displays more advanced activity with the same simple test material. A report from Dr. Florence Goodenough describes her study of 4000 children's drawings of their favorite art subject, a man, and tells how she worked out a quick method by which these crude imaginative portraits can be used to rate intelligence of children from 4 to 10 years old. This test is expected to be of particular use in testing deaf children and those from foreign homes.

Children have received their share of attention in matters of health this year as well as in mental development.

Medical research workers are bent on putting measles, age-old bane of childhood, in the diphtheria and scarlet fever class of preventable diseases. The past year has seen several important steps in the development of serums to head off epidemics of this most contagious of maladies. Dr. N. S. Ferry of Detroit believes he has isolated the causative germ and is hard at work proving the efficacy of a vaccine he has prepared. Serum from the blood of measles convalescents has been useful in checking epidemics in institutions for children but unfortunately the supply is never equal to the demand. Serum from the blood of goats that have been infected with the streptococcus found associated with measles by Dr. Ruth Tunnicliff of Chicago, has been found to give a fairly efficient temporary immunity. Though the immunity conferred by all the serums is short lived, they are extremely useful to stem the tide of epidemics.

The first chemical element to be isolated in America stands to the credit of 1926. Number 61 in the periodic table of the essential elements, of which all matter is made up, was first observed by spectroscopic methods at the University of Illinois by Prof. B. S. Hopkins and given the name Illinium. Two more elements reported as discovered from Germany and Czechoslovakia may be pushed back into the limbo of the still unknown as the result of work recently done at the Platinum Institute of the Russian Academy of Sciences. The Russian workers repeated the German experiment that is said to have shown the presence of Numbers 43 and 75 in platinum ores from the Urals with completely negative results.

THE alchemists' dreams are realized, but not quite in the way they would have anticipated, as the transmutation of certain elements, for instance radium, has been proved. The claim of German and Japanese investigators to have turned mercury into gold is disputed but from Berlin comes the announcement of the reversal of the alchemists' idea and the conversion of gold into the less precious mercury. Transferring to a less solid, more ethreal medium, Prof. Fritz Paneth and Dr. Peters, also of Berlin, have startled scientific circles with their claim to have transmuted hydrogen gas into helium. This phase of transmutation is still in an experimental stage and will require careful checking up, which the experimenters are now doing, before the results will be accepted by scientists as final.

One of the outstanding accomplishments of the year in the realm of chemotherapy has been the preparation of the valuable constituent of insulin in a crystalline form by Dr. James J. Abol at Johns Hopkins University. It is hoped that the study of this crystalline substance will lead to its synthetic production in the laboratory, an important step in the progressive treatment of diabetes.

Gasoline, itself the most valuable of motor fuels, may now be made from lignite, the cheapest of coals, by a direct and economical process. The inventor of this process for synthetic petroleum, Dr. Friedrich Bergius of Heidelberg, Germany, has shown that light and heavy fuel oils, lubricating oil, benzine and phenol compounds and ammonia, can be manufactured from waste coal dust or low grade coal.

THE discovery of how to convert coal into liquid products is not a lucky accident but the achievement of long and laborious scientific research, such as gave Germany the supremacy in the manufacture of indigo and other synthetic dyes before the war. Dr. Bergius began his study of the composition of coal in 1912 and except for the interruption of the war the investigation has been carried continuously on ever since at the cost of millions of dollars.

The essential principle of the process consists in combining hydrogen gas with coal by means of high heat and pressure. The coal is first ground into small pieces less than a tenth of an inch in diameter, and then mixed with heavy oil to a thick pasty mass. This is placed in a light steel retort and heated to about 800 degrees Fahrenheit under a pressure of about 3000 pounds per square inch.

Another process for getting coal into a liquid form has been developed in France by General Georges Patart and in Germany by Dr. Franz Fischer, Director of the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for Coal Research. The first step in this process is to get the carbon into a gaseous form, which is easily done by passing steam over the hot coals of coal. The product is "water-gas," a mixture of hydrogen and carbon monoxide, the deadly gas that is given off by running an automobile engine in a closed garage. Adding more hydrogen and passing the mixture at high pressure and temperature over a metallic oxide acting as a catalyst, the carbon, hydrogen and oxygen combine to form methanol or a variety of other compounds of these three elements.

Lady Sholto Douglas Marries Again

By GUY FORSHEY

Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

LADY SHOLTO DOUGLAS still pursues her destiny as Europe's most married woman. Her skill is actually becoming an art. She is acquiring new husbands and getting rid of them nowadays at a rate to cause Mrs. Jean Nash and Peggy Joyce to tilt their noses and say catty things out of professional jealousy. Perhaps it is not entirely correct to say that Lady Douglas gets rid of her husbands. Not always. On one recent occasion, at least, it worked the other way around. But the important fact is that she gets her freedom back and, getting her freedom back, proceeds to use it as most other marital freedom seekers do. She gets married again.

The last time Lady Douglas got married—it was just a few days ago—she married Comte Fernand Bertier de Sauvigny and thereby established herself as a member of the French royal house, whatever that is. De Sauvigny, it seems, is a cousin of the late Duke of Orleans, "legitimist King of France." The lady likes to dabble with royalty and nobility and that sort of thing. It is her specialty. The time before she married Sauvigny she married Prince Mahammed Burhan-ed-Din, son of the late Sultan Abdul Hamid of Turkey. The time before that she married Lord Sholto Douglas, son and brother of successive Marquises of Queensberry. The time before that, oh, well—

Three or four divorces ago, Lady Douglas—she is still called Lady Douglas because she's got to have some kind of permanent address— a few marriage ceremonies back, Lady Douglas was Miss Georgina Leonora Mosselmans, of The Hague, Holland. Just plain Miss Mosselmans, a nice, unsophisticated Dutch girl. She was the daughter of R. F. H. Mosselmans, a rich Jewish merchant, and still is. She could ill afford not to be while experimenting with such costly business as royal matchmaking. The Turk especially was an expensive luxury. He set her back at least 500,000 francs. And it was the same way with Lord Sholto Douglas, who was a mere noble. An unalterable prerequisite for a title seeker is a parent who can pay the bills. That is what Miss Mosselmans had. Her father married the heiress of a Dutch East Indian multi-millionaire and was thus well fortified to bear up under the strain of a titled daughter. And besides the family bankroll to use as a sort of guarantee fund, the girl had considerable means of her own. Forty million dollars was the fortune her grandfather left and she, with her brother, came in for a goodly portion of it. She also is said to have benefited largely under the will of an aunt who left another $25,000,000. Thus she was qualified by Fate for a career of spectacular marrying.

BUT WITH all this equipment, it was some time before she hit her real stride. You see, she was at first just an unsophisticated Dutch girl and didn't realize how many titles she could buy with all that money. So the first time she got married she married a British army officer named Barnard. So much has happened since then that the event is almost forgotten now and nobody seems to know much about this first husband. However, it is said vaguely that he was of a good county and army family, but that the marriage didn't pan out happily. He was only a Captain anyway. And being Mrs. Captain Somebody didn't make much impression on society. Somehow, nobody suspected that a mere Captain's wife amounted to so very much or had so much money. So when she became sophisticated and got a divorce a short time later she didn't retain either the title or the name. She started out again as Georgina Mosselmans, not much poorer financially and a lot richer in experience and ambition.

She was all set to capture a real title when, in 1921, she ran across Lord Sholto Douglas somewhere and married him. Where it was she met him is not clear now, but probably it was somewhere a nice Dutch girl had no business being. She wouldn't have met him otherwise. Lord Sholto Douglas was a notorious roue. He could get into more amorous mixups in a given period than Frank Lloyd Wright and Crown Prince Carol working together. True, he was a son of the eighth Marquis of Queensberry, but that didn't do much to improve his social status or his credit in England, where he was best known. So was Lord Alfred Douglas a son of the same Marquis, for that matter, and look at what a reputation he had. Indeed, Lord Alfred's ill fame in connection with the Oscar Wilde scandal became so rank that even his brother Sholto couldn't face it and had to come to America to save his "good name." Apparently he saved it by changing it to S. G. D. Montgomery, which was the name he was using when he married his first wife.

THE FIRST wife was either Loretta Mooney or Lorna Leslie, or both. Anyway, she was a dancer in a cheap restaurant in Baker, Oregon, when he met her and made her the first Lady Sholto Douglas in return for the living which she made for him. After a shooting scrape in Spokane he took her to England, where they lived together at intervals until his escapades became so scandalous that she got the habit, too, and eloped with an artist. He got a divorce in 1920, a move which left him out of a wife to support him and compelled him to go out and sell the title again.

Georgina Mosselmans, then cutting a wide swath in London society following her divorce, seemed a likely prospect. He started paying court. It is said he had to propose four times before she finally accepted him, but she did accept him and their marriage was marked by the most lavish display. There was also some church dissent. Lady Georgina was a Catholic and the Catholic Church refused to recognize the divorces of both parties. However, this difficulty was somehow ironed out and Georgina Mosselmans-Barnard became the second Lady Sholto Douglas—after presenting her husband with a dowry that equipped him for several years of serious spending. He settled down to it in earnest and Lady Sholto settled up his debts. That went on for three years. Lady Douglas becoming daily more ambitious for a loftier title and more weary of the aging man who had exacted such a large price for the one she had. She also grew weary of his amorous adventures. She was 34 and sprightly and not disposed to put up with much foolishness from an old man, so she spoke to him about a divorce. He was agreeable to the idea and co-operated in a most accommodating manner. It is said that he spent a week at a hotel with a young blonde and then sent Lady Douglas the bill to use as evidence and, incidentally, to pay.

Prince Burhan-ed-Din.

The daughter of Merchant Mosselmans never figured much in the news until she married a lord. She figured quite a lot then but not nearly so much as she did when she got the divorce. It caused a lot of talk that a marriage never had any chance of causing and a large number of good people were terribly shocked, or said they were. The Magistrate who heard the case was, anyway. And he had some mighty hard words to say about the state of morals among "one or two of the nobility." On the hotel-blonde evidence presented he readily granted Lady Douglas her freedom and she set to work at once to get rid of it.

CELEBRATING her dismissal of Lord Sholto, she took a trip to Monte Carlo, where rich divorcees like to go to forget their troubles. If she married again, she declared, it would be for love only. Probably that was the reason she went to Monte Carlo. In the Casino there, of course, she would be almost certain to run across some serious-minded young man with no spendthrift habits, the kind of young man who would want and appreciate a home. Prince Mohammed Burhan-ed-Din, sitting at the roulette tables and squandering the last francs of the banished imperial family of Turkey, must have appealed to her as just that sort of young man. She was certain, too, that the strong attraction which he exercised upon her was really love. He was, oh, so romantic, my dear, so dark and mysterious and Oriental looking.

She sat beside him there night after night and watched him lose until he had lost his coffee and sandwich money and then she staked him. While he was losing this he told her in confidence how poor he was; what miserable misfortune had fallen upon him three years before when the imperial family was chased out of Turkey; how, through no fault of his own, the family fortune had dwindled until he didn't have a week's board left. But he would have money yet, he assured her. The Mosul oil fields were going to be sold and he would get a real fortune out of that. Lady Douglas was sympathetic and so impressed that she at once consented to marry him and finance him until those oil fields were put on the market. She may have taken some stock, too, in his story that he would be Sultan of Turkey when the League of Nations got going and fixed things up for him. Then she, necessarily, would be the Sultana, but he didn't say which one she would be or for how long.

APPARENTLY the Lady thought nothing of his insistence that the marriage be performed by Mohammedan rites. Had she taken a little time to get acquainted with her Prince she might have. But she was sophisticated now and thought she could hold her own with any man although she didn't know anything about Moslem weddings as she was afterwards to admit to her sorrow.

The trouble was that Lady Douglas, with all her sophistication, was yet a mere amateur at the marriage business, while Prince Burhan was a professional. He had a past as dark as his skin. Darker. To begin with, his father before him, the old Sultan Abdul Hamid, was a bloody and treacherous rogue. He was called the "Red Sultan" because of his tendency to massacre Armenians. That, of course, was before Michael Arlen wrote "These Charming People" and before Armenians were thought to amount to much. But he was a villainous rascal just the same, so much feared and hated, in fact, that his ministers would never sit on chairs in his presence. Once when a parrot called a eunuch into the chamber, it is said, he strangled the bird with the remark that "nobody gives orders around here but the Sultan."

Much is said about Prince Burhan, therefore, when it is stated he was Abdul Hamid's favorite son and a man after the old Sultan's heart. Abdul thought he was the shrewdest and most efficiently unscrupulous of all the Turkish princes. Several years back he had named Burhan as Nahim of Turkey, which was substantially making him assistant Sultan, with the right of succession to the throne. That move, however, had angered the liberal element and they had driven Abdul from the throne and Burhan-ed-Din out of the country. Burhan had then taken up residence in Paris and Vienna and lived in luxury while the old Sultan was dying in exile. He lived in luxury by means of his numerous and skillful mock marriages. Moslem marriages. He made a specialty of rich divorcees and when the wise Lady Sholto Douglas invaded Monte Carlo he saw her coming.

SHE walked like a lamb into the wolf's den and, when the bridegroom got a Mohammedan priest to mutter something and tell them they were married, she was satisfied. She turned over 400,000 Swiss francs to him as a dowry and also paid for a luxurious apartment, in which they lived for a time in Vienna. Then she got to wondering what it was the Mohammedan priest had said and wondering also if it would not be wiser to have a civil wedding under English law. When she mentioned that to the Consul in Vienna she got her first disillusionment in the Burhan experiment. He told her that by her marriage to a Moslem she had forfeited her English citizenship and therefore had no recourse to British courts. She went to London on a visit about that time and when she returned she found out a lot more about Monte Carlo romances that she didn't know before, but thought she did.

She found herself locked out of the apartment which was being paid for with her money. The Prince wasn't there, but his valet refused her admittance and sent her belongings to a hotel, where she stayed for several days before she found out what it was all about, if anything. Then she got this note which set her straight:

"I am annulling our marriage because I am unhappy. After everything that has happened since then, this is very tragic. It is impossible for me to continue to live with you. It would be a catastrophe. On the first of the month (that was November, 1925) I declare our marriage annulled."

She had been summarily dismissed.

Her appeal to the Hungarian, French and British courts did little good. She had been married under the Mohammedan custom and therefore could be divorced under it. That could be accomplished by the husband merely through repeating three times, "You are not my wife." Indeed, Prince Burhan alleged that he regarded the marriage as only a "second-class" affair from the start. Under the Turkish law he could divorce a "second-class" wife and "send her back to her family" whenever he pleased. He did, anyway.

The "Princess" tried to show then that it was a false priest who performed the ceremony, but she couldn't prove this. The testimony of such distinguished witnesses as Prince Franz Johan Leichtenstein, the Polish Ambassador, Count Karl Remer, Count Kunenfeld and Baron Wettenstaetten, was that the marriage was regular under the Moslem law, and, so far as they could see, perfectly serious. The courts, therefore, refused to interfere and Lady Douglas was out about half a million francs.

She agreed to the divorce and announced she would resume her former name of Lady Sholto Douglas. She was through with the Prince, she said, and also his title. What she hated most about the whole business, she intimated, was that some rich American woman had probably been the cause of it. She had made a lot of American society women furious when she married him, she said. They had been "angling" for him and now she was sure one of them had alienated his affections by promising to finance the Prince in his efforts to recapture the Turkish throne. She was always suspicious of Americans, anyway.

Thus disappointed in her hope of getting an Eastern crown, Lady Georgina declared she was tired of matrimonial experiments. "If I marry again," she said, "it will be for love only." Where had that been heard before?

NOTHING more was heard of Lady Douglas for nine or ten months and then came the news everybody had expected would come sooner or later. She was engaged to marry somebody else. This time it was a Frenchman. She would change nationality again. It seems the aristocratic family of De Sauvigny denied the report at first because the two had only known each other for two months, but after a fortnight's "engagement," they were married at a London register office. The Comte gave his age as 29 and the bride admitted to 36. Just how much dowry she advanced has not yet been disclosed, but the general belief is that the Comte, related as he is to a "royal" family, will get his share of the Mosselmans' bankroll. At present, it seems, he is not rated very highly as a capitalist. But that doesn't matter so much. His title and estates are very ancient. Very, very ancient.

Mrs. Dumbly

Tag Day.
The Forgotten Blank.
The Curious Truck Driver.
Getting the Gaseater's Number.

TAG, you're it! You certainly are it! You've taken a whole day from my life when I really didn't feel that I needed you at all!

Yesterday I bought the Gaseater a new tag, though, as far as I could see, she was running just as well on the old one. But Attie, my husband, who usually buys all the percolators and main springs and whatever the car needs, was unable to go down after it, so he sent me! When I don't know a carburetor from a music roll!

He had given me a slip of paper upon which he'd written all sorts of information about the car. Remembering this—when I got down to the automobile pound, I didn't stop at the desk where people were writing down all sorts of information about their cars, but stepped right into line and climbed some long stairs with a lot of people who moved so slowly that the high heels on my pumps felt like spikes sticking into my feet.

Up at the top of the stairs a reception committee was awaiting us with a man at the head of it—who, like the recording angel on the judgment day, was sending people to the right and to the left. I hesitated because I didn't know which way to go.

"Can I help you, lady?" he asked.

"Where shall I go?" I inquired.

"Does your husband belong to the automobile club?"

"I don't think that's any of your business," I said. "My husband has nothing to do with my buying a tag."

"You don't seem to have filled out your blank," he said. "You'll have to fill out a blank."

My face was a blank as I answered him: "What? Where do I go?"

"Back downstairs," he answered with an imperturbable smile.

BY THIS time I was thoroughly angry! "How perfectly ridiculous," I said. "No wonder they say our political machinery is complex. I understand now just what they mean!"

I understood even better when I got downstairs and they insisted on giving me three blanks instead of one. There were yellow and white blanks but I selected the yellow because it has always been my favorite color—and somehow I felt more cheerful as I stepped back into line between two truck drivers.

I couldn't understand the numbers Attie had written out for me. Before one of his figures he had written H. P. How was I to know what that might mean! It might be hydrogen peroxide or most anything!

In thinking of all this as I made my way upstairs I almost forgot my aching feet and that I was jammed in amongst all those men until I noticed that one of the truck drivers was looking at me curiously. It seemed to me that he was studying my hand. I thought I knew what that meant! He was looking to see if I wore a wedding ring, and if I didn't he was going to try to flirt with me. His way of trying to pick up an acquaintance was as blundering as such attempts always are.

"Do you drive a truck?" he asked.

I didn't know just what he meant but I was simply furious! Gazing straight ahead of me, I attempted to ignore him, but he spoke to me again!

"Do you drive a truck!"

I was so infuriated that I stepped out of line and went right over to the head of the reception committee.

"That man is annoying me," I told him. "And my husband isn't here."

"Is your husband a truck driver?"

"No," I said, my voice weak from anger and exhaustion. "He is not! He is a—"

"You had the wrong blank. The yellow blanks are for trucks. Go downstairs and get a white blank."

And so I went downstairs and got three white blanks and wrote down on them all the figures Attie had given me. I only changed one thing. While I was writing, two women in back of me were brakking about their big cars. I didn't want everybody to know that we just had a Gaseater, so I wrote down Hodgepodge super six, eight cylinder. And I fell into line again, feeling like an old trooper.

The girl at the desk was horrid about my blanks when I gave them to her. "There's a mistake of some sort," she said. "You have horsepower 628,282. That couldn't be right."

"It is," I replied. "My husband wrote that for me!"

BUT SHE insisted until a nice man in the crowd looked at my blanks and explained that I'd gotten the horsepower mixed with the present license number and that the horse was 22. But a Hodgepodge super six isn't 22 horsepower," he said. "I'll just change that to 60."

"Twenty dollars," said the cashier.

"But my husband said it would be eight dollars," I said, bewildered.

"That's right for the Hodgepodge super six," she said coldly, and just then a man who owned a car just like ours stepped up to the window and I heard her say "eight dollars."

Then I understood and I went downstairs—yes, I went downstairs again and filled out three more blanks.

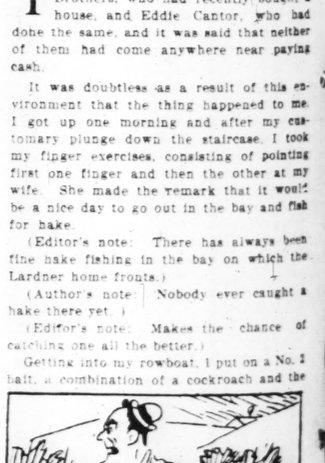
Timely Demise of Our Hero.

BEFORE recounting the accident that led to my rather timely death, it will be necessary to describe the locale of our Great Neck home and to name and picture a few of our then neighbors. As is perhaps known to a few of my less dumb readers, Great Neck is something of a literary and theatrical center.

Not far from us, on Cow Lane, lived Ed Streeter, author of the "Dere Mable" letters, for which I received many congratulations. In "the Estates" resided Sam Hellman, writer of short stories and inventor of the popular dessert, "Rind Wine," consisting of watermelon soaked in champagne.

It got noised about that Emma and I had chow every Sunday about 1 o'clock and three or four platoons of our neighbors



Company, having gone breakfastless owing to the sleeping prowess of mine host and hostess, acquired the quaint habit of dropping in at our haunch at about that hour and making complimentary remarks about our children. When this ruse had been seen through at the expense of several fragments of chicken and cups of coffee, Emma stamped out the practice by posting a sign which read, "Try Our Table d'Hote Meals—$3.00."

In other parts of our village lived Bobby North, of the original Floradora Sextette; Ed Wynn, female impersonator; Raymond Hitchcock, soft shoe hoofer; Joe, Santley, trap and drums; Arthur Hopkins, eccentric dancer; Sam Harris, the bridge authority; Ernest Truex, the Welsh comic; Oscar Shaw, gigolo; Frank Craven, the Tattooed Man; Bob Woolsey, proprietor of the Flea Circus; Tad Dorgan, designer of farm implements, and Thomas Meighan, "Is It a Man or Wolf?"

TO SAY nothing of one of the Marx Brothers, who had recently bought a house, and Eddie Cantor, who had done the same, and it was said that neither of them had come anywhere near paying cash.

It was doubtless as a result of this environment that the thing happened to me. I got up one morning and after my customary plunge down the staircase, I took my finger exercises, consisting of pointing first one finger and then the other at my wife. She made the remark that it would be a nice day to go out in the bay and fish for hake.

(Editor's note: There has always been fine hake fishing in the bay on which the Lardner home fronts.)

(Author's note: Nobody ever caught a hake there yet.)

(Editor's note: Makes the chance of catching one all the better.)

Getting into my rowboat, I put on a No. 2 hait, a combination of a cockroach and the kind of salad they serve you in hospitals. I thought perhaps a hake would eat it, as nobody else would. I had hardly made my first cast when—

(Editor's note: At this point the author's memoirs are abruptly terminated. The Coroner's jury brought in a verdict of "death by being hit in the stomach by a hake.")

(Author's note: Or death from stomach hake.)

"Say, I've heard o' you. Seen a piece i[n] paper 'bout your accident. For gosh sak[es] come into my office!"

He turned up the lamp, for the sun w[as] now sinking and the place was full of sh[a]ows. He brought out his pipe mechanically.

"So you quit ridin'?" he demanded.

"Yes, sir. I had to. When I get in a [mi]dle now—and the horse starts runnin[g] something back in my head stops workin[g]. The boy's lips quivered. "They say I've [got] my nerve... I dunno. THE SUNSET DERBY

By WILLIAM DUDLEY PELLEY

ABONY, undersized young man with a slight limp in his left leg, shuffled into the yard of our Vermont town livery stable one afternoon in the summer which has passed, and found Uncle Joe Fodder washing a buggy. He visibly summoned his courage to ask:

"Are you Mr. Fodder? Do you run these stables?"

Uncle Joe slopped his chamois in a five-gallon pail and twisted it dry. "I do," he said. "What you after, a rig?"

"No, sir. A job."

"So you quit ridin'?" he demanded.

"Yes, sir. I had to. When I get in a saddle now—and the horse starts running—something back in my head stops working." The boy's lips quivered. "They say I've lost my nerve. I dunno. I went down into Kentucky last year and tried my best to 'come back.' But 'twasn't any use. I might take up something else, of course, but—I can't, I can't."

"You got any folks?"

"Guess you could sleep in my barn if you got no other place to go. Come along with me, anyhow, out to the cart. We'll swallow some beans and talk things over."

THE next night the Daily Telegraph carried a story of Jockey Wade's appearance in Paris. Old horsemen from all over the country stopped at the red barns out behind the Whitney House, to make the youthful celebrity's acquaintance. But the younger generation took his advent with its tongue in its cheek.

The young-buck element looked on Barnaby Wade as a freakish vagrant with a streak of yellow.

Subconsciously, too, the rest of the community entertained a vague contempt for an international celebrity who could descend to washing rigs and cleaning stables. And yet there was pathos in the way he worked over Uncle Joe's three remaining mares.

For a month he did it and Uncle Joe contrived to spare him eight dollars a week. He made himself a bed in the odorous office. Once, when a Percheron became cast in the early hours, he disclosed that he knew more about raising her than Doc Rickley, the local veterinary.

One morning his couch was vacant. He was mysteriously absent all day. An hour before sunset he came scuffling into the yard, his clothing torn, and blood on his face.

Moreover, he was pulling after him the most pathetic horse that ever furnished a $12 hide for Caleb Gridley's tannery—a rakish black horse of uncertain years that vaguely resembled a camel.

"Where on earth have you been?" demanded Uncle Joe. "And where did you get hold o' that?"

Wade led the animal into the barn. It tried to lie down, but the boy trussed a surcingle under its belly and hitched it to a rafter rope.

"I been in a fight," he responded. "I beat up a gink named Levering."

"You beat up a gink named what?"

"Jacob Levering. He was trying to kill this poor plug with stones."

"You beat up Jake Levering? Where?"

"Out west of town. I heard that a man named Nesbitt run a stock farm out toward Barre. I thought I could get a better paying job out there. But Nesbitt wasn't home, and I spent the day about his place, talking with his men. Then I started walking back. I got along by that swell estate up on the hill—the Levering place—and found a wop junkman had tried to camp on old Levering's property. This Levering'd come down to order him off. They got in a fuss. First I knew, Levering was basting this plug with a cane"——

"I thought you said stones?"

"That was afterward. The junkman couldn't get his plug to travel. So he runs off for help, and the horse lies down. Levering probably meant for the wop to find a dead horse, when he come back—just for spite. Anyhow, he hoisted a good-sized rock to bash in its head, when I come along and hit him. We had a sweet time. I think he's crazy."

"Son, when you're rotten rich you ain't crazy, merely eccentric. Did you lick him?"

"He'll spend the next two weeks keeping appointments with a dentist's chair, anyhow. I got the horse on his feet and kept him on 'em until—well, here he is!"

"And Jake let you get away with it?"

"HE COULDN'T help himself. A girl saw most of it—some sort of relation of his, I guess. She came into town with me and went to see the Chief of Police, to tell him how it happened."

"What sort o' looking girl?"

"About my size and age. Wears her hair in a braid. Big brown eyes."

"Must be Lettie Appleton, old Jake's stepdaughter. He hates the sight of her, I've heard. What became o' the wop?"

"I dunno. But I couldn't stand and watch this poor plug get his head stove in. Say, is Levering rich? And what made him dippy?"

"He swiped an invention from a guy named Prescott. Cleaned up a million. Prescott shot himself. Levering came back here and built himself that place on the hill."

"She's his stepdaughter, you said?"

"Bullied his first wife, Levering did till she was glad to die, some said. Married a second, younger'n him, who already had this daughter, Lettie. Got herself killed in a wreck and left Levering stuck with the girl. Uses her pretty nasty, like all his women folks"—— Uncle Joe stopped. The girl herself was coming into the yard.

"I told Chief Hogan everything," she announced. "How's the horse now?"

"That's just what I got to find out," said Barnaby.

Through the ensuing hour, Uncle Joe Fodder was merely a spectator. But he was content to be merely a spectator. For he saw more than an equine hat-rack salvaged. He saw color begin to come and go on the Appleton girl's face, as she watched the ex-jockey treat the beast's sores and get him into a stall. Wade commenced grooming him as the blowzy old camel had not been groomed in years.

"Mr. Fodder, this horse has got points," he contended. "Come in here and look."

"I saw that right off." Uncle Joe agreed. "Fore feet look sound. Got a first-class head, but he ain't got much wind."

"It may be only starvation."

"Sorry. Don't think so. I'm afraid his wind's broke."

The girl cried in alarm: "It isn't anything he's got to be killed for, is it—broken wind?"

"No, no," laughed the hostler. "An' then o' course, he may not be as bad off as he looks."

There were tears in the girl's eyes.

"I'm crazy about horses," she told the two huskily. "My daddy was a horseman. I can't stand to see them abused. I guess it's in my blood."

"This horse ain't gonna be abused any more, if I can help it," Barney vowed.

"But you don't own him, son," warned Fodder. "Sooner or later that wop'll come lookin' for him."

There was anxiety in the girl's voice as she turned and cried: "How much do you think he is worth?"

"Twenty-five dollars would be $15 too much."

"I've got $25. I've got a hundred." She grasped Wade's elbow. "You wait here. I'll go back to the house and get it. If that Italian shows up, we'll buy him together."

Lettie Appleton was back with some banknotes. The Italian came with her. She had picked him up and brought him in, so that Uncle Joe and Barnaby might do the trading. Thirty-six dollars they finally agreed on.

Then the boy and girl worked over the horse till long after 10 o'clock.

"I got a hunch this horse has been a racer in his day," said Wade. "But if his wind's bad, like Fodder says, he's off the track for keeps. Besides, he's pretty old."

"I think he's beautiful!" the girl declared.

And before she left she went into the stall where the lucky animal dozed, and clasped her arms around his neck. Fodder told us about it in the newspaper office next day.

"Struck me she acted heartsick for somethin' to love. Guess there ain't been much love wasted on her out to Levering's place."

"A woman could do lots worse things than love a horse," remarked Sam Hod, the editor.

AND so, introduced by a hapless horse, drawn closer together each day as they gradually brought the beast back, boy and girl began to love each other—as pretty and poignant a little affair as our community ever witnessed.

Then, suddenly, before the village was really aware of the depth of their attachment, Paris came down to its business one morning to discover that they had married.

An extra harsh bit of bullying on the stepfather's part had been responsible. He had heard of his foster daughter's interest in horses and in Wade; and the truth of the matter was that the retired capitalist, with nothing but his country place and memories to occupy his mind, was slowly losing it.

"We've decided to rent the old Pumpton place," Barney announced the next day. "Lettie's done with that stepfather of hers—she doesn't want anything more to do with him whatever."

"The Pumpton place!" cried Uncle Joe. "Nine miles out in that hollow?"

"Well, we can get it for nothing—if we'll plow over the mowing and let Jane Pumpton have the new hay."

"But how the two of you ever gonna support yourselves out there? There ain't another house within five or six miles."

"There's a sugar orchard on it. And all kinds of land for garden. And there's three big henhouses, too. We might make money with chickens."

"But you two kids can't live way off there!"

"Well, we got Black Bullet to go back and forth with—if I could only buy one of those old buggies and some harness from you, on time."

"Black Bullet! Is that what you call your plug?"

"Yeah. Lettie and Black Bullet and I will get along fine; I been knocking around so much that any kind of a roost is welcome now. And we aren't starting any smaller than lots of folks start. It's like a first-rate adventure, Lettie says, seeing how fast we can work up and get ourselves ahead!"

BUT this is not a tale of love in a cottage. It is the tale of a horse. A salvaged horse, Black Bullet. And it means to ponder the question: Do horses have souls?

Jess Somers, who owns another livery 20 miles eastward over the mountains, entered the newspaper office one afternoon last fall.

"Came around by the Crossing this noontime," he announced. "Met a girl off over there, ridin' a hoss. Looked like Jake Levering's kid."

"Guess it must be," answered Sam. "But I didn't know she rode saddle."

"Darned perty picture she made if you ask me. And that hoss of hers was a beaut. Must be a thoroughbred, the way he lifted his feet and shook his tail."

"Barney Wade give $36 for that old plug. Regular fodder and kind treatment did the rest. There's horses like that, just the same as there's people. But Joe says the beast is mostly looks. Can't run far without choking like old Zach Haskell with his asthma."

"How'd old Levering take the elopement?"

"Couldn't do much. Old Jacob's bad. They've took his auto license away. Won't let him drive any more like he used to, he's that resentful of folks in the streets who won't move out of his way."

Summer came and went. Word drifted into the office that the Wades had banked the sills of their house against the cold weather ahead.

"Must be they're makin' a go of it," admitted Uncle Joe, "seein' they're preparin' to stay out there through snow time. Mebbe I'll drive out there Saturday and see how they're comin'."

"Stop in and pick me up, too," the editor begged.

The two made the trip in one of Uncle Joe's buggies. At the end of the wood tract, a mile from the Pumpton place, the narrow road they were following turned sharply westward. "There's an auto comin' somewheres with its cut-out open," the editor contended. "It must be on ahead."

"Hope we clear that turn, so it don't catch us in this narrow road," and Uncle Joe slapped the mare's rump sharply with one rein.

Closer they drew to the turn. They almost made it. But a ponderous limousine was hurtling down that back road, drawing closer and closer. Out over the highway some sumacs hung, screening them from the driver's sight.

They also hid another from that driver's sight. Squarely on the turn a woodland road struck in. Out of it came Lettie Wade, loping gently on the salvaged thoroughbred.

"My heaven!" old Fodder cackled, wildly. "What's the matter with that feller? Don't he see we're all in a jam?"

Either the driver didn't see, or he had no care. Uncle Joe's buggy went off in the ditch. Black Bullet sprang as the car veered clumsily. Came a woman's wild cry, the snort of a horse. One heart-throttling crash sounded through those leafless autumn woods. A tree took the shock as the car turned to junk, and a human body, a woman's body, shot through the air and and went out of sight under sumac and alders.

"You old fool!" cried Fodder, crawling unhurt to the road. "Whatta you mean, tootin' through these narrow roads at any such speed as that?"

But Jacob Levering never answered. The terrific impact of the car against the tree had snapped his neck.

"Barney's wife thrown!" Fodder cried crazily. "I seen her go into them bushes."

Sam Hod ran forward with Uncle Joe to the undergrowth. In leaping clear of the danger the girl's horse had unseated her. Yet, strange to relate, the horse had not bolted.

"Great guns! There's a stone pile in there!" old Fodder groaned. "She's landed plumb on it, and ain't moved."

"Let's lift her out in the road."

White-faced, they did so. "Is she dead?" whispered Sam.

"No; but injured mighty bad. Some mess old Jake's kicked up to mark his passin'! Thought they'd took away his license?"

"Probably got the car out regardless!"

Uncle Joe was kneeling beside the girl, upon whose scalp was a clot of blood.

"You better try to get Barney. Somebody's gotta go for help."

"Don't have to get him. He's comin'!"

Uncle Joe glanced up. Down the grade the young husband was racing as fast as his handicapped knee would permit him.

"Lettie!" he cried wildly, dropping beside her.

"Jake's dead! Broke his neck. What was he doin' here?" the hostler demanded.

"He was after Lettie. Claimed if he found her he was goin' to take her away from me. Couldn't find her, and started off this way. I followed as best I could, 'cause I knew she was somewheres over here on Black Bullet."

"Son, she's gotta have a doctor."

"I know it. Oh, oh, oh!" The boy was sobbing bitterly.

"Better not move her," Sam advised. "Best bring a doctor here—or an ambulance."

"There's no ambulance nearer than the Putney Hospital," argued Joe Fodder.

"Somebody's gotta go after the ambulance and lug her to the hospital before she dies, do you hear, Barney?"

"You go after it. I can't leave her so!"

"The auto's smashed. So's the buggy. Nothin's left but your horse here. Don't you understand? Barney, what's the matter with you?"

"You go! Take Black Bullet. You go!"

"I ain't rid on a horse saddle for nearly 40 year!"

"I couldn't stick on a horse 20 yards," added Sam.

"Barney! Pay attention! Here's a horse with a saddle. Here's you, an ex-jockey. You gotta go for that ambulance."

THE boy looked up. Joe's hectic suggestion penetrated his dazed understanding.

"I can't ride any more. Besides, Black Bullet couldn't make it!"

A queer thing happened.

Sam Hod felt something bunt him. Another bunt thrust Joe Fodder aside.

Black Bullet had stalked close to them. With nostrils to the ground, he commenced to snort curiously about Lettie's prostrate body.

Up to her head he snuffed, his twitching muzzle reaching her face, nostrils smelling the blood of her wound. Twice he raised his shapely head and looked up and down the road, cocking his steel-shell ears. Then back he came again, snuffing about the body. Sam and Old Joe looked on, wide-eyed.

"Barney," cackled Fodder, "take the horse. And ride, boy, ride!"

"But I"——

"Look it! He's pawin'!"

Black Bullet was pawing. The whites of his eyes were showing.

"Barney, Barney! He's willin' to do his stuff if you'll do yours! Pull yourself together."

The horse pranced excitedly. Barney staggered up.

"I can't stay on a horse! Somethin' in the back of my head"——

"Can't you stick to old Bullet for the girl you both love?"

"And so, introduced by a hapless horse, drawn closer each day as they gradually brought the beast back, boy and girl began to love each other."

The boy sobbed again. He caught at Bullet's stirrup to steady himself. Bullet pranced lightly without moving from his place. He nickered then, a high, eager nicker that echoed through those woodlands like a battle cry. And all the time the lad fought his broken nerve with a desperation that was piteous.

"Help me up," he choked at last. "My strength is all gone. I'm empty inside!"

Sam leaped forward. He hoisted the lad into the saddle. Again Bullet nickered.

"Shorten these stirrups!" the boy begged brokenly; "I'm not used to riding like this! Shorten these stirrups!"

With arched neck, Black Bullet kept quiet as both older men pulled clumsily at buckles. But he champed at his bit. The whites of his eyes showed wilder and wilder.

"All right, Barney?"

"I guess so."

"Leg it!"

The boy shut his eyes. He clutched at the horn with steel-hook fingers. "All right, old fellow," he whispered huskily. And if ever a dumb brute understood human speech, Black Bullet understood his rider in that moment.

He took a gentle leap forward to give Barney the movement. Then he settled down on his haunches and sprang into the air. Down that country road sounded a staccato beating of horse's hoofs.

On a sunset derby for the life of a dying girl, a veteran among thoroughbreds was going into action!

DOWN turn after turn, over bridges and water bars, around curve after curve, out across level open spaces, up heart-rending grades, down the other sides where one false step meant death for them both—a coal-black steed with mane and tail flying, ears laid back against his neck, nostrils dilated, leaped the ground like a juggernaut of disaster.

Past Bray's timber tract, past Lyon's sawmill, up Blake Hill, that took his wind pitilessly, down toward Walsh Brook, the charcoal kilns and Frank Hale's farm, tore the most beautiful thing in all creation—a flying thoroughbred with every muscle co-ordinated, every sense turned to speed, and yet more speed; every nerve and fiber strained for that race of races—a contest with death.

Round the two curves by Babcock's and Drinkwater's, down the slight grade by No. 4 Schoolhouse, into the Lake road and on toward Cobb Hill, that horse called Bullet lived up to his name. And Barney hung on.

Barney hung on, indeed! Well enough he knew, before a quarter-mile had gone, that the horse he had salvaged had been bred to the race tracks. On and on and on! Down Cobb Hill, away past McDermott's, around Harrington's Bog—and a strange, new exhilaration was seizing Barney.

Afraid to ride? On the back of Black Bullet? He rode as he never had ridden in his life. Black Bullet stumble? Black Bullet throw him? Not while the great horse lived. Not in a thousand years.

Yet it seemed a thousand years—that ride.

On past Harper's, Winslow's, Merritt's . . . up another heart-rending grade by Cogswell's . . . scattering a flock of ducks by Braithwaite's . . . rounding the Half-mile Curve by the railroad crossing . . . heart-strained, wind going, still Black Bullet held to that contest. His veins stood out on his coat like whipcords.

Do horses have souls? What thoroughbred lover doubts it? Beautiful, tender, brave, loving souls to match their hearts. And in life's great crises, who shall say that the soul of a horse may not shine brighter and finer than that of many a human?

THE fear went completely from Barney Wade's brain. He talked to Black Bullet on the terrible hills, coaxed him on level stretches, handled him with all the skill he had in his power. "We've got to win, Bullet! We've got to! We must!"

And then, at last, the final grade down into the Green River bridge showed ahead. The horse was running on sheer nerve now. Nostrils and eyes were swollen to bursting and his jaw swung open like that of a creature in agony.

Down the long hill came the final effort. Foam-flecked, hoofs beating, rider hugging his neck like a manikin, in 12-foot leaps Black Bullet trod the roadway. And then, scarcely a thousand feet from the bridge on the east came the last great test of all——

Jimmy Shaw's flivver slewed in the sand ruts. In mad haste to get out of the way, the hotel clerk, with wife and baby beside him, succeeded only in turning half-sideways, stalling his engine, blocking the high road.

Sheer momentum would not permit Black Bullet to stop now. On either side were ditches and alders—no room to go around. Dazedly, Barney saw it. And Black Bullet saw, too. The flivver's top was down. In the flicker of an eyelid there was one solution.

Horse and rider took it. They had no alternative. The racer did not slacken. His mad pace increased. Barney crouched low, like an eagle for a swoop.

"Up over it, old lover!"

And Black Bullet went up.

A great snort came. A woman screamed insanely. Something like a midnight avalanche stove straight at the car and then zoomed into space. Without a touch or a click the horse passed over. Thereafter was a dust cloud, the beat of great hoofs on a bridge.

THIS spring at Churchill Downs, Barnaby Wade's "come-back" has made turf history. I am writing this sketch on an afternoon in May. In this noon's New York papers I see several editorial columns given over to Barney Wade's grit. They have much to say about horse sense and man sense in "riding harmony"—"courage and a stout heart"—"will to win"—"determination."

Perhaps it was an epitomization of the best there is in thoroughbred racing, and all that. Perhaps the best there is in sports, because it is visual proof that blood will tell.

But certainly Barnaby Wade would never have been there and handled Golden Bess to victory, and certainly a frenzied girl wife would never have been cheering him, up in the boxes, had not another horse run another derby up in the hills of New England.

Do horses have souls?

Sam Hod says that when Barney came back with Doc Johnson and the ambulance, the first thing Lettie Wade asked on opening her eyes was:

"Where's Black Bullet?"

Barney's face washed with tears. He turned his face away.

"Barney! Barney! Where's Black Bullet?"

No one answered her.

She fainted a little while after that. Johnson applied first aid. She regained consciousness again as they were lifting her into the ambulance.

"Barney," she cried faintly, "what did he do?"

"Saved you, honey," Uncle Joe answered.

They started the ambulance, and Barney rode that course a second time, seated in it.

And all the way down into the village, the half-conscious girl kept repeating:

"He's trotting just behind us, Barney! Can't you hear his hoofbeats? Tell the driver not to go so fast. Somehow . . . Black Bullet's tired . . . he wants to keep up. . . . It's . . so cruelly . . hard."

The WORLD'S MASTER MAN HUNTERS—I

SCOTLAND YARD
and the Mary Ennis Case

When the Police Found Her Strangled in Her Drab London Flat There Were Practically No Clews, for the Crime Had Been Committed by Experts. But There Was a Bit of Clay On the Floor—and That Proved Almost Enough.

No one could possibly tell that instead of admiring herself she was on the lookout in these mirrors for the faces of others.

How the apparently baffling circumstances surrounding the murder of Mary Ennis, a London spinster, finally yielded to the exhaustive crime-detecting methods of Scotland Yard is the subject of the first in a series of master detective stories which will appear in these pages.

Joseph Gollomb, the author of the series, has been given access to the archives of all the great crime-hunting institutions in Europe, and each story will reveal an intimate view of all the methods employed in bringing the criminal to book in each country.

Mr. Gollomb's account of the Mary Ennis case follows:

By JOSEPH GOLLOMB

THIS story begins with a bobby patrolling a residential section of London, neither rich nor poor nor striking in any way, which was the reason an elderly spinster, Mary Ennis, chose to live there. She had reason for living in a colorless way in a colorless part of London, it developed later.

She had a small three-room flat in the upper story of a small brick house in a street full of small brick houses exactly like hers. The ground floor and basement she presumably tried to rent out; but the bobby who patrolled that street decided that she was difficult to please; for he observed that while quite a number of people seemed ready to rent the place, she chose none of them.

She was apparently a recluse, for nobody called on her socially; and only a day servant and delivery boys ever set foot in the house. The bobby on the beat learned these things just as a woman, by everyday study of her face, learns when the first wrinkle arrives. He knew every house on his beat and the familiar aspect of its everyday fronts.

Early one morning when he came on his beat he noticed a slight difference in the aspect of Mary Ennis' house. From the window of the upper story where she lived fluttered the end of a curtain. It was not a startling thing to observe. But it had been raining and, putting this together with the fact that Miss Ennis never kept this window open even on clear nights, the bobby started thinking, which London bobbies do so often that their fame is not surprising.

When, later, therefore, he noticed that Miss Ennis did not take in her morning newspaper and bottle of milk, which it was her habit to take in exactly at 8:30 every morning, he decided to ring her bell. No answer. She may have gone away for a trip, of course. But there was the curtain fluttering in the upper window.

The bobby then tried the front door, the basement door and the back door to her house. He noticed that she had an exceptional number of locks on her doors and very good ones, for all of them held well—except one. This was on the door leading to the basement in the rear.

THE London bobby, like all British police, has a traditional respect for the sanctity of the home against invasion of any kind, and this bobby consulted his Sergeant before entering Mary Ennis' house. When he and his Sergeant did enter they found Mary Ennis strangled in her bed, a little wall safe of exceptional thickness burned open with oxy-acetylene torch, its contents looted and the front window open, with the curtain blowing.

There was no telephone in the room, so the Sergeant remained on the spot while the bobby sprinted to the nearest police box and called up "Scotland Yard," as the world knows it, "New Scotland Yard" as it is semi-officially known, and "C. I. D.," or the "Criminal Invsetigation Department," which is its official name. With a brief but telling description the bobby outlined what he had seen and thereby gave C. I. D. an idea of what men and paraphernalia were to be hurried in a little green motor car to the house of Mary Ennis.

A quarter of an hour later there arrived in Mary Ennis' flat a Divisional Inspector, a fingerprint man, a photographer and a specialist in a certain category of crime hunting. The four men busied themselves for several hours and found the following:

Persons unknown had skillfully picked the rear basement door lock; stolen up the stairs; scotched an up-to-date burglar alarm; strangled the lone occupant—not without a powerful struggle, however; burned out the safe door; opened the front window for some unknown reason; robbed the safe; stopped for a bite of refreshment in her little kitchen; and departed the same way they had come, leaving apparently little or nothing for the police to work on. This meant that the job was done by practiced hands, wearing gloves.

THE hunt for clews seemed barren at first. The fingerprint man sprinkled his black, white and gray powders on every doorknob, door edge, lintel, table, window frame, on walls and closet panels, everywhere a man was likely to rest his hand even for an instant.

He worked away with his delicate camel's hair brush, hoping at every effort that there would remain some fine lines of powder, which, delicate though they are, often hang careless criminals. There were fingerprints enough; but a glance at the finger tips of the mute victim told the Scotland Yard men the imprints were hers.

They did get, however, shreds of imprints that puzzled them. These were left for further study at the Yards. Photographs were also taken of the marks of a jimmy used on the basement lock. The method of forcing entrance into the house was carefully noted.

Then on the rug before the bed was found a bit of dried clay, such as would be left by the stamping of a muddy shoe.

This was not a rich haul for the Scotland Yard men, but they hurried back with it and set the machinery of C. I. D. to work on it.

At once there was instituted one of those searches which to most people would seem the least interesting procedure in the world. Detectives were sent out to find parts of the country where the soil was of such a composition as chemical analysis showed the bit of dried clay to be.

Meanwhile, the victim herself was investigated. It was found that she was a wealthy but suspicion-ridden recluse, who had no faith in banks or brokers. She had converted all her wealth into jewels which she could keep in her little safe and turn them into cash as she needed it. To avert the attention of looters, she chose the colorless neighborhood in which she had lived, and lived alone.

To give her house the air of genteel impecuniousness, she put up a "Rooms to Rent" sign, but found excuse to keep them unrented. She had no relatives the police could find; no friends; and her business relations were confined to the few people who delivered her daily provisions. This line of investigation, therefore, yielded Scotland Yard nothing.

But there is a dark room in the great, square, gloomy structure on the Embankment, where I studied Scotland Yard at work. Into this room there hurried several departmental chiefs with whatever clews had been found in Mary Ennis' room. These five men sat in the pitch dark, while an operator adjusted an apparatus at one end of it.

Suddenly there was the hiss of an electric current through an arc lamp and a vivid white screen was revealed on the wall. On this showed the intense shadows of the operator's fingers as he carefully placed some photographs on the stand of a reflecting apparatus.

Then appeared on the screen the vastly enlarged photographs, the shredlike imprints, the fingerprint man had discovered with his camel's hair brush. What were they?

Five experts in criminal hunting brought their combined intelligence to bear on the peculiar shreds of imprint now so huge on the screen. Finally, their questioning minds agreed on a solution. The men who had murdered Mary Ennis worked in street gloves. On the fingers of one glove there was a seam open, not big enough to attract the attention of the wearer, but enough open to have the pressure of the finger leave a shred of imprint wherever it rested hard.

ONCE this was decided the photographs were hurried off to the Fingerprint Bureau for piecing together and, if possible, identification. Fortunately the seam had shifted with the movement of the hand and the imprint left in several places was not always the same. It was in this same Fingerprint Bureau that the whole scheme of identification by fingerprints was first developed by Sir Edward Henry, a former head of Scotland Yard.

A quarter of a million fingerprints of criminals were assembled there when I saw it; the cards so cleverly arranged that, given a fingerprint, it took only five minutes to locate its counterpart among those 250,000 different records.

The shreds of imprint, when pieced together, gave part of a fingerprint. But it was so small a part that, absolutely individual as fingerprints are—no two individuals in the world give the same imprint — there was too little on which to base an unmistakable identification. The most the bureau could arrive at was to find seven different fingerprints of which the shreds might form a part.

In the dark room again the five experts studied now photographs of the marks made by the chisel or jimmy whereby the murderers forced entrance into Mary Ennis' house. From the archives of the Criminal Investigation Department were brought other photographs taken with a microscope camera lens of chisel marks discovered on other burglary cases. One by one these were compared with the newcomers.

CHISEL edges show as individually ragged under a microscope as the bite of human teeth and can be as significant as fingerprints. But unlike the dents of teeth and the imprints of fingers, the bite of a chisel may change its mark if the chisel meets hard substance. So that here again the council in the dark room could arrive only at an approximate identification.

Meanwhile, in another part of Scotland Yard, under the supervision of a kindly, student type of man, Inspector John Hendry, another line of investigation was being carried on. Inspector Hendry has organized a most interesting system of classification.

One thousand and more different kinds of crimes are here catalogued in classes, from A to Z, subdivided according to the technique employed—arson, burglary, counterfeiting, murder, theft and so on down the alphabet of crime. Under burglary, for instance, there are further subdivisions—armed, bank, cutting bell wires, rear of building entries, killing dog, wears gloves, wears mask, expert in burglar alarms and so on and so forth.

For those of the underworld are as much creatures of habit and specialization as the rest of the world. Here, too, are registered on the records of past crimes any peculiarities discovered in connection with such crimes. The fact, for instance, that a burglar will help himself to food in a house he is looting is a fact so familiar to police that in Inspector Hendry's remarkable catalogue one finds even notes of the particular foods that have appealed to different burglars.

Inspector Hendry, therefore, studied the description of how the murderers broke into Mary Ennis' house; how they had killed her; how they opened the safe; and what they had eaten in her kitchen. No wonder the face of the Scotland Yard man had lit up when he found that two pots of Mary Ennis' jam were consumed. For in Inspector Hendry's records there were a number of burglars who were fond of gooseberry jam.

From the study of the Ennis murderers' method of entry and work, Inspector Hendry proceeded to study other records in his catalogue. Twelve cards were then taken out of their cases and the records on each noted down for comparison.

Suddenly the apparently drunken Dutchman made a lightning move with his right hand toward his pocket and caught a hand in it that didn't belong there.

Meanwhile, from the Fingerprint Bureau had come their seven cards as contribution to possible identifications. Other reports, too, were drifting in from the patiently plodding searchers for the place of origin of the bit of dried mud found in Mary Ennis' room.

From the comparison of the cards bearing possible identities that would match the clews in the Ennis case there resulted a narrowing down of the search. Seven men had records into which might fit the fragments of descriptions.

Then followed another sifting. Of these seven, one was dead. One was in Pentonville Prison at that very moment. One was on parole and his record showed that he was undoubtedly turning over a new leaf. Four remained still possible factors.

One of these four had a sweetheart living near Dorking, as the record showed. Among the places reported as showing a clay composition like that of the bit found on the scene of the murder, Dorking was one. Therefore, Jim Sully, alias "Red" Sully, alias several other names, whose fingerprints might contain the fragment of fingerprint found in the Ennis murder; whose method of dead-of-night burglary was recorded in Scotland Yard as similar to the entry in question; whose fondness for food, especially jam, while at his predatory work was already noted in Inspector Hendry's catalogue; the marks of whose chisel on previous jobs resembled those in the Ennis case—in short, whose whereabouts were unknown, but who had a sweetheart in Dorking, was now studied from the photographs in the rogue's gallery of Scotland Yard.

"He's elected!" the council decided.

Immediately wheels of other parts of the Scotland Yard machine began to whir. At a peculiar looking keyboard a telegraph operator began tapping a key marked "A. S." —meaning "all stations."

IN ALL the various police stations throughout Lodon and suburbs a corresponding tickerlike machine began to click out on a paper tape a typewritten description of Jim Sully, his appearance, his records, his characteristics, some of his habits, the kind of clothes he usually wore, his associates, the places he frequented and other information about him. In half an hour over 20,000 bobbies and other policemen in civilian clothes had his description fresh in mind and the hunt spread wide.

In another part of Scotland Yard, wholly unlike any picture usually connected with a police institution, a miniature newspaper office was at work. Here are published two daily newspapers, one morning, one afternoon, the latter with several editions every day, one biweekly, one weekly and several that are issued as occasion demands.

None of these are for the general public and none for sale. The Morning Report is the morning daily, Printed Information, the afternoon paper. Both are illustrated with photographs and carry the latest news under the following captions: "Wanted for Crime," "In Custody for Crime," "Property Stolen," "Persons or Bodies Found," "Persons Missing" and "Animals Lost or Stolen."

Every Tuesday and Friday there is published, too, in that Scotland Yard newspaper office, the famous Police Gazette, which is sent to the Police Chiefs of every city in the British Empire and to many others. It is, like the others, a modest four-page affair, well illustrated with photographs and has correspondents all over the world. On Tuesday it lays stress on deserters from the army and the Navy; on Fridays it devotes itself exclusively to crime and criminals.

Still another of this string of periodicals is the Illustrated Circular, devoted to the movements of wandering crooks.

Still other periodicals emanating from this unique newspaper office are the Weekly List of Habitual Criminals, devoted to names and descriptions of that gentry just released from prison; the Black List, issued for saloonkeepers and containing names and photographs of those habitual drunkards to whom it is forbidden to sell liquor; the Pawnbrokers' List and the Cycle List, circulated among those likely to give information on stolen goods.

The detailed description, an excellent photograph, full face and profile of Jim Sully, therefore, appeared as the leading story in several of the above newspapers. Bundles of these were thrown into small, closed, green motor cars and hustled to all police stations. Others were mailed throughout the United Kingdom. Thereafter the police had an actual photograph to help them in keeping an interested eye open.

MEANWHILE, in Dorking, a sharp-eyed young woman, known as Kitty Pearce, who seemed to live quietly, but in exceptional comfort, without working, kept her keen eyes and wits about her. Wherever she went she made it her practice to look into shop windows. Now, that is not a remarkable practice for young women.

What was remarkable, however, did not meet the eye. For this young woman's gaze, while seemingly and naturally straying toward whatever mirrors the shop windows contained, was rarely concentrated on the image of her pretty self. No one could possibly tell that instead of admiring herself she was on the lookout in those mirrors for the faces of others. She saw no face that she remembered seeing often enough to arouse her suspicion.

Nevertheless, Scotland Yard was on her trail; and if a bright intelligence like hers did not recognize the fact, it was due to Scotland Yard's system of shadowing. Detective A was the first to follow Kitty Pearce. Behind him trailed Detective B. Behind the latter followed Detective C.

Only A, however, kept his eyes on Kitty. But when he saw her keen interest in shop windows he was not deceived. So, before his face should become familiar, he gave a secret sign and dropped out of sight. At once Detective B hurried forward and took his place. He, too, knew the real reason why Miss Kitty preened herself so often in shop windows.

So that he stayed only a short while on her trail and soon gave the secret sign to Detective C and in turn dropped out of sight. In this way none of the Scotland Yard men appeared often enough within range of Kitty's eyes to arouse even her alert suspicion.

But the Scotland Yard sh- owers got lit tle out of their assiduous following of Kitty. This, however, did not mean that she and her lover were out of touch with each other. Both were experienced in the art of communication in spite of police surveillance.

tle out of their assiduous following of Kitty. This, however, did not mean that she and her lover were out of touch with each other. Both were experienced in the art of communication in spite of police surveillance.

Not more fruitful were similar stealthy doggings of several other men and women, marked on Scotland Yard records as friends and associates of Jim Sully. Instead of feeling that luck was against them, however, Scotland Yard took these failures as part of their average percentage of success.

Finally, Scotland Yard chiefs decided that if they could not catch up with Jim Sully it might be worth trying to get Jim Sully to come to them. Into the council room at the Yard one morning there were summoned half a dozen detectives, chosen for their phlegmatic appearance.

A sort of amateur theatrical performance was then staged. Each of the six were given the same part to play—that of a Dutchman interested in picking up bargains in jewels and no questions asked. He was told that he was in the company of gentry among whom there were possibilities of trade, and was asked to act accordingly.

OF THESE six one was chosen as best in the role. From the council room this operator went to the makeup room of Scotland Yard. The days when detectives used false beards and mustaches have passed even in cheapest detective fiction. But that does not mean that disguises are not employed in Scotland Yard. Indeed, never before have disguises and the assuming of roles been so widely and effectively used as today in Scotland Yard work. But the disguises are those of character rather than of face.

In the makeup room one finds none of the paraphernalia of the dressing room of the theater, no wigs, paints, costumes or "props" in the stage meaning of the word. But one does find there a remarkable collection of photographs.

They are of bricklayers and bookmakers, of plumbers and ministers, of Salvation Army soldiers and of receivers of stolen goods; of cheap stock company actors, undertakers, beggars, perfumed gentlemen of leisure and the dance, of barkeepers, doctors, electricians, truck drivers, newspaper dealers, peddlers and hundreds of other types that make up the myriad swarm in everyday London.

From this collection the prospective detective-actor selects photographs of several originals of the role he is to assume. Our man picked to play the Dutch receiver of stolen jewels found half a dozen photographs to study. He carefully noted the characteristic clothing of the type; the cut of the hair; the presence or absence of ornament.

Finally Detective—let us call him X—felt that he knew what he wanted next. At a tailor's he had a suit made after certain minute description. At the conclusion of some telephoning between Scotland Yard chiefs and a leading London jeweler Detective X, now clad in the loud garb of a Dutchman in more than flourishing circumstances, issued from the swagger jewelry shop with a blazing diamond ring on one finger, several emeralds on another, a great gold watch chain and resplendent watch and charm, a huge black pearl in his cravat and a diamond stud in his shirt bosom.

In the office of Frederick Thomas, Superintendent of the Central Office of Scotland Yard, I saw a big iron safe, and when its doors swung open I caught a glimpse of considerable sums of gold and money.

When a detective goes out on a bit of hunting that may require money those doors swing open and without any further red tape as large a sum is handed over to the detective for emergency use as he may need—and more added for good measure. Detective X was now given a roll of Bank of England notes big enough to cause palpitation of the heart to most people.

Then Detective X, resplendent in garb and jewelry, went to a flashy sporting hotel and engaged a resplendent suite of rooms for himself, under the name of "Hendrik Oomstadt, Amsterdam and New York." That evening he sallied forth to several cafes and dancing resorts where the upper and under worlds touch boundaries.

AFTER a bit of solitary drinking—for each round he paid showily out of his elephantine roll of bills—he became exceedingly hospitable and invited several favored individuals to drink with him. These individuals responded less with alacrity than with caution. They seemed more interested in the man than in his hospitality.

Suddenly the apparently drunken Dutchman made a lightning move with his right hand toward his pocket and caught a hand in it that did not belong there, a light-fingered hand belonging to a slim young man. There was an instantaneous scuffle and the Dutchman's other guests rose and surrounded him. But his other hand was rammed deep in his pocket and that pocket bulged significantly. The bulge had a circular tip to it.

"Yust you fellows keep away from my money!" the Dutchman growled. "I don't want the ponless, not py a tamn, but I don't want no trouble from you neither. If you want my money, you got to gif me something I want for it, see?"

"Just what is it you want for your money, Dutchy?" asked a keen-eyed man.

The film of drink left the Dutchman's eyes.

"Vell, I like to wear lots und lots of chewelry, as you can see," he said, looking the other straight and significantly in the eyes. "Und so long as the chewelry is goot and handsome I pays goot prices und asks no questions. See?"

The other "saw." He took off a ring of modest value and handed it over. "How about this?" he asked the Dutchman.

The other's face expressed deep disgust. "I said 'chewelry,' not drinkets! If you got something wort' while bothering with, call on me at the Sporting Arms Inn."

TWO days later the keen-eyed young fellow called on the Dutchman at the hotel and offered for sale a ring, this time of more impressive value. It was honestly bought of a respectable jeweler, though not necessarily with honestly acquired money.

But the Dutchman was being tested. He drove a knowing bargain, paying less for it than the keen-eyed man had paid for it. But the latter seemed satisfied, as it was a good price for a "fence" or receiver of stolen goods to pay.

For two weeks the Dutchman was shadowed by various gentry. Then, as his movements seemed to be satisfactory to prospective customers, there came to him one day by way of the keen-eyed man, several pieces of jewelry for sale, of rather considerable value. The look of phlegm on the Dutchman's face was a bit of art; for he recognized the jewels from a description he had been carrying about with him.

"Pretty goot!" the Dutchman said. "But I'm leafing soon und I am keeping my money for some big deal or another. I'm after some goot collection and I don't want to divide my money in several leedle bits."

The other pondered a while. "I think I can put you next to something good—if you're going far from England after you buy it," he said. "A friend of mine has it."

"Vell, I haf to haf it pretty quick, as I leave day after tomorrow. Better bring your friend here, so we don't lose time."

The other's eyes narrowed slightly. "No, I will bring it myself."

The Dutchman shrugged his shoulders. "Makes no difference who brings it, so long as I see it before I sail for Australia day after tomorrow."

The other man returned that afternoon with an impressive collection of jewelry. In the privacy of the Dutchman's room—with the windows heavily curtained—the Dutchman, after a long examination, offered a price too good to turn down without discussion, but too low to accept without a consultation with the "owner" of the jewels. And with true Dutch obstinacy he held to his offer. The other debated with himself for awhile. Then, going to the window, he raised the shade and lowered it twice.

FIVE minutes later there was a knock on the door and a heavy-shouldered man entered in reply to the "Come in!" His quick, green eyes darted about the room, noting each door and closet. He was introduced to the Dutchman as "Mr. Smith." The Dutchman and Mr. Smith then entered into some close and expert bargaining.

Suddenly, without a knock, a young fellow burst into the room. Mr. Smith and his friend, the keen-eyed man, sprang to their feet and clapped their hands on their hip pockets. But the newcomer paid no attention to them.

"Mr. Oomstadt, Mr. Oomstadt!" he gasped. "There's a lot of men coming up the stairs to get you, and I'm afraid they're going to search you!"

Mr. Oomstadt leaped up, his face working with alarm. "How many?" he gasped. "Are they armed, Hans?"

"Four, and I think they are!"

Mr. Oomstadt seemed to have forgotten his visitors. Down the corridor came the sound of heavy feet.

"They mustn't find anything on me!" Oomstadt gasped, thrusting the jewels back into Smith's hands.

Smith seemed equally anxious. "Nor on me, by cripes!" he growled. "Nor my gun, nor yours, Jerry!"

With lightning speed he thrust the jewels and the two revolvers, his own and Jerry's, into a large brass cuspidor and replaced the cover. But he remained near it.

After an imperious knock five serious, powerful men entered. A look flashed between Oomstadt and their leader.

"Jim Sully, you're under ar—" the leader began.

Like the strike of a snake Jim Sully shot his hand to the cuspidor to reach for his revolver. But Oomstadt knocked him to the floor and a moment later two men had pinned Sully and his friend and had them handcuffed.

Two months later the two were expiating the murder of Mary Ennis.

You will not find this case recorded in Scotland Yard as one of remarkable achievement; it is much nearer in type to the sort of thing that is usual grist to the Scotland Yard machine. Which is the reason I chose it rather than many others I know, that read like fiction but are not. "A good wine needs no bush," runs an old English saying. And the Scotland Yard machine needs no exceptional tricking out to justify its fame.

THOSE great springing arches of gray stone which were the first bond between the states of Illinois and Missouri and which for more than 50 years have carried their daily traffic of thousands have been painted by Frank Nuderscher, St. Louis painter and St. Louis born, and are reproduced in his picture "Eads Bridge," by courtesy of the City Art Museum, which exhibited the picture in its Annual Exhibit of the Work of American Painters. The massive dominance of the great structure has been given life upon the canvas by the artist's brush. The steamboat is but a dwarf as it lies in the shadow of the bridge. Bales of cotton upon the levee, barrels of apples, are but a memory of what was before the building of the bridge and the construction of railways brought an end to steamboat days. Nuderscher was born in St. Louis July 19, 1880. He is self-taught and is a member of the St. Louis Artists' Guild and the 2x4 Society. Several of his Mississippi River scenes hang in the Chamber of Commerce and his painting "The Great Crossing," is in the State Capitol of Missouri at Jefferson City.

Rolling hills and valleys that suggest the foothills of the Ozarks form the subject of E. Oscar Thalinger's "Landscape," reproduced by courtesy of the City Art Museum, from that institution's recent exhibition of the work of American painters. Thalinger was born in Alsace-Lorraine, March 30, 1885. He studied in the St. Louis School of Fine Arts under Wuerpel, Stoddard and Campbell, and later was a pupil of Gruber in Munich. He is on the official staff of the City Art Museum, in charge of its installations. Not a frequent exhibitor in local galleries, his work is always marked by a fine poetic quality and by its symphonic colorings. An interesting feature of this landscape is the village-like group of buildings in the lower right.

Painters Flock to Venice

THE winter's rush of painters to Venice was so great this year that "Sunrise in the Piazza San Marco" is likely to be one of the most popular pictures of the season; for to get a good seat the struggling artist has to be up with the birds. As the day wears on, however, most of the colony turns its attention to the crowd, and one can imagine the cries of "How picturesque!" and "Isn't that an interesting type!" that go up from a group which presents a more exotic as well as a more absurd appearance than anything it is immortalizing on canvas. An Italian observer has remarked that long hair is going out of style, but that spectacles are decidedly in vogue. Some of the artists wear cotton jackets instead of shirts, short pants instead of trousers, and sandals instead of the regulation shoes, socks and spats. At a respectful distance stands a throng of curious spectators commenting in many languages and from many points of view on the work of the painters.

On one occasion a native son was so disgusted at the way his beautiful city was being desecrated that he protested to the artist, who, needless to say, understood not a word of Italian and merely shrugged his shoulders. The loyal native son, deciding to take the gesture as an insult, picked up one of the stones of Venice and hurled it through the picture. The incident came to a close in the local police station, or, as they say over there, questura.—From The Living Age.

The Apaches of Paris

APACHES are made, not born, says a writer of Parisian Snapshots in La Stampa of Turin. At the beginning of his career the Apache is usually a country vagabond who has come to Paris in hope of better fortune. The third night after his arrival he is reduced to lodging under the stars. Strangely enough, the lack of a bed is invariably more conducive to crime than lack of food. His debut is very mild and innocent—a small fraud. Instead of his own carte d'identite, where note has been made of his expulsion from a night asylum for lack of funds, he shows at another lodging house the carte of his companion. He is not received at every place even with these false documents, and, trying to find a shelter, he thus is given his first lessons in Paris topography—indispensable knowledge for an aspirant Apache. During these first wanderings he also makes a number of Apache acquaintances. These are generous companion; they lend money—not always enough to have supper, but enough to get drunk in any case. Thus the would-be Apache enlivens his leisurely course zigzagging from one asylum to another, his hands in his pockets. His mind begins to build castles in the air. By hook or crook he gets a weapon. From this to becoming an active Apache is but one more step. The young disciple is taken to a tavern whose atmosphere is exciting in the last degree and where his rustic eyes are dazzled to distraction. There he sees Apaches of both sexes and all varieties, but none as admirable and extraordinary as the sidi—the Arab from Algiers. The sidis are the only Apaches who enjoy the privilege of using firearms, and they employ them freely. There is also, in every self-respecting Apache tavern, a Negro customer who tells long, drunken stories of his achievements, showing his dazzling white teeth.

"And what are the police doing about it?" concludes the writer, and answers his own question: "Why, the police—they're the police!"

"Can he really play?" a girl whispered. "Heavens, no!" Arthur exclaimed. "He never played a note in his life."

They Laughed When I Sat Down At the Piano But When I Started to Play!—

ARTHUR had just played "The Rosary." The room rang with applause. Then, to the amazement of all my friends, I strode confidently over to the piano and sat down.

"Jack is up to his old tricks," somebody chuckled. The crowd laughed. They were all certain that I couldn't play a single note.

"Can he really play?" I heard a girl whisper to Arthur.

"Heavens, no!" Arthur exclaimed. "He never played a note in all his life."

I decided to make the most of the situation. With mock dignity, I drew out a silk handkerchief and lightly dusted off the piano keys. Then I rose and gave the revolving piano stool a quarter of a turn. The crowd laughed merrily.

Instantly a tense silence fell on the guests. I played the first few bars of Liszt's Immortal Liebestraum. I heard gasps of amazement. My friends sat breathless—spellbound! I played on.

A Complete Triumph!

As the last notes of the Liebestraum died away the room resounded with a sudden roar of applause. I found myself surrounded by excited faces. Everybody was plying me with rapid questions.

"Jack! Why didn't you tell us you could play like that?" . . . "Where did you learn?" . . . "Who was your teacher?"

"I have never even seen my teacher," I replied.

I have been studying only a short while, I insisted. I kept it a secret so that I could surprise you folks.

How I Learned to Play Without a Teacher

Then I told them the whole story.

"It seems just a short while ago that I saw an ad of the U. S. School of Music—mentioning a new method of learning to play which cost only a few cents a day! The ad told how a woman had mastered the piano in her spare time at home—and without a teacher. The method she used required no laborious scales or exercises. It sounded so convincing that I filled out the coupon requesting the Free Demonstration Lesson.

"It arrived promptly, and I started in that very night to study it. I was amazed to see how easy it was to play this new way. I sent for the course and found it was easy as A B C. Before I knew it I could play ballads or classical numbers or jazz, with equal ease! And I never did have any special talent for music!"

Play Any Instrument

You, too, can now learn music—right at home—in half the usual time. You cannot go wrong with this simple, new method which has already shown almost half a million people how to play their favorite instruments. Forget that old-fashioned idea that you need special talent. Read the list of instruments in the panel, decide which one you want to play. The U. S. School of Music will do the rest.

The Army's New Chief of Staff, and How He Learned the Game

Major-General Charles P. Summerall Has Campaigned in China, the Philippines, and France. He is a Strict Disciplinarian, but Human.

By EMMA JAQUELIN
Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

WHO can tell just how much romance, sentiment, tradition may weigh in a man's selection of a career? And though these emotional elements may seem far removed from his ultimate choice, they have perhaps swayed him to a final decision.

No man knows how far his deeds of valor may inspire another generation, and if he who comes after has zeal, character and genius combined with such an inspiration, there is no need for him to stop short of the heights.

One can be convinced, after learning the brilliant military achievements and something of the life story of the new Chief of Staff of the United States Army, that it was this rare combination which made him "hitch his wagon to a star."

Major-General Charles Pelot Summerall, who succeeds Major-General John H. Hines as "official adviser" to the War Department, will, according to his friends both in the Army and out, "make things pop" when he gets his new work in hand. He is a man of initiative and action at all times. But he is, at the same time, a sympathetic student of men and court-martial records are not of so much interest to him as the personal character of the man.

A recent trip to Governor's Island, where he leaves the command of the Second Corps Area, was preceded by a very decided thrill when the Commanding General's voice, the same that has directed thousands of men in battle, came very clear and deep over the telephone between New York and the island, with instructions for one person to "take the Government boat and come over."

AS THE boat nosed into the dock a very tall aide met it and personally conducted the visitor up the hill onto a roadway and walk between two impressive hedges that led to the low building where the Commanding General's offices are located. A very cordial greeting and warm handshake of the Chief of Staff gave an immediate sense of ease.

Here was a General who had known the bitterest of military struggles, the fiercest fighting, the most grilling experiences in war, who had seen hundreds of men die through carrying out his orders, who had been put to every test of the competent military executive, who had a record that required volumes to tell it and citations that make a long roll of honor.

By every preconceived idea of a weathered fighter, Major-General Summerall should have appeared stern, war-scarred, grizzled, hard, grim. Instead, one saw, on this visit, a man of commanding figure, somewhat above the average height in splendid, rugged health. One was conscious of a man with fine features, young, with the youth of fresh, unseamed skin, clear, frank and very blue eyes and a kindly smile and manner. In short, a man at the height of his powers.

But while the brilliant, outstanding deeds in his military career are well known and have had much written about them, the marvel is that few persons seem to know of the other side, the human side, of this man. He has been called a stern disciplinarian (he early learned the value of discipline), and if that is so the discipline begins with himself. Asked what he considered most important in the making of a good soldier, his answer shot out without an instant's hesitation.

"To put the very best he has into his work and to do his duty no matter how fierce the struggle."

This was said with a deeply serious feeling. That his mental attitude is that of an intense patriot there can be no room for doubt.

Major-General Charles P. Summerall.

CHARLES PELOT SUMMERALL was born in the little town of Lake City, Florida, on March 4, 1867, when talk of the Civil War was very much alive. As a small boy he heard many stories of soldiery, though he did not belong to an army family. Like other gentlefolk round about, his family, after being impoverished by the misfortunes of war, was obliged to look for some field of employment, and most of them chose to be educators. And it was to this profession, he expected to gravitate.

Young Summerall was sent to Dr. Porter's Military Academy in Charleston, South Carolina, to complete his education. He then went to Leesburg, Florida, to teach, but a penchant for the army influenced him to add to his labors the rigorous study for the examination for West Point. He entered the United States Military Academy and in his senior year received the highest class honor, that of being appointed "First Captain." He was 21 when he was graduated.

How did General Summerall happen to choose a military career?

"Partly from taste and inclination," he says, "and partly, perhaps, through a well-known family sentiment, which I heard many, many times. That to live a worthy life and die a noble death was the highest any man might hope to achieve. The army, to my mind, offered me the best chance."

IT IS not often that a great capacity for administration and breadth of vision and an ability to follow minute detail are so well combined as is shown in the life work of Major-General Summerall. His fearless initiative and boundless faith in the ability of his men to achieve what he laid out for them and his success in making happen what he ordered to happen earned for him the title of "Per Shegdule Summerall."

As he sits at his great desk, well covered with work, the title seems to suit as appropriately his peace-time pursuits as those in active service.

"It is necessary for me to block out my work about two months ahead in order to get it done," he said. "When I am not at work on my regular duties I am obliged to prepare for speaking engagements."

And although a soldier is often described as a man of action and few words, the General has had evidence, both in war (when, unlike most commanders, he talked constantly with his men, explaining in detail just what they had to face), and in peace, that the best results are not always gained by working in silence.

Asked about his personal tastes, the General replied:

"Why, I am interested in everything. I read on all topics and read continuously. But I am deprived of the pleasure of reading for diversion or reading the lighter literature from which, no doubt, I should get much enjoyment. My time is so limited that my reading must be done for study.

"I have never had time for sports, except, of course, riding. But that gives me the benefit of the out-of-doors and is the only form of sport I have ever been able to indulge in."

The War Department, in short, crisp sentences, robbed of all dramatic effect and glamorous details, tells of the exploits and work of Major-General Charles P. Summerall. And it takes ten whole pages of typed foolscap.

He served first in the Infantry, but shortly was transferred to the Artillery at the Presidio of San Francisco and ordered to various posts in the different states.

His first foreign service was at the outbreak of the insurrection in the Philippines, when he made a dash and a "little reconnoitre" into a decisive victory, for which he was recommended for brevet by Congress. He had been made a First Lieutenant two years before.

HE TOOK part in the Boxer campaign in China with the celebrated Reilly's Battery, and he cherishes the ragged flag in the chapel at Governor's Island. The report says, in the words of Major-General Adna R. Chaffee, the General in command: "Lieutenant Summerall was directed to open the gates to the 'Forbidden City,' which he did."

"He did" by climbing each one of the four gates, under fire, placing a chalk mark on the tremendous steel bar where he thought it might break and, bringing the artillery up within ten feet, blowing them open—this with full knowledge that the load might rebound and blow him and his men to pieces.

Next, "ordered" to Alaska, where there was threatened trouble. Settled that and planned construction of Fort William H. Steward."

Peace-time work then was at Chickamauga Park and as senior instructor at West Point. Promoted to Major and assigned to Fort Meyer, Virginia. Located artillery range at Tobyhanna, Pa.

From 1914 to 1917 he was on duty in the Military Bureau of the War Department, he was promoted to Lieutenant-Colonel in 1916 and Colonel in 1917. In May of that year he was sent to Great Britain and France to study the British and French armies. In August, appointed Brigadier-General of the National Army and assigned command of the Sixty-seventh Field Artillery Brigade of the Forty-second Division. In December, he took command of the First Artillery Brigade of the First Division. His were the first American troops to hold a sector. The report: "When the German drive began in March, 1918, the First Division proceeded to Picardy, where it took over the Cantigny sector. In May Cantigny was captured as a result of the first American offensive."

JUNE of 1918 saw General Summerall promoted again to Major-General, and he was assigned to the First Division, which he commanded during the terrific fighting at Soissons and around St. Mihiel, where heroic effort was required and all the division's objectives were taken. He again commanded in the first phase of the Meuse-Argonne. General Summerall was then promoted to the command of the First Army Corps, which occupied the center of the American line.

The corps was distinguished for its rapid and overwhelming advances from then until the armistice. General Summerall commanded successively the Fifth Army Corps in France and the Fourth in Germany. He was one of the American Generals invited to be present at Versailles at the signing of the treaty of peace and returned to the United States with General Pershing in September, 1919. He commanded posts in the different states and was made a Brigadier-General and a Major-General in the regular army. He assumed command of the Hawaiian Department, after which he succeeded Major-General Robert Bullard at Governor's Island.

"For his courage and great disregard of his own safety;" for "clear judgment, meritorious service and soldierly conduct"; for "developing the technical knowledge and valor of his division" he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and the Distinguished Service Medal and the French Croix de Guerre with palm.

The American commander was decorated as commander of the Legion of Honor in France, Grand Officer of the Crown by Belgium, Commander of the Order of the Crown by Italy, the Order of Prince Danilo by Montenegro and with the Military Medal by Panama.

General Summerall also wears the Spanish-American War badge, the Philippine campaign badge with two silver stars, representing citations for gallantry in action; the Chinese campaign badge with two silver stars and the World War Campaign Badge with five palms for "major operations."

HENRIETTA KOENIG

"CONSTIPATION had troubled my daughter Henrietta practically since birth. Three years ago I myself started to eat Fleischmann's Yeast for indigestion. Discovering that it was a good regulator I gave it to Henrietta. It soon stopped her constipation, and she is never bothered with it now. She eats Yeast at morning and at bedtime. Three of my other children (all but the baby) also eat Fleischmann's Yeast. It cleanses their systems, wards off constipation and keeps them all pictures of health."

Mrs. George L. Koenig, Newark, N. J.

"FOR MANY YEARS I SUFFERED FROM CONSTIPATION, due to my method of living. I am something of a soldier of fortune, having lived in nearly every country of the planet. A friend in the Antipodes advised Fleischmann's Yeast. Those cakes kept me in the pink of condition and my constipation is gone."

Thomas Stapleton, San Francisco, Calif.

Theirs · the confidence of health

Once victims of stubborn ills—they regained energy, ambition, health—by eating one simple fresh food ·

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active, daily releasing new stores of energy.

Eat two or three cakes regularly every day, one before each meal: on crackers, in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, in small pieces. For constipation dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. Dangerous habit-forming cathartics will gradually become unnecessary. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days.

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-924, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York.

"I BECAME BADLY RUN DOWN. As a ballet dancer, the demands on my energy were too great. Tonics afforded little relief. Then I was advised to try Fleischmann's Yeast. Soon I noticed a remarkable improvement. My energy is now completely restored and I feel entirely well."

Harriette G. Bendle, Chicago, Ill.

"I HAD BEEN TROUBLED WITH BOILS for some time. After numerous remedies had failed to relieve me I was advised by a friend to try Fleischmann's Yeast. This I did, and at the end of two months I was completely rid of my affliction."

Mabel C. MacKenzie, St. Peters, Nova Scotia

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion, clears the skin, banishes constipation.

"FOR THIRTY-FIVE YEARS I HAD BEEN A VICTIM OF INDIGESTION. Whenever I ate rich food my whole alimentary tract seemed poisoned. Then I began eating Fleischmann's Yeast—three cakes daily. In a short time I began to improve. Now I can indulge myself with anything I wish to eat."

J. A. Ritchey, Baltimore, Md.

Smiles Really Count

When Teeth are Free of Film

Smiles are Dazzling White When Film is Gone. Teeth Sparkle Like Polished Jewels

SEND FOR 10-DAY FREE TUBE

THAT many of the commoner tooth and gum troubles, and most cases of so-called "off-color" teeth, are due to a film that forms on teeth which ordinary brushing does not successfully combat, is the consensus of today's dental opinion.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel this film—a slippery sort of coating. Film absorbs discolorations and thus makes teeth look dull and dingy. It breeds germs and bacteria and invites tartar, decay and pyorrhea. It is a menace to tooth and gum health that must be combated.

Thus dental authorities now seriously urge that film be removed at least twice every day—in the morning and at bedtime. To do so, obtain Pepsodent—a special, film-removing dentifrice most dentists favor. It curdles the film, then removes it and polishes the teeth to high lustre in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay. It acts, too, to firm and harden the gums; thus meeting, in many ways, the requirements of modern findings.

Old-time dentifrices did not adequately fight film. That is why this modern protective way, as a twice a day habit, and at least twice a year calls on your dentist, are being so widely advised today.

Accept this test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage Pepsodent into the gums to firm and harden them.

SMILES ARE DAZZLING WHITE when film is gone. Teeth sparkle like polished jewels. Gums firm to healthy coral tint. Thus this new scientific way of dental care becomes one of the greatest beauty treatments of the day, and, with its unique therapeutic and prophylactic qualities, a great aid in oral hygiene.

One of Victims of Latest Flareup of Illinois Feud Believed to Be Steve George, Caretaker.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MARION, Ill., Jan. 10.—Standing beside the smoking ruins of his fortified roadhouse, "Shady Rest," 10 miles east of Marion, Charley Birger, Williamson County gang leader, today told Coroner Bell that he believed only three persons had perished in the attack on the place early yesterday morning.

Birger was accompanied by Art Newman, who left "Shady Rest" just an hour before the place was machine gunned, dynamited and fired. Birger and Newman are the Government's chief witnesses against the three Shelton brothers of East St. Louis, Birger's arch enemies, on charges of robbing a mail messenger of $15,000 at Collinsville on Jan. 27, 1925, which will be tried at Springfield Jan. 24.

Only Three Persons in Place.

The gang leader told the Coroner today that as far as he knew the only occupants of the house after Newman and other visitors departed Saturday night were Steve George, the gold-toothed machine gunner and caretaker of the place, George's wife, and a youth about 17 years old, whom Birger had "picked up" and maintained when he found the boy wandering about the streets at Harrisburg. The boy was an orphan and his name is not known, Birger said.

On the strength of this statement the Coroner revised his previous opinion and declared that he believed only three bodies had been found in the fire. The charred remains that have been recovered are so completely burned that it has been impossible to determine even the sex of the victims and the Coroner said it is as likely that the remains represent three bodies as four.

Newman, a former East St. Louis saloon keeper, who was in Marion yesterday afternoon with his wife, told the Post-Dispatch correspondent that he and Mrs. Newman left "Shady Rest" shortly after 11 o'clock Saturday night. It was only an hour later that a heavy explosion wrecked the rendezvous and fire reduced it to ashes.

Sheltons Are After Newman.

As a friend of Birger and an enemy of the Sheltons, Newman has kept close to "Shady Rest" since it became known that he was to be a witness against the Sheltons—Carl, Earl and Bernie—when they are called for trial at Springfield. In connection with this case Birger has charged that the Sheltons are trying to kill Newman and him and has also declared that he was seeking to kill Carl Shelton, the only one of the brothers now out on bond.

Newman and his wife, who was wounded last fall when Shelton gangsters fired on her and Newman near "Shady Rest," told the correspondent that they had been living at the roadhouse for several days.

"We dropped in at the roadhouse Saturday evening," Newman said. "After staying there a while we left a few minutes after eleven. Everything was peaceful at that time."

Mrs. Newman added that there were five persons at the roadhouse when she and Newman left. Besides George and his wife, she named Jack Crews and Elmo Thompson of West Frankfort and Jimmie Sims of Harrisburg. She did not mention the orphan who Birger thinks lost his life. Inquiry today by Chief of Police Byrn of West Frankfort disclosed the information that Crews and Thompson were still alive. A policeman in West Frankfort reported seeing Crews last night, and Thompson's brother today reported that Thompson was safe. Harrisburg officials had information that Sims is alive.

Guns, Shots; Autos Speed Away.

The crackling of a machine gun, the jarring explosions, the glare of flames on lowering clouds, the spitting exhaust of two automobiles as they sped westward from "Shady Rest"—that was all that terrified farmers saw or heard
